The weekly Friday night Young People's meeting was in the form of a visit to the Planetarium in Edmonton. Our young people, numbering 25, were then guests of the Park Allen Baptist Young People, where a film and lunch was enjoyed. Rev. Grymulaski, Richard Sorenson, John Kvill and Art Bergerson supplied the transportation.

Expansion Ahead
Canada's economy is likely to expand by at least a third by 1975 according to the Bank of Montreal in its Business Review for January.

"How soon such an expansion will get under way is difficult to predict, but it seems reasonable to expect a very sizeable increase in Canadian output between now and the end of the current decade," the BM of M review states.

The review is based on remarks made recently to the Empire Club of Canada, Toronto, by G. Arnold Hart, president and chief executive officer of the bank.

"An increase on this scale means adding to Canada's current output almost the equivalent of the present production of Ontario (or) it is the equivalent of adding each year between now and 1970 the production of an industry the size of our pulp and paper industry. This is a tall order, but it is well within the realms of possibility," Mr. Hart said.

NOT AUTOMATIC

But the B of M warns that, although signs now indicate another surge of activity, prosperity will not "fall into our laps ... If we just sat back and do nothing."

"Implicit in the Bank of Montreal forecast is a continuing policy of aggressive salesmanship in foreign markets," the bank continues. Noting the substantial increase in the value of exports during the past 3 years, the review observes that the recent special sales of grain did not account for all of the improved export performance which was extremely encouraging.

"The pegging of the Canadian dollar at a lower value in terms of the other currencies has also played a part and there is growing evidence that the efforts of Canadian businessmen to find new markets can be successful."

Mr. Hart's text continues, "We have only just begun to scratch the surface of opportunities in foreign markets for Canadian goods."

Canada should also maintain "a cliimate receptive to foreign capital" the B of M says, pointing out "policies which seek to discourage an inflow of short-term capital would seriously hamper our efforts to achieve the economic gains projected."

FISCAL DISCIPLINE

The B of M also advocates discipline in fiscal responsibility, as an aid in keeping Canada competitive in world markets.

Although there are important areas where a greater amount of public funds could be usefully employed, the bank says, "in the present circumstances, when tax reductions rather than increases would seem to be more appropriate, it seems that proposals for enlarging the scope of government expenditure ought to receive very close scrutiny."

Productivity of Canadian industry has been increased but "much more remains to be done if we are to achieve the fullest and most efficient utilization of our resources, both human and material."

Wedding Bells
RICHARDSON — CHRISTENSON

Baskets of beautiful flowers graced the St. John's Anglican Church for the wedding of Vivian Kathleen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Christenson to Gregory Rankyn, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Richardson, all of Sedgewick, on Friday, December 6th, 1963. Rev. Canon Crawley of Viking performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to strains of wedding music played by Mrs. D. Bloom. For her wedding the bride chose winter white wool suit with pink accessories. She carried a shower of pink roses on a satin covered prayer book, gift of her father. The groom's gift to the bride was a black diamond necklace and earring set.

The bride chose as her attendants her cousin Phyllis Ekman of Coronation as first bridesmaid. The other attendant was Nadine Hart of Vermilion, niece of the groom. They were identical gowns of blue and gold taffeta. Their headpieces were of net with matching fabric flower and white gloves. They carried nosegays of roses and carnations.

The groom was attended by his brother Garry and bride's eldest brother Harold. The ushers were the bride's brother Dennis and Byron Hart, nephew of the groom.

As the young couple were signing the register, Mrs. Olive O'Neill, the bride's cousin, sang, "I'll Walk Beside You."

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Christenson chose a teal blue double knit suit with white accessories and amber rose corsage. Mrs. Richardson, groom's mother, chose a teal blue knit dress with matching jacket and red accessories. Her corsage was white roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Prince of Peace Chapel. The bride's table was laid with a handembroidered table cloth centered with a three-tier wedding cake. M. C. was Mr. Darrel Richardson. Capt. Hoomy proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom ably responded.

Massive Exposure To T. V.

We hear so much these days about the effects of massive exposure to television viewing, both good & evil, that it is difficult to assess the situation. In this regard though we believe that the Canadian Home and School and the Parent-Teacher Federation is on the right track in attempting to find out, through research, just what television is doing to Canadian children. The Federation is sending to every federal member of Parliament, a reprint of a magazine article, "What TV Violence Can Do To Your Child". The M. P's. will be reminded at the same time that over the past 3 years the Federation has been pressing the Board of Broadcast Governors and the C.B.C., without effect, to undertake comprehensive research to find out exactly what TV is doing to Canadian children.

"A mighty unassessed force is changing our children and thereby changing the future of our world, says Dr. M. Bedford, president of the 900,000- member Federation and a lecturer in research at Teachers' College in Saskatoon. "Canadian children spend about one-sixth of the waking hours watching TV. This massive exposure to a supercharged world of fantasy, dramatic stimulation, violence and commercial persuasion moulds the personalities and behaviour of children in a subtle, but highly significant way. Canada must find out exactly what TV is doing to our youth. This can be done. But only by long-term, continuing research. We suggest a minimum budget of one-tenth of one percent of the Parliamentary grants to the CBC (say $70,000.00 annually)."

The BBG and CBC have told ,in effect, that they have no money to spend on this type of research, but that studies made in other countries will be watched. Our CBC has some $70 million of public money for each year to operate a service that has the power to effect for good or ill, the behavious, beliefs, morals and ambitions of Canadian children, yet they say that they are not able to spend a cent of that money to find out what, in fact, is resulting.

There is much to be said in favor of TV, and no doubt the Home and School is among those who have commended the CBC on the excellence of some of its programs. Even an ordinary program may help to develop a child's vocabulary, and bring to him an understanding of the far-off places and events. Even mothers will know the pacifying effects of TV. But on the other hand,the latest study by Stanford University psychologist Albert Bandura, Ph. D. confirms the fear that children are strongly influenced by the aggressive characters they watch on television, who slug, stomp, shoot and stab one another. Scenes of brutality do not impel viewers to immediate violence them selves, but inhibitions against aggressive behaviour are reduced. Besides this, forms of aggression are taught, so that if a comparable situation arises, the actual methods learned from watching violence on the screen are far more likely to be used. If more switch-blade stabbings are shown on TV, more schoolboys will produce knives in moments of anger and fear.

There are of course, many other suspected dangers from massive exposure to TV. These are some of the questions for which there are as yet inedequate answers:

Are children becoming so accustomed to a heightened level of excitement that they tend to be restless, ill-at-ease, bored with the dull realities of actual life?

How much play and exercise time (the time that develops body, character and skills) is sacrificed to the child's 15 hours weekly in front of the TV set?

How much more difficult is it to teach children to have grit and patience in the face of obstacles, when all the problems of screen heroes are solved satisfactorily on the hour, and the half-hour, day after day, and week after week?

What might be the results of children identifying themselves with supermen on the screen? Will it increase their tendency to get what the psychologists coll "power satisfaction" through demagogues in later life? Would this be an element to inculcate greater muss-conformity, and the "tyrany of the majority"?

In most homes today television flows as freely, and is accepted as uncriticnlly, as tap water, but specialists soo compelling reasons to call for thorough analysis of the effects of the intake on children. If as is suggested, the BBG and the CBC are unable to carry out this needed task, then an appeal should be made to elected representatives to consider how it might be undertaken.

Madam! Don't Open That Door!

One of the dangers that modern society fnces is the high-pressure, door-to-door, dishonest salesmen, who seem to be on the increase with each passing decade.

On the subject of this gigantic swindle game, Pierre Berton has writen a book, "The Big Sell" which is enlightening and instructive. A simple phone call to ask for help with a couple of questions on nutrition and health from food may result in a debt of $320 for some indigestible milk powder, and a blender which retails in a reliable store for less than $60. This is only one of the sales campaigns which is chronicled in the book, in which Berton opens the front door to take an unsparing look at the sleek, smiling salesman waiting outside. Selling is a "profession which thrives on euphemisme" says Berton. "Merchandising is placed but never sold; customers say nothing; they merely 'handle' the plan; your signature on a non-cancelable contract is "for your protection", as the bearer of glad tidings that you have won a contest you never knew you had entered. Prevalent among the big sell tactics is the drive to convert customers into hucksters by bribing them with $50 rebates for every friend they lure into an 'appointment'. Usually however, these customers find they have signed promissory notes of up to $5000.00 for supplies of unsaleable goods.

Rules of the Con Game are tougher but the rewards greater, for you give nothing in return for swindled money. Only three need play this game: the Egg (sucker), a Steer Man (to coddle the Egg), and the Takeoff man (to boil him dry). The game varies in length, depending on how hard the Egg is: an Alberta farmer lost $15, 000 within less than an hour, but it took several days to con a Montrealer out of $35,000.

Berton,s research is impressive & covers many of the favorite bnits used by the sharks, such as misleading insurance policies, subscriptions to magazines under the guise of supporting boys' educational tours, used cars, publishing outfits, encyclopedias, and, of course, the vacuum cleaners. A fiendishly tempting list of counter-attacks for wouldbe Hard Heads closes this amusing book, the Big Sell, & if widely read should make 1964 a year of slim pickings for practitioners of the black art of selling.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Reshape to Refurbish

OTTAWA— Between flying visits to Paris and Washington, Prime Minister Lester Pearson took time off briefly in recent days to take care of a matter of pressing domestic concern, a major re-organization of the membership and structure of the Government.

Throughout most of Canada, this re-shaping of the Cabinet seemed unlikely to have much immediate effect in refurbishing the somewhat tarnished image of the Liberal Ministry that resulted from a series of early blunders. Over a period of time, a strengthened Government may be able to dispel the impression of inexpress that lingers on, an impression that stands out only when when it is contrasted with the great expectations for a new Liberal administration rather than with the former Conservative Ministry.

In Quebec however, some of the changes should have a dynamic effect in putting a new face on the Federal Liberal Party for they bring to the forefront young and able men who truly represent the vibrant new society that is emerging in that province.

The transformation is most dramatically underlined by the replacement of Lionel Cherrier by Guy Favreau as Minister of Justice.

Mr. Favreau is 46, a brilliant lawyer and for five years an Associate Deputy Minister of Justice in Ottawa, where he was virtually unknown outside of the somewhat-close of the Civil Service. Elected to Parliament for the first time last spring, named Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, Mr. Favreau propelled himself up the political ladder with meteoric speed through nothing more than sheer ability.

Before many months were out it became obvious that he was the logical choice to succeed Mr. Cherrier not only as Minister of Justice, but as Mr. Pearson's first lieutenant from Quebec and head of the Federal Liberal Party in the Province. With Mr. Cherrier's appointment to London as Canadian high commissioner, the way was cleared to establish a new Federal leadership in Quebec.

Representation in the Cabinet of the new political wing in Quebec was also strengthened in other ways. Rene Tremblay, a 40-year-old economist, was to be brought into the Government as Junior Minister of a re-organized department, investigating agriculture and forestry. This meant a break in the blockade erected last spring by the old guard, which resents Mr. Seuve more bitterly than any other representative of the new order. Rene Tremblay, Minister without portfolio, acquired a stronger position in the Cabinet as Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, while Maurice Lamontagne held his own with his transfer from the Presidency of the Privy Council to become Secretary of State. For the old school, there was only one concession, the appointment of Yvon Dupuis as Minister without portfolio.

Most of the other changes lack the same political significance but essentially represent shifts aimed at strengthening the administrative competence of the ministry.

One example was the proposal to shift Chester Cowan, George McIlraith from the Transport Department to take over the direction of the Treasury Board from Finance Minister Walter Gordon, who is too hard pressed with other broad policy questions to give the time required to the details of Government expenditures and organization.

A second example is the transfer of J. N. Nicholson from Forestry to the Post Office Department. While there have been a few exceptions, the general rule over the years has been to appoint the weakest cabinet timber to serve as Postmaster-General. The theory being that in that portfolio they could involve the Government in the least amount of trouble. That theory was found to be wanting during the last session of Parliament when Aseliua Denis the most typical representative of the old adbel of Quebec politics, was constantly in hot water over charges of conduct,a patronage on a massive scale.

Patronage is nothing new in the Post Office Department, but it just so happened that Mr. Denis was caught out at a time when a changing political climate in Canada made the continuation of such archaic practices intolerable in the public

Editor Community Press,
Sedgewick, Alberta.

Dear Sir:

We wish, through the medium of your paper, to express congratulations and many thanks to the members of the Sedgewick Constituency Alberta Young Social Creditors who were hosts at a gathering, to which the public was invited, in the Legion Hall on the evening of Jan. 28, 1964. A goodly crowd was present to enjoy the reports speeches etc., and to hear many complimentary comments on the enthusiasm and capability with which these young people are entering into the fight for principles of sound democratic government as set forth in the Social Credit platform. Mr. J. Hillman, M.L.A. was present, and in a short speech, encouraged the young people in their efforts and urged them to continue their good job on behalf of Social Credit.

Following the program a social time was enjoyed as we partook of sandwiches, cake and coffee served by the young people.

Once more to the S. C. A. Y. P. C. a hearty "thank you" for an evening which was profitably, as well as pleasantly spent. — An Interested Couple.

On Friday, Feb. 2nd the Killam High School held a re-union of all the students and ex-students in the district.

Mrs. Irish (skip), Mrs. Crooks, Mrs. Bill Murray and Mrs. Blakeney, were successful in winning 1st prize in the Curlers Event at the Ladies Bonspiel in Camrose on Wednesday.

The Lougheed Mixed Bonspiel was concluded last week with the following rinks gaining the honors: First Event, 1 st J. Reeves, 2nd J. Barthel; Second Event, 1st T. Thomas, 2nd J. Casabevil.

The bag business was especially active in Strome last Wed. due no doubt to the present high price on that commodity. About $2400 was paid to the farmers in this district who marketed bags. Mr. N. McDougall handled the business for Mr. Chas. Duggan of Camrose.

The younger generation spent an enjoyable evening on Friday at the home of J. S. Humphries when the Misses Humphries were at home to about 30 young people to dancing. Music was supplied by Peggy Gair, Ruth Forster and Roy Ferrier.

The Strome Credit Union after a year of successful operation has declared a 3% dividend to those who had invested money in share capital.

We met wee Bobbie Clark just at supper time Monday and asked him if he expected to get home in time for supper. "I'm not fussy whether I do or not," said Bob. "Mother is visiting auntie in Red Deer, and I'm a bum cook."

Mr. Bob Monk suffered a painful accident last week when a block of wood fell on his foot, breaking two of the smaller bones.

A Killam rink made up of Messrs Slack, Wyers, Mowat and B. McDougall, played in the Daysland bonspiel. We understand they won some of the jewelery.

(From Press Files of Feb. 4, 1954)

We have gone through 3 weeks of pretty rugged weather, with the mercury staying all the way from 15 to 35 below zero.

Hardisty Bonspielers had the misfortune to lose all points. Most of the recent games have been cancelled because of cold weather.

The Killam district was very sorry to hear that the Tony Uneiuncs lost their farm home in a fire this week.

Mr. C. P. Hayes was down to a few Eastern points last week, such as London, Montreal, Winnipeg, etc.

Word from Roy McCracken down in Oregon informs us that snow flakes 18 inches across fell. We know that coffee had gone up to 10c a cup down south, but even at Ray, you better stay on it & leave the Mountain Dew alone.

The new Postmaster-General is a lawyer by profession, a businessmen of wide experience in top-level management and the first bend of the cross-armed Pulpmar Corporation Ordinarily a man of his stature would not be named to this portfolio, but as it happens he has been given a non-sized job. He has been directed by Prime Minister Pearson to undertake a drastic overhaul of the Post Office Department and to clean out patronage once and for all.

And there are hopeful signs that this is only the beginning. There are reports that Mr. Pearson is prepared to start moving in on other departments and agencies of the Federal Government to put an end to the handout of jobs and favors to that small-time party hacks have long considered their due.

At the same time that the Prime Minister announced the ministerial shuffle, he also indicated that some important changes are to be made in the way the Cabinet performs its business. In the past there have always been a number of informal committees of Cabinet set up from time to time. Mr. Pearson proposes to establish nine regular committees covering the major policy questions coming before the Government.

The difference is two-fold. A great deal more business will be handled by the committees rather than meetings of the full Cabinet, which because of its size can be prolonged affairs. More important, it seems likely that the committees will assume a great deal more responsibility, becoming almost inner Cabinets in deciding questions which fall in their particular sphere.

As Mr. Pearson suggested, this step may be only a prelude to Canada's adoption of the British system, which would mean an expansion of the Ministry with each succession, but a Cabinet with a substantially reduced membership responsible for deciding the major issues of Government policy.

BIRD MIGRATION

Who can fully fanthom the mysteries of bird migration? This is one of nature's most closely guarded secrets. Why these mass movements of bird populations northward? What was the origin of these prodigious, dangerous flights? Man has long sought to explain this awe-inspiring phenomenon.

Whether as American, Europe or Asia great waves of migration, of different species, take their direction northward to nest and rear their young. This regular, precision timed, spring arrival is calendo, not thermometer, controlled. It is a known fact that birds do not fly south merely to avoid the cold Temperature is not the answer.

The northern limits of any bird's range is not set by cold, but rather by the length of daylight, during which the bird may feed and maintain its body metabolism.

Certainly warm,th isn't the law that draws birds such as the Snowy probable reason for their southward Owl southward in winter. A mere exodus is the food supply.

Abnormally high food needs of birds during the nesting season require additional hours of daylight. The factor is much more important than mere abundance of food at any given place and time for perpetuating the race.

At the equator, the day is always about twelve hours long, twilight hours short — result, little or no food hunting. As you go northward in the summer of the Northern Hemisphere, the length of day grows steadily until night disappears entirely in the Arctic Circle.

The North Temperate Zone embraces about fifty times as large an area of land surface as the South Temperate Zone. The need for ample space for food gathering seems significant in the dimension of the instinct of northward migration among birds in the mating season.

Recently scientific research threw light on other forces that affect bird

GREEN ACRES

By A. E. Edwards, Dist. Ag.

WINTER FEEDING OF COW HERD!

Where cows are kept only to raise calves for beef the cost of their keep for an entire year must be charged against the calves at weaning time. Therefore it is important that the breeding herd be maintained as cheaply as possible, yet kept in vigorous breeding condition.

The nutrient requirements to maintain the herd over and the growth of the fetus are fairly low. It is for this reason that beef cows can be wintered satisfactorily on roughage alone when some legume hay is available. If only non-legume roughage is fed, there should be added to the ration one pound per head daily of a protein supplement.

Cows that go into the winter in poor flesh, because of a shortage of feed on fall pasture, should be fed a little grain to put them into satisfactory condition for calving. Too liberal a feeding of grain is not only extravagant but may be actually injurious.

Cows can be kept in excellent condition on 18 to 20 percent of alfalfa hay a day or its equivalent. Because of the feed available, or the cost, part of the hay may be fed, or replaced by other roughages such as straw grass hay or green feed. Straw hays are too low in protein to be satisfactory as the only feed in a winter ration. They need to be supplemented with about 1 pound of protein supplement a day per head.

Oat, wheat or barley straw or chaff is probably the chief feed or only roughage for wintering beef breeding cows. Oat straw is usually superior of age, if they are properly supplemented. One pound of high protein supplement or 4 lbs. of feeds of good legume hay will usually do the job

Special attention should be given to ensure adequate supplies of minerals are fed. If protein supplement is fed it can be obtained with the Vitamin A and minerals in the mineral pellet. Wherehigh protein feeds as 32 percent is not required, the 24% protein mineral in Farm Grow-Pro supplement is usually a good purchase.

CATTLE OUTLOOK!

Canadian cattle prices can be expected to continue to fluctuate widely as a result of shortsen intake. Rigity in the supply and demand for cattle.

In the recent issue of the Alberta Farm Economist R. E. English, the Statistician with the Farm Economics Branch of the Alberta Dept. of Agriculture, says the times of buying replacement cattle and selling finished animals will be important in determining the profit margins.

The 1963 calf crop was the largest on record and ample feed reserves are available for feeding them out. Under these circumstances feed becomes relatively inexpensive and market requirements is a definite possibility for some time. This means that the Canadian cattleman will be necessary to maintain Canada's livestock industry at present levels.

The current heavy run of fed cattle to market in the U. S. is expected to taper off towards the end of January or early in February. One mighty important that the prices of good steers at Portland will rise to perhaps $28.50 a February & may even reach $24.50 in the March to June period. At these prices Canadian cattle would move onto export markets.

U. S. fed cattle prices during the second half of 1964 will depend on the number of cattle on feed cattle onto feed lots. The supply of feeders on hand is sufficient to increase movement by 5 to 10 percent over a year ago. If replacements are as host; as this, prices may fall as much as $2.00 in the third quarter. They should improve again, however, towards the end of the year. If, on the other hand, movement of cattle into feed lots is delayed, prices will edge high during the summer and fall off in the last quarter of the year or early in 1965

SUGAR and SPICE
By Bill Smiley

This week I'm supposed to speak to our honor students & their parents, at a banquet. Dull topic: "Good Reading Habits."

Choice of speaker was a hilarious piece of miscasting. I think I can state, not proudly, but with little fear of contradiction, that my personal reading habits are the most atrocious in Canada, maybe in the world.

Thirty-five years ago, my mother was saying anxiously, "Billy Smiley, you'll be blind before you're 15 if you don't stop reading in dark corners!"

Well, I ain't blind yet, and I'm still reading in dark corners. Not to mention bright corners, on trains, planes and ships, in bathrooms, libraries and restaurants, before breakfast and after going to bed, waking or work or watching television.

By the time I was 10 I had barrelled through the Rover Boys the Tom Swift series, the Horatio Alger saga, and was gnawing on the massive historical novels of G. A. Henty. By 15, I had gobbled Zane Grey and Max Brand, along with most of the detective stories available.

At about 16, I was devouring books, historical, political, travel and biographical, with wild, savage excursions into the fiction of Dickens and Defoe, Poe and Proust, at the rate of about one-and-a-half volumes a day.

Then came the acquaintance with Hemingway, Thomas Wolfe & Evelyn Waugh, with heroes haunted, wild, and sophisticated. Heady stuff for a teen-ager. Then came the war.

While the other pilots played cards or talked about the girl they met in the pub last night, I read.

The real book fiend, lost beyond recall, never reads anything remotely connected with real life, as it's being lived. He's a pure escapist.

If he lives on the prairies, he reads about the sea, or mountain climbing. If he lives in a fishing village, he reads westerns. If he's a shy boy, he reads about bold men. If he's a detective, he reads love stories. If he's a politician, he reads about detectives. If he's undoing history, he reads romance. If he's in the middle of a love affair, he reads war novels.

The alcoholic and the drug addict will sink pretty low, when money runs out. They will lie and cheat and steal to get the goods. The sky will drink shaving lotion, rubby-dub, or put a tin of canned heat through a loaf of bread to get a smash. The dope addict will resort to prostitution or armed robbery to obtain a fix.

This is kid stuff. A book fiend, when cut off from sources, will sink to unspeakable degradation. It begins when he picks up discarded newspapers. Next thing you know he's avidly perusing public signs, match books and empty toothpaste tubes.

But that's only the beginning. One day in Algiers, just after the war, I met an old air force friend, a dish, from India. He was a book fiend, as I knew. One look at his red-rimmed, vacant eyes announced it. He was tending an old lady by the hand.

Asked him where he was going, who she was. Turned out she was his aged mother. He was on his way to the slave market. "I know what you think," he sheepishly avowed. "But I can't help it. I gotta gotta book."

I heard later he got 419 for her. Or, to put it in realistic terms 20 pocket novels.

Minor Hockey Roundup

The Juvenile Sabres finished first place in the Battle River Juvenile League, with a convincing 10-1 shellacking of the Irma Imperials along with a 10-7 victory on February 1st over Daysland Elks. Led by the line of Sorenson Anderson and Kenlzer with 19 goals between them Sabres are now preparing for the league playoffs and also for the Provincial Playoffs against Camrose Lagoon. The last home game in the regular schedule is on Monday, Feb. 10 at 7.30 against Camrose Lutheran College.

Sedgewick Midgets won their two outings over the past week, with a 3-2 overtime victory of our Bantams and a 9-3 win over Castor. Ryan Simpson scored the overtime goal against the Bantams.

A pick-up team of Midgets, Juveniles and Referees also played the Castor Satellites Feb. 1st, and came up with a 5-3 win. Bill Drever scored the winner on one of his patented slap shots.

The Sedgewick Bantams went through the week with two wins and two losses. They managed to beat Castor 3-1 and Killam 8-0, while losing to Viking 7-6 and to the Midgets 3-2. The team as a whole is improving each time out, but sometimes fail to listen when they are instructed. Gordon Myrehaug picked up his second shut-out.

The Sedgewick Ramos posted a 5-1 lacing over Lougheed, and tied Viking 2-2. The Viking team and Bantams and Pee Wees are both expected to return games here.

As a final note to everyone, the Sedgewick Minor Hockey Assn. is planning their own Minor Hockey Week for the 14th 15th and 16th of this month Boys from 8 to 18 years will be in action. Further information available next week

Myths That Persist!

If a poll were taken among people, it is likely that most would admit that they have accepted, and in fact still do accept, as fact, many ideas that are myths and illusions. This can be a harmful habit for individuals, but for a nation it can have dangerous results. According to Arthur Krock of the New York Times, a number of beliefs on which policies of governments are founded, are myths because they have remained in the stage of illusion for lack of proof of authenticity. With the proof that "History is full of examples of the decline of great civilizations which lived by myth and illusion, Professor Wess named several beliefs & political practices of governments, among which are the following:

The assumption that so-called neutral nations would be with us on moral and ethical grounds in time of crisis. It would appear that pouring in money and materials to underprivileged nations in no way binds them in any moral sense to a reciprocal obligation. Modern history is replete with instances of nations retaliating with hatred to the "hand that has fed them." Secondly, Prof. Wess lists the myth that labor unions still need the protection of governments. Unions have almost reached the point where the direct reverse would be more the case.

Then there is the illusion that is driving nations into bankruptcy. It is the prevailing myth that we can spend our way recklessly into prosperity and expansion. This bogey has been with us so long that many have even forgotten that it exists.

It has reached the stage where a large percentage of government income goes to pay debt charges and interest thereon.

There are other myths listed, chief among which are:

The belief that if we appropriate more and more federal funds and provincial funds, we can buy for our youngsters a better education; that federal governments can do things better than the provinces, and that provinces can do the same things better than local municipalities, and that these in turn can do them better than individuals; that high taxes distribute wealth in a society that has been built by millions of centres of individual initiative; that governments are going to discover new frontiers — something they have not done in the past, and are surely not likely to do in the future; that conformism needs to be pressured, disregarding history which testifies that the most significant achievements have been accomplished by the individual; that Freedom derives from the government instead of from the people — which has led us to the point where the individual has abdicated personal responsibility.

The final point Prof. Wess makes is the prevailing build-up of an inferiority feeling in comparing ourselves with other nations, when, in fact, to be a great nation, we must learn to be ourselves. While Prof. Wess has compiled the above primarily for American consumption, we have a feeling that some Canadian will agree, unfortunately, that many of these myths have migrated North of the 49th parallel.

Annual Meeting Time!

This is the time of year when Villages, Municipalities and School Divisions hold forth in annual meetings. Business, and sometimes social get-togethers, when the men and women we have elected to conduct our public affairs, meet with those to whom they are responsible, to discuss affairs as they have taken place during the past twelve months. It is the time also when policies are set and procedures outlined for the year ahead. It is a time when a report is made on how our money has been spent and why it was spent as it was. In fact it is the time when a general review takes place in respect to our civic and educational well-being.

These annual meetings afford the "ordinary" man and woman the opportunity to peer into the mysteries of finance and public works; a time to question policies, and advance new ideas. It is a time when all public spirited men and women should feel obliged to appear. Men and women, elected to public office, by a large majority, are honest, hard-working people who have our welfare uppermost in their minds. They make mistakes. After all, they are human. They don't mind being criticised fairly and honestly. If they did, they probably wouldn't seek office. But one thing they don't like is to be ignored. Ignoring them by not turning out to the annual meeting, is a sure-fire way to compel men to retire from public life. Why should they care, if you don't?

It is your duty to attend your annual meetings. Air your "beef," make your suggestions, and if these people have given you good service, commend them—but please don't ignore them.

The Younger Generation!

A story currently going the rounds tells of a smart young man in the mail room of a large U.S. firm who was named to take up a collection to buy a gift for one of the bosses who was about to get married. After extracting the usual 25c from each of the 2,000 employees in the plant he had $500 which he used to buy 2,000 packs of cigarettes, the kind with a coupon on the back. Next, he traded in the coupons for a silver coffee service, and this became the wedding gift. He then presented each of his 2,000 contributors with a pack of cigarettes. They, understandably enough, were pleasantly surprised to find themselves reimbursed.

Management, needless to say, got to hear of it and he was congratulated on his ingenuity. "You're a bright boy," he was told, "we can use brains like yours in the front office." More than that, it was suggested, such cleverness as he had shown was worthy of reward. Bright boy however, demurred. In all honesty, he confessed, he had already been very adequately rewarded. Seems that he had bought the cigarettes at a supermarket which dished out trading stamps. He had got 5000 of them—and had cashed them in on a spanking new fishing outfit.

And now will all those pessimists who have been harboring doubts as to whether the younger generation is an private enterprise minded as their forefathers, please stop worrying? — Grand Forks Gazette.

AN PHILOSOPHY!

Why is it a man wakes up in the morning after sleeping under an advertised blanket, on an advertised mattress and pulls off advertised pajamas, takes a bath in an advertised tub, shaves with an advertised razor, washes with an advertised soap, puts on advertised clothes, sits down to a breakfast of advertised cereal and coffee, puts on an advertised hat, rides to work in an advertised car, and then refuses to advertise — says advertising doesn't pay — and, if business is bad, advertises his store for sale!" — Source Unknown.

OLD HAND

Cryptic Jargon

OTTAWA — Mr. Walter Gordon is quickly learning the cryptic jargon of Finance Ministers.

His recent speech in Edmonton has been interpreted in some quarters as meaning no tax cuts in sight; in others as holding out new hope. Mr. Gordon indicated neither. He said sufficient economic growth and reduced unemployment would increase revenues and leave Government in a position to choose between acceding to new demands for expenditure or cutting taxes. He warned that unless expenditures were appreciably reduced he found it difficult to see "how Governments will be able to reduce the total revenues they must receive in taxes".

But Mr. Gordon said nothing about ensuring his suggestions also pay with tax revenues and no one expects him to do so. He is expected to have a lower deficit than in the current year when it will be well above $700 million. And prosperity of this improve daily.

Federal revenues for 1964-1965 are going to be very substantially higher than in the current year. He can count with some certainty on an increase of $450 million or ten times the increase that he has forecast for the current year. He has a reasonable prospect, given normal economic growth, of an increase of $550 million. Here are some of the reasons:

In his last budget the Finance Minister changed the system of paying corporation tax so that payments will be made earlier. It gave him no extra revenue for 1963-64. In 1964-65 it means another $145 million.

Through pressures from business that impressed his Cabinet colleagues, perhaps unduly, Mr. Gordon was forced to retreat from his original budget proposal for an 11 percent sales tax on building materials and production machinery. It was reduced to four percent as the first step in a gradualist scale that reaches 11 percent only on Dec. 31 this year.

The amount that this reduced bite of in the current year's revenues will be returned next year with a net deal added. If there were an increase in the current level of sales over the next 12 months his revenues from sales tax would be $162 million higher than the current year.

Canada's gross national production for 1963 turned out to be one percent higher than Mr. Gordon had next last June. In some circumstances this would mean a proportionate increase in revenues in the current years. Because of its nature it will have very little impact on this year's tax revenues.

The effect of a full wheat movement that has shattered all records has not yet shown up in the farmer's income tax and won't show up until next year. Nor will higher production be translated into corporation tax collections for another six months or more. This means that instead of having to forecast his revenues for Canada entirely on the expected growth this year he is assessed of higher revenues on the basis of what has already happened.

Mr. Gordon says main estimates for the year are $250 million less than had been contemplated two or three months ago. Again this is cryptic but with defence spending lower than the current year by probably $80 million it is reasonable to expect that the inevitable increase in over-all expenditure will be substantially less than the yearly average of $250 million. If this turns out to be the case Mr. Gordon starts with a deficit at least $350 million less than is expected this year.

If he should decide it is adequate he can carry out his promise of moving toward a balanced budget, and reduced unemployment would increase revenues and leave Government in a position to choose between acceding to new demands for expenditure or cutting taxes. He warned that unless expenditures were appreciably reduced he found it difficult to see "how Governments will be able to reduce the total revenues they must receive in taxes".

But Mr. Gordon said nothing about ensuring his suggestions also pay with tax revenues and no one expects him to do so. He is expected to have a lower deficit than in the current year when it will be well above $700 million. And prosperity of this improve daily.

FABRICS! CHECK BEFORE YOU BUY!

PRINTED OFF-GRAIN!

When a fabric is printed off-grain the horizontals and verticals of the pattern deviate from the cross-wise and lengthwise threads of the fabric. It can easily be seen on a torn edge. You will notice the line of the design will not be parallel with the edge, but instead, will run off on an angle. When this happens, we are forced to follow horizontals rather than the true crosswise and lengthwise threads. In other words the lengthwise grain lines marked on the pattern pieces will have to be laid on the vertical stripe of the print. When a garment has to be made in such a manner it will never hang correctly. Because there is no satisfactory solution to this problem, be sure to examine all printed fabrics.

FABRIC CUT-OFF GRAIN!

The first step in sewing any garment is to pull a crosswise thread at one end of the piece to determine whether the crosswisethread is parallel to the cut edge from selvedge to selvedge. Often you will find the grainline quite different from the cut edge and as a result a great deal of fabric is wasted. To avoid this loss, when you are buying fabric insist that the clerk tear off the portion you want or have her pull a thread to be sure it will be cut on the grainline.

WHEN BUYING FABRIC ASK YOURSELF THESE QUESTIONS:

What is the fiber content?

Have any special finishes been applied?

What care must this fabric be given?

Has it been preshrunk?

Is the color resistant to fading?

Does it recall excessively?

Is it slippery and hard to work with?

Have I enough fabric? Be sure to allow extra fabric for plaids and prints that require matching & for "up and down fabrics" in which the nap and pile must all run in one direction.

Is the permanent is applied design? Good and other prints often wear off, as do designs printed in plastic and flocking. Embossed fabrics will often flatten with washing and pressing.

How long will the fabric look new? Buy good quality cotton. The poorer qualities often have a high percentage of filler or starch. After a few washings, the filler will come out & you are left with a limp piece of fabric with very little body.

Nature Notes

(By Stanley Kosiewicbuh)

What is your reaction to a snake? Is it one of fear? Or otherwise? Do you reach for a club with which to destroy the reptile?

To do either would be foolish, for snakes, far from being dangerous creatures, are valuable allies. They destroy untold numbers of rodents and insects. By substituting fact for fallacy, you'll come to appreciate these very interesting reptiles.

Contrary to popular belief, snakes are not slimy, but dry and scaly. Snakes, as well as all reptiles, are cold blooded, that is their body temperature approximates that of their surroundings. Snakes are most active during the warmer months, although they avoid lengthy exposure to sunlight. By midsummer most kinds become nocturnal. In winter, when cold weather would render the snakes helpless, they seek snug retreats and hibernate until spring. This behaviour explains the presence of snake pits.

Have you ever seen a snake flickering its tongue, and shuddered at this "stinger"? Well, as a matter of fact it's not a stinger at all, but an organ of smell. Minute particles are carried to two cavities in the mouth which are filled with sensory cells. The sense of sight and the sense of smell are both well developed. It is these two faculties that enable the snake to secure food and mates. Snakes are deaf and have no external ear openings. Eyelids are also absent. A snake sleeps with its eyes open(ed).

Probably the most amazing feature of a snake is the way it eats. The jaw is so constructed that it is capable of great distention. This enables its possessor to swallow food greater in diameter than its head. All prey is swallowed whole.

Reproduction among snakes is of two kinds — live birth and egg laying. Slightly more than half of our kinds of snakes lay eggs. Eggs are deposited in decaying matter, where both heat and moisture are present. The incubation period is not fixed, for variation in heat and dampness affect hatching time.

Snake eggs are rubbery and pliant white or yellow. Since they are hidden from sight of potential enemies, there is no need for protective coloration. Brief exposure to sunlight will dry the egg sufficiently to kill the embryo within.

Young snakes grow rapidly. To accomodate this growth they periodically shed their skins. Prior to moulting the coloration and pattern become dull, eyes turn cloudy, vision is imperfect. It is at this time that a snake seeks some hidden retreat. The skin loosens at the jaw and the snake simply crawls out.

It is difficult to understand how a snake completes this task. Close inspection will reveal broad plates across the abdomen. Each plate is capable of movement. Irregularities of the ground provide the necessary hold to move forward. A snake on a smooth surface is helpless.

If ever any group within a species has caused or brought about such universal fear or hatred as a species it is the venomous snakes. It is estimated that less than 5 percent of all kinds of snakes in the world are dangerous to man. Fortunately most of these are confined to the tropics.

Snakebite is something to be avoided at all times. Any person bitten should have immediate hospital care.

Calculations have proven conclusively that snakes in general are useful animals, and have made a marked contribution to our economy by destroying untold quantities of rodents. Since this is the case, it is well to let all snakes alone. Don't kill a snake simply because it is a snake.

Down Memory's Lane

(By Mrs. F. M. Cantlon, Hardisty, Alberta)

ONE WAY
(A True Story)

Things had been unusually quiet around the home for two or three days, "the calm before the storm," as we were not at all surprised when the calm was broken.

The men had been putting in cedar posts around the barn-lot preparatory to stretching the wire-but the wind blew it. It was summer time on a Sunday afternoon. The man of the house was having a bit too quick for in the cool dining room & Mom was writing letters. The youngsters were turned around outside, aimlessly wondering what to do to put in time. The folks forbid sports of any kind, such as swimming, playing ball, etc., on Sunday, on the principle that it would be desecrating the Sabbath.

"Dad's sleeping, 'n Mom's writing letters," he was informed.

"Say, let's hook up a couple of those fat yearling colts to that old cart. See if they can pull us down to the school and back," suggested Rowland, a lad of 12 or 13.

They lost no time in rigging up a harness of sorts, and corraling the colts. The poor little (?) animals didn't know what it was all about, and bawled and jumped, first forward, then back and no one would wonder at the Lad's patience.

"Lucky we're behind the barn where Dad can't hear or see us," said Andy, Rowland's 11-year-old brother.

After what seemed hours, the lads decided everything was in order, and both climbed into the cart from the back, Rowland driving. As soon as the calves felt the slap of the lines on their backs they both gave a deep-throated bawl, one going forward, the other trying to back up, with a wobbly but very changed landmarks and away they both went, pell-mell towards one of those big, new cedar posts; one on each side of the post, with the result they banged their heads together and both fell to the ground. The lads jumped out of the cart, trying to get the calves to their feet, and there stood their Dad, looking like a thunder-cloud. He could see at a glance that the calves weren't hurt badly, and would be up and O. K. presently. The lads didn't wait to see anything, after one look a thinkr Dad's face, she had grabbed up the article which the lads had dropped, and was making a lunge at the nearest lad.

But they were a bit too quick for him, and ran toward the barn and up into the loft, not a minute too soon. Their Dad came tearing after them, but quick as a wink, one of the lads, standing at the loft opening, waited right there, and when their Dad's hand was on the top step, Rowland plunked his foot smack down on his Dad's fingers. Rowland wore heavy boots, and by putting considerable weight down, was really able to hold his Dad down.

"Lift your big foot, you young cuss-a-rag," roared his Dad, "or I'll tan the hide off you."

"Not until you promise you won't give us a lickin'," answered Rowland. Up came Dad's other hand to lift Rowland's foot but quicker than you think, down thumped Andy's big heavy boot on that hand.

There he was, helpless; couldn't do a thing and the lads knew it too. Dad's fingers were really paining, so at last he gave in, threatening all sorts of dire punishment if they were ever caught doing anything like that again.

The Lads, knowing if their Dad promised he would not punish them, they could depend on his word, so they lifted their feet, looking at each other with a grin, as much as to say "Well, that sure was quick thinking, and it worked too."

Who said the youngsters of today are worse than those of a generation ago? Not many Lads, even older than the two in the above story, would dare to do such a really downright mean thing to their Dad. Right?

LOUGHEED W. I.

LOUGHEED — The Lougheed W. I. met at the home of Mrs. T. Cousins Sr. on Monday evening. A special meeting was called as members could listen to the National Farm Forum radio program. The topic was "Privi In The Market Place." One speaker said that housewives are often mesmerized by the quantity and variety of products found in the supermarkets, and often buy beyond their means. There is a need for a group that can bring producer and consumer together on differences relating to production, processing distribution or handling of farm and food products.

The roll call was answered by each member telling something that she had learned from the program.

The business part of the meeting was conducted by vice-president Mrs. Harold Probst. There may be a new ring clinic in March. Articles were handed in for the U. S. C. layette.

Next meeting will be in the Legion Hut on March 7th. There will be a pot-luck supper for members & families. A film will be shown.

By Bill Smiley

MORE LIGHT ON READING!

My speech was a roaring success. You know, the speech on Good Reading Habits, to our honour students. I mean'oned it last week. Yes, it went well! Does anyone know anyone who wants a slightly used ex-school teacher?

I haven't received an official communication from the school board yet, but I understand they had an emergency meeting right after my speech, and drew up the appropriate charges of misery, gawk and intellectual malnutrition.

When I began to write the speech, I couldn't think of a single Good Reading Habit. Then, dimly, from my old health class in public school, they began to filter back.

Rule: When reading, the light should come over your left shoulder. It's very awkward if your left shoulder happens to be higher than your right. Unless, of course, you are an Arab and read from right to left, then I presume it should come over your right shoulder.

Rule No. 2: Always read in the bathtub, when possible.

Somebody once said that the ideal education would be a boy sitting on one end of a log, and Mark Van Doren, a great American educator, sitting on the other.

My notion of a great educational advance would be a classroom with 25 bathtubs, and up on the platform a super-tub, in pink mother-of-pearl, for Mr. Smiley.

Think of the problems we could inject when Lady Macbeth says, "A little water will wash us of this deed." Think of the special effects we could obtain while reading Old Man and the Sea, or Typhoon. We'd all be in series suits, naturally.

Well, from that point, my speech moved effortlessly into the results of Good Reading Habits in history. I remember the tale of Archimedes. Think what the world would have missed if he hadn't clambed into his bath, one day with a copy of Ovid's poems.

The minute he sat down, he knew there was something wrong. "Pupyrhia!" he screamed and leapt out of the tub, forgetting to put pajamas instead of bath suits in the water. And thus was born Archimedes Principle, one of our great laws of physics. I'm not quite sure what it is, but I think it's something like "Half a bath it better than none." Anyway so we sit home, it's a very important principle.

I left the kids with this solemn thought. An economic reverse can be had by using your new car, your split level mortgage and your wife. Advancing years can take away your teeth, your figure, and your husband. But nothing can take away Good Reading Habits.

Many years from now, the matron of the nursing home will point out a decimated old chap sitting in the wheel-chair with a huge book on his knees. "That's Mr. Smiley. Used to be an English teacher. Poor old fellow. He's blind now."

And the visitor will say, "It doesn't seem to bother him much. What's the old coot grinning at?"

And the matron will reply, "Oh, he went blind when he was 86, and was furious for awhile, because he couldn't read, but he learned the Braille system in six weeks, and now he reads everything he can get his hands on. Including the nurses."

SPORTS CORNER

MINOR HOCKEY WEEK!

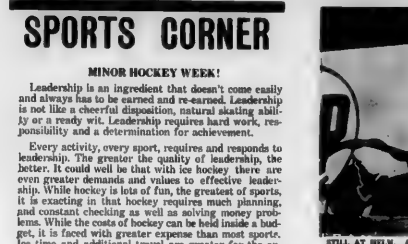
Leadership is an ingredient that doesn't come easily and always has to be earned and re-earned. Leadership is not like a cheerful disposition, natural skating ability or a ready wit. Leadership requires hard work, responsibility and a determination for achievement.

Every activity, every sport, requires and responds to leadership. The greater the quality of leadership, the better. It could well be that with ice hockey there are even greater demands and values to effective leadership. While hockey is lots of fun, the greatest of sports, it is exacting in that hockey requires much planning, and constant checking as well as solving money problems. While the costs of hockey can be held inside a budget, it is faced with greater expense than most sports. Ice time and additional travel are greater for the organized team. There are always sticks, skates, goalie gear, as well as protective equipment and uniforms. The cost and problem or rink rental sometimes enters into a team's problems.

The straight organizational aspects are demanding of leadership. The usual things familiar to all sports of practice time, coaching, equipment care, games and tournaments, but also the additional mechanical problems of snow, sleet and rain, location and availability of ice.

Leadership of the team itself is an obvious need that can be aided by the coaching and players themselves. But the initiative to see that such leadership is going to come about has to be achieved. An organizational type of person, willing to put responsibility and work as well as enthusiasm and desire, is what every hockey team that is going to have fun needs.

We hear of all the problems caused by overzealous parents. Overzealous parents are seldom the workers, the builders. There is plenty of need for ice hockey leadership on the part of youth hockey fathers. This is the great sport their sons enjoy. The area of sound organizational aid and judgement is right down the experience of many fathers. Those who have had business experience and are employers are in the best position of all to lead. Those in hockey now as coaches, players, managers, recreation or school officials would do well to spend time seeking out and encouraging even more fathers of players to provide leadership for their boys' teams. — U. S. Hockey.



STILL AT HELM. After a tumultuous annual meeting of the Progressive Conservative Party in Ottawa, John Diefenbaker will return to Parliament next week still in her of the party, and chief of the Opposition. Some dissident Tories attempted to force leadership question into the open. But Mr. Diefenbaker, seen here addressing delegates firmly beat back challenge.—

MANAGEMENT PRACTICES TO PREVENT SWINE PNEUMONIA!

All forms of pneumonia, responsible for heavy losses in the swine industry, reach the most serious proportions during the winter

According to Dr. John Hewett, Pathologist with the Alberta Veterinary Services Branch, low grade pneumonia, due to viruses or bacteria, may be present in most animals in a herd without deaths or obvious signs of illness other than coughing or sneezing. Pigs in such herds, however, are frequently unthrifty and rate of growth Also, their feed conversion rates are often lowered by varying degrees. Although these effects are not always obvious, they cause a serious drop in net returns

Low common but more dramatic outbreaks of acute pneumonia occur with varying losses from deaths in the herd. The micro-organisms that cause pneumonia in swine are frequently present in the respiratory passages of animals which appear to be normal. In most cases stress in one form or another is necessary to bring about the worst effects of chronic pneumonia or to cause it to flare up into the acute form. Such stresses include, cold, damp, drought and unsanitary quarters, malnutrition, parasitism, shipping and exposure to infected animals.

Dr. Howell recommends the following management practices to reduce the incidence and severity of respiratory infections in swine herds. These practices will also greatly reduce pig scours.

Provide growing and finishing pigs with dry and draught-proof quarters. Give suckling litters extra heat. Keep living quarters as clean as possible. Clean and disinfect farrowing pens and crates before they are used. Damper-sweeping germs build up in quarters which are not kept clean.

Provide pigs with adequate nutritious and well-balanced rations designed for the various age groups. Give pregnant and lactating sows and the suffering adequate amounts of Vitamin A. Vitamin A helps to protect animals from respiratory infections. A deficiency of this vitamin predisposes them to these infections. Give all baby pigs iron (copperas). They are more susceptible to pneumonia organisms when suffering from iron deficiency anemia.

Carry out a regular deworming program. During the life cycle of the large round worm, the larvae migrate through the lungs of a pig causing irritation which can develop into bronchitis or pneumonia. In addition, the nutritional level of heavily parasitized pigs is lowered, making them more susceptible to infections.

Watch weaners and other pigs closely for a week or two after they have been brought into a herd because mixing them makes them more susceptible to infections including pneumonia. This is especially true during the winter months. If possible isolate newly introduced animals from the rest of the herd for two or three weeks. Animals which need treatment should be given it immediately.

Dr Howell advises securing the assistance of a Veterinarian for diagnosis and treatment of pneumonia. This will help the swine producer to find out the basic cause of the disease and to get the drugs which are giving success in his district. Some drugs work better in one district than another due to the fact that one type of infection may be more prevalent in that area.

CANADIAN LIVESTOCK OUTLOOK!

The Canada Dept. of Agriculture reports that hog marketings during the first quarter of 1964 are expected to average about 140,000 head a week. This is 11% more than in the same quarter of 1963. Hog marketings between April and September are also expected to be up significantly from the same period in 1963.

Hog prices are forecast to be weaker during the next six months compared with a year ago. There may not be much price recovery from current levels before the summer.

More cattle went on feed in Canada during the first five months of 1963 than during the same period of 1962. Prices for slaughter cattle are expected to show little change in the next six months from Dec. levels

POST OFFICE ANNOUNCES NEW 7-CENT POSTAGE STAMP!

The Post Office Department has announced that the first Canadian stamp to be issued in 1964 will be a 7-cent stamp, designed primarily for Air Mail letters to the U. S. A.

The new stamp, printed in blue, will be issued on March 11th 1964. Its design will feature a modern jet aircraft taking off from a Canadian Airport. The aircraft passing overhead will be symbolic of many modern short and long range jets and is not intended to represent any specific make or model. The Air Port buildings are partly feel later to receive the Toronto International Air Terminal at Up-town, which was opened in 1960.

Postal Officials explain that the new stamp will replace the famous blue "Canada Goose" design of which 183,000,000 stamps have been printed since its introduction in 1953. The blue goose stamp is being retired primarily because of the new 5-cent stamp issued last autumn which also shows Canada geese in flight. It is not normal to maintain in regular use, two issues of similar portraying similar subjects. In addition, the 12 year life of the blue goose issue is considered a normal term, and the design was due for retirement.

While the new stamp bears a flight motif, it will not be specially an air mail stamp. It will bear the words "Postes Canada Postage" and the denomination, only. The stamp was designed and printed by the Canadian Bank Note Co. Ltd.

Subsidy For Idleness!

From the outset of the idea of a Federal Contributory Pension Plan, there has been reservations on the part of many, but this gave way to disbelief when the experts came up with the statement that the new contributory plan, added to the present old age security pension and existing private plans, would make it more attractive for some people to retire than continue working. Even with the new plan submitted to the provinces, with its reduced benefits, it appears that this no doubt will be the case. Federal civil servants now draw a pension equal to 70 percent of earnings (up to 5,040 a year) in their six highest-pay years, based on two percent of earnings up to a maximum of 35 years. The rate of contributions is high — 6.5 percent of salary, with matching contributions from the government. The Canada Pension Plan would boost this rate of contribution by two percent, again shared by the government.

It is now proposed, however that when the scheme is operational it will offer all who are eligible an early-retirement pension up to $126 a month, including the existing tax-paid old security fund of $75. This amount would be available at age 65 to all insured employees with pensionable earnings of $4500 a year. But civil servants in the same wage group would get an additional $262.50 from his own civil service pension, making an income of $575 a month for working, or $388.50 for retiring. The absurdity of this situation would, I presume, extend into the cases of many pension plans in industry, more especially where unions guarantee contracts. In the final analysis we could arrive at an awkward situation.

It would appear that the government is approaching the whole scheme warily, and well it might. There will be time, no doubt, to adjust existing plans, and the assurance must be forthcoming that loss will not occur in such adjustments. If the civil servants refuse to have their present plan tampered with, or if trade unions decide they do want a salary increase on retirement, what happens then? It could happen.

The average human being is so built that if he can make more money by being idle than by working, he will be idle. A large proportion of our population has adopted a new creed in our day. While some of them may never have seriously read the 23rd Psalm, they have nevertheless modernized it to suit their attitude:

The State is my shephard, I need not work; It alloweth me to lie down on good jobs; It leadeth me beside still factories; It destroyeth mine initiative; It taketh me in the paths of unemployment for politicen' sake; Yea, though I walk through the valley of laziness and deficit spending, I will fear no evil, for the Government is with me; It prepareth an economic Utopia for me out of the earnings of my grandchildren; It filleth my head with security; My inefficiency runneth over. Surely, the State shall care for me all the days of my life, And I shall dwell in a fool's paradise forever.

Time To Stop!

As an experiment, we should like to see every newspaper in Canada join in a one year effort to stop the observance of special weeks. This habit has gotten completely out of hand. No week passes without a dozen "releases" coming to the editorial desk, proclaiming that it is National Dishwashing Week, or National Radish Week, or National Paperhangers Week, or something else of the same dramatic impact.

Everybody who wants some free publicity gets into the act, and we are deluged with photos of girls cutting grapefruit, to proclaim a citrus fruit week, or a grapefruit week, girls sitting on tractors to proclaim tractor week, and girls standing by drug counters to proclaim national drug store week. Of course the fact that girls are in all such pictures is a mere side issue. It is about the only relieving feature in the whole boring issue.

The fellow who started this special week business should be bolted in oil. But the fellows who perpetuate it are equally to blame. And fellow-editors, that's us! Which may not be gramatical, but it makes the point. If we would refuse to go along with this twaddle, 99 percent of it would stop. And that would be the greatest boon to humanity since the discovery of the knob which turns off the T. V. set. — Trenton, Trentonian.

OPPORTUNITY FOR CANADA!

The sharp divergence between the Hon. John Diefenbaker and his one-time supporter Douglas Harkness is one which obviously cannot be cemented over, and lends just the shadow of a hope that the Canadian parliamentary institution may grow up and become more than the tight-rank marshaling of teams we have not seen for so many years. There is just the barest chance Harkness may be able to follow somewhat the example which is so familiar in the Mother of Parliaments, in England. There, at the very fount of responsible government as we are supposed to know it, the odd member of any party occasionally speaks out with startling candor in opposition to the policies of his own party. It's not frequent, of course, and it's not always appreciated. But we have always felt that this lack of utter and absolute bondage to the party was one of the strengths of the British Parliament.

There is every likelihood that Harkness can sit in the Canadian Commons just as long as he wants to. His voters in Calgary North seem to appreciate his qualities somewhat more than the party chief does and indicate they will keep returning him to Ottawa. If they do, and there isn't the remotest chance he will be anything but a Conservative, then there's a reasonable hope that we may sometime hear a Canadian member opposing the policies of his own party. If the practice ever develops, it would seem to require that intended legislation would have to pass tests considerably more rigid than has sometimes been the case in the past. And this would be all to the good for Canada. — Camrose Canadian.

TIME TO STOP THIS TOO!

The results that came out of the recent course in hatmaking held in one of our local towns last week, is cause for calm patience and tolerance on the part of all local mankind. Some of the monstrosities brought home by housewives, frightening as they may be, will pass away with the style changes, and serenity will prevail in the household. Don't panic.

CANADA'S MEDAL

Legislature Opens

By John Warren)

EDMONTON — The pomp and pageantry of the opening of the first session of the 16th Alberta Legislature was too impressive even to be disturbed by the talking of an cabinet from one of the galleries. The missile nearly clouted Calgary M.L.A. Art Dixon but he regained his composure a few minutes later, and to no one's surprise, was named Speaker. The accident provided about the only unexpected twist, for the Throne Speech itself contained few surprises. The program of legislation for which it gave a rough outline was already well known.

It gave considerable emphasis to education and welfare plans, including a complete study of university administration and finance and expanded welfare payments and nursing home construction.

The speech promised greater autonomy for the University of Alberta at Calgary, a study in co-operation with the other governors of the future of higher education and a revision of the standard 22 mill levy for the education foundation plan (undoubtedly upwards).

It promised a new crop insurance scheme would be drafted in co-operation with the federal government, and it said a minimum security program would be built in the north, although the site was not mentioned.

Establishment of farm machinery co-ops which could borrow from the province to purchase heavy equipment was forecast, and investigation of irrigation and water control problems in the south were provided for.

The speech, read by Lt.-Gov. J. Percy Page, gave emphasis to ... of Premier Manning's favorite topics, the need for a division of responsibilities between individuals and government. And it urged members to be mindful of this division, particularly when it involves the spending of public money.

Ready McKinnon (S. C. Strathcona West) moved the reply to the speech. He concentrated on the University proposals and went so far as to suggest a public committee hearing in the legislature this session to get as many opinions as possible before changes are made.

The Edmonton school teacher drew a round of desk-thumping and laughter when he congratulated Mike Maccagno and the Liberals for doubling their representation in the last election. Mike has become official opposition leader now that the Liberals hold two of the house's three opposition seats.

Ray Davidson (S. C. Three Hills) seconded Mr. McKinnon's motion. Chosen in a by-election only a month earlier Mr. Davidson commended the government for just about everything and said he hoped they would keep up the good work.

Building under the five year program — highways, bridges & health and welfare institutions — drew particular praise. Mr. Davidson said he was particularly pleased with the emphasis being given education. His Constituents, he said, would be delighted at plans for a new crop in-

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Clearing The Air

OTTAWA— John Diefenbaker, fighting for his political life, won an overwhelming vote of confidence at the annual general meeting of the Progressive Conservative Association. After the vote he made it clear that there was no qualification to his victory. He is leader and will continue as leader with no thought of quietly retiring in a year or more.

Before the vote on the resolution expressing confidence in his leadership went before the meeting in the Chateau Laurier there was an emotional and bitter debate over whether or not the vote would be by secret ballot. That debate left deep wounds that will be a long time healing.

It was a dramatic day in the life of the Progressive Conservative Party. Behind the scenes in the traditional smoke-filled rooms small groups had argued for and against Mr. Diefenbaker as leader. Gradually it began to appear that the strongest opposition to the leader had developed in Alberta, Central Ontario and in Quebec.

Rumours began to circulate that there had been a compromise solution reached. The compromise was supposed to be that the annual meeting would give Mr. Diefenbaker an overwhelming vote of confidence and in return after a year the national leader would quietly retire to the sidelines leaving the way clear for Duff Roblin or John Roberts or Robert Stanfield, to move into the limelight front and centre and be named national leader.

This suggestion said Mr. Diefenbaker was nonsense. There was no intention on his part to quietly retire from the scene so long as he was enjoying the good health he had today. In his speech to the annual meeting just before the vote of confidence, the national leader squelched such rumours.

"Don't get the idea that this is only for a short time," said Mr. Diefenbaker referring to the resolution of confidence. He added that however far off an election might be he would lead the Party into the election "so long as the Lord gives me health which the Liberals regularly take away from me".

It was a fighting speech. It was reminiscent of the astute political campaigner at his best in 1957 and 1958. He played on the emotions of the Tories. He pulled out all stops. He attacked the Liberal Government; scoffed at its record; claimed the Conservatives had done much better and would do better again. He showed once again that he is a formidable campaigner. But there were many among the delegates who were not stirred. They had had enough of the old campaigner, no longer for them is he the spellbinder. But they were in the minority. The majority loved it. They gave him a standing ovation.

Cleverly he stressed that personally he would not worry whether it was a secret vote or a standing vote that gave him a vote of confidence. "If you decide on a secret vote," he said, "That's fine with me". Then driving home his point he said, "I want to know where I stand and I want to know where you stand".

It became obvious as the meeting dissolved into a rancorous debate over whether there should be a secret ballot that Diefenbaker's opponents had blundered. They had forced the system of voting the latter, rather than Mr. Diefenbaker's leadership. They insisted that only through a secret ballot could the Conservatives be united. When they lost that fight, they were outmaneuvered because any debate on Mr. Diefenbaker's leadership was quantity cut off and consequently no agreement could develop over whether or not he was a good leader. The malcontents retired in confusion when a large majority beat down the attempt to hold a secret ballot.

When the vote was taken on the confidence motion only a determined band of between 60 and 80 stood up to record their opposition. They were booed and jeered. The small group included former Cabinet Ministers Douglas Harkness and J.M. Macdonnell. The Conservative headquarters had announced there were 1,500 registered delegates. There were not that many packed into the convention hall. With about 80 standing to vote against the confidence motion there were also an unknown number of absentions. A host one-quarter of the delegates had supported the demand for a secret ballot. Has the confidence motion been voted on by secret ballot there would have been undoubtedly a larger number of opposition votes recorded.

Those who had stood up the microphones on the floor to voice their support for a secret ballot there were 18 were subjected to hostile hung. Conservatives jammed into the convention hall were occupying all available seats. They stood three deep behind the press tables. As those spoke who said they wanted a secret ballot, delegates behind the press table muttered such comments as:

"Shut up, you're doing the party no good!" "We're for John". "The Liberals are here this," and "Why don't you get out of here like that". Mr. Diefenbaker had declared that no leader can maintain here dedicated on ever march forward toward the for while fearing someone behind him will advertise. He pleaded for unity. He appealed for support. His appeal won him enthusiastic applause and cheers and the delegates rejected the pleas of the dissidents who wanted to record their opposition to his leadership via secret ballot.

Later after the vote Mr. Diefenbaker in an interview flatly declared: "The vote I received was wonderful. There is no compromise, only in the minds of those who invent it. This is it, there are no ands, ifs or buts I am the leader and I intend to remain as leader. There are no alternatives. That vote cleared the air. There are no qualifications in it. I have received a tremendous vote of confidence".

"I'm going across to the bank for a minute"

Wherever Canadians live and work, a local chartered bank is nearby—a familiar, friendly source of financial services. Banking in Canada has been brought to people as in few other countries—the proportion of banking centres to population is among the highest in the world.

Every day more customers become aware that a chartered bank can not only guard their savings, cash their cheques and make loans, but help in many other ways too. They find new banking services being introduced, others being changed, improved or enlarged. For example: personal money orders, life-insured loans, company payroll plans, night depositories, banking by mail, safety deposit boxes—the list could go on and on.

The local branch of the bank is the one place where you'll find complete banking facilities—all under one roof.

YOU DO NOT WANT TO SCRUB, BUT YOU DO WANT A SPOTLESS GLISTENING FLOOR!

Thereby proper maintenance floors for forty years ago.

It protects the surface, the wax coating takes the wear. It makes cleaning easier, the dirt doesn't stick to the hard, dry wax film; it provides a gloss which can be renewed. Floor waxes are divided into two categories: (a) Polishing, which must be rubbed, and (b) Self-polishing, which dries to a shine. Self-polishing wax is recommended for asphalt and rubber tile.

ARE YOUR FLOORS A PROBLEM

Tacky or sticky floors — Tackiness on waxed floors may be caused by insufficient rinsing when cleaning the floor, by dirt, or by extreme amount of humidity.

Cure: Remove the old wax coating with a neutral cleaning preparation. Rinse well with clear water before applying a fresh wax coating.

Streaking of Wax: This is usually caused by an alkaline condition on the floors. Cure: Rinse the floor well with a mixture of one pint of vinegar to a gall of water. Then give it a good rinse with clear water and allow to dry completely before re-waxing.

Lack of Water Resistance: When a water-repellent self polishing wax does not seem to resist water spotting, this is the result of improper cleaning or rinsing before the wax was applied. Cure: Do not apply wax over a soapy film left on an unrinsed floor. If you do the wax will then come off when liquids are spilled on the floor or when the floor is damp mopped with clear water.

Yellowing of Durable Types of Floor This is caused by a build-up of layers of wax. In the centre of the floor where traffic occurs, the wax is worn off, and on the sides it just builds up and up and eventually turns yellow. Cure: Do not use unused portions of the floor every time you wax. Simply buff those areas to a shine again. Clean floors of all wax at least once a year.

CREDIT HELPS FARM AREA

Mr. L. R. Rose, Credit Supervisor for the Farm Credit Corporation in Alberta, has advised that there has been a great interest among farmers in the S. A. 34 in borrowing money from the Farm Credit Corporation.

The Federal Farm Credit Act operates under the Hon. Harry Hays, Minister of Agriculture, and brings new and enlarged credit facilities to the service of Canadian Agriculture. Long-term loans are made available to farmers at 5 percent interest and have received wide acceptance by farmers. Money is available for various purposes, but chiefly to enable farmers to increase the volume of their farm business.

Mr. W. G. O'Brien, Alberta Branch Manager and Co-ordinator of Activities for Western Canada for the Farm Credit Corporation, states that to date for the 1963-64 fiscal year 3,500 loans have been made to farmers in Alberta for a total expenditure of $7,500,000.

In the S. A. area for 1963 year, a total of $548,000 was lent to farmers. The average loan amounted to $18,600. Of the amount lent, 71% was for purchase of land, 9% for clearing and breaking, 7% for construction of houses, 2% for construction of out-buildings, 6% for the purchase of stock and 5% for miscellaneous items, such as drilling wells, installing water and sewerage. The remaining 1% was to retire existing loans.

The No. 34 sub area as illustrated on the map is the best route is handled by Mr. T. L. Arvidt, who is located in the Post Office Building a Wainwright. He is available for interviews every Monday and on other days by appointment. He will be pleased to discuss credit requirements with any farmer who feels he can use credit to his advantage. Application should be submitted early to avoid delay when the appraisal season opens in the spring.

Nature Notes

(By Stanley Zazelenchuk)

TOOLS OF OUTDOOR SUN

Spring, the season of outdoor activity is almost here. Nature lovers everywhere will spend a good deal of their free time on field trips and hikes. Now is the time to check your equipment. Is it serviceable? Do you think you need something else for your special hobby? What do you need for outdoor science study?

Before investing funds in any equipment you should know how much time you are going to spend on your hobby. It would be foolish to invest substantial amounts of money on expensive equipment which you might use once or twice a year. The expense and amount of equipment should depend upon how much you intend to use it.

For bird-watching, binoculars are an invaluable aid and one of the first pieces of equipment desired. However, binoculars are expensive and deserve the very best care you can offer. Adjust the strap that goes around your neck. If too long the binoculars will swing and bang as you walk and this is in no easy way to damage them. Always keep them in a case if possible, and on no occasion take them from around your neck. If you try to carry them in your hand, you are certain to set them down & this is the way you lose them. You might want to use lense covering to prevent scratching, and certainly as soon as you get home put them away.

Wear clothing with plenty of pockets or space — the more the better. Keep a notebook and pencil handy, also your field guide. Cover your field guide (book) with a plastic cover to protect it.

If you are insect hunting, such hunting or in fact hunting any small thing, you will want a magnifying glass. Put it on a string or chain & wear it around your neck. It can easily slip out of your pocket and become lost.

Your knife, a very important item should also be attached to you. Select a simple one. Keep your knife sharp, well greased to avoid rust & it should give you good service.

Insect collecting requires a fine mesh net. Choose cloth nerves well as a mesh for your homemade net. Your jar for collecting specimens should be of plastic as this eliminates risk of injury. If you must use a jar, wrap it in adhesive tape for safety.

Many other items of outdoor equipment could be added to this list, such as a compass, a small lens for for minerals, bags for collecting, camera for recording — these all have their uses. However, don't overload yourself. Weight has a tendency to multiply in the process of a long hike. Remember the same purpose; take only the minimum. Good luck.

VITAMIN "A" FOR CALF SCOURS

J. J. Kallal, Livestock Fieldman with the Dept. of Ag., advises cattlemen to consider feeding Vitamin A to their pregnant cows at least a month, and preferably three months prior to calving, and for a few weeks after they have calved.

According to a prominent Montana nutritionist, quoted by Mr. Kallal, calf scours are practically eliminated when cows are fed large amounts of Vitamin A before and after calving. It was also found that treatment for scours was more effective in the few cases which occurred.

The nutritionist says Vitamin A is required in greater amounts to prevent calf scours than it is for reproduction. Even though alfalfa is a good source of carotene, rutileness cannot depend upon roughage for an adequate amount unless they have it in large quantities.

The amount of Vitamin A recommended for each cow is 30,000 units per day for a month or more prior to calving and up to 50,000 units per day for a few weeks after calving if scours have been a problem.

Another situation which contributes to calf scours, is the presence of nitrates in the feed or water. More than 50% of the roughages sampled in his area showed that between 0.2 and 0.4 percent nitrate. Although this is not a toxic level for cows, it may affect their carotene or vitamin A absorbtion rates. For this reason the Montana nutritionist recommends that stockmen have their roughages and water analyzed. If the nitrate content of roughages is more than 0.2 percent or the water content more than 10 parts per million, extra vitamin A should be fed to all pregnant cows.

The first newspaper advertisement, in our modern sense of the word, appeared in 1647.

Down Memory's Lane

(By Mrs. F. M. Cantlon, Hardisty, Alberta)

A REAL PIONEER FAMILY IN THE YEAR 1918

In the year of about 1918, a family consisting of the father, mother 3 girls and 2 boys, came over from North Dakota, U. S. A. and settled on a quarter section near the old Cantlon Homestead. They probably would not have come at all, but this quarter section in Manitoba had been willed to the mother and as they just rented the farm in Dakota on which they lived, and couldn't even make a meagre living on it, they decided to move. This quarter section was exception fly productive. In fact is, to this day, being situated on the beak of a small stream. But the house was just a log shack, and the barn was made of sod.

As always, for obvious reasons, I sh ll use fictitious names.

One would seldom find a happier, more generous person than Mrs. White, in spite of their abject poverty. Although pitifully poor as far as this world's wealth goes, no one ever passed her door, if she saw them, without being invited in for a cup of tea. Their furniture consisted of just the barest necessities, and a poor assortment i that.

The little log shack stood upon a hill with no protection from the winds whatever, not even a tree. When it was first built the logs were chinked together tightly enough, but with the passing of time the chinking crumbled, and one could see daylight through several places especially around the windows.

Mr. White was a smaller-th n average man, while his wife was just the opposite, a woman who weighed around 200 pounds.

Their only mode of transportation (besides shank's pony) was a most delapidated old buggy and an ancient "bag of bones" for a horse, the likes of which was never seen in that part of the country, especially in those days when a farmer's pride were his well-cared-for and beautiful horses. It was a common sight to see one of the f mily driving into town with this outfit, the poor old horse barely moving along. Every so often the driver would become disgusted with the slow progress, and jump out of the buggy, grab hold of the halter and start running, actually pulling the horse along. When the driver figured the speed had improved some, she or he would jump in the buggy. But just as soon as the old horse felt the added weight it would slow down to a walk again, usually stopping to eat a bit of the grass. Then the driver had to repeat the idea in front again. With out-fits like that it was a long day's job to go to and from town (12 miles).

Quite often when it was necessary to make a trip to town, rather than bother with the old horse, Mrs. White would start out walking, almost certain to be picked up by a passing rig, any at least, and maybe part of the way home again. Sometimes the poor old soul wasn't lucky and had to walk the 12 miles, being such a big woman this was quite an undertaking.

One year Mr. White had been able to sow a few acres of wheat. This was unusual, as mostly they didn't have the seed. Crops were good that year and Mr. White had previously bought two bails of twine thinking that would be enough. But before he had finished cutting his few acres he found he needed at least 2 more bails of twine. Mrs. White said she would walk in for it, starting early and taking her time. She carried the twine in a bag on her back.

Incidentally she always carried a can-opener and spoon in the pocket of her dress whenever she went to town whether driving or walking. There was one beautiful shade tree along the road about half way into town. Going IN Mrs. White didn't feel the need of nourishment or rest, but she always bought a can of tomatoes (12c a can) and a loaf of bread. If she was not able to catch a ride home she would always stop when she came to that big tree, get comfortably settled, open the can of tomatoes, and, breaking chunks of bread from the loaf, would thoroughly enjoy her little(?) snack. She would then lie down & enjoy a rest. Sometimes she wouldn't start for home until the cool of the evening. Why should she? She had enjoyed a snack and was quite comfortable. Also there was more of a chance of getting a lift in the evening.

But notwithstanding these and many, many more hardships, these, and many more folks in like circumstances in those days, were really happy in their way of it, worries & all, taking each day as it came, practicing the old saying of, "This is another day. Let tomorrow take care of itself".

Ratepayers Send Congratulations To Lodge Staff

SEDGEWICK — The Annual Meeting of the Ratepayers of the Municipal District of Flagstaff No 62, was held in Sedgewick on Saturday, February 15th, 1964.

With about 80 ratepayers present, Mr. C. P. Hayes was elected as the chairman for the meeting Mr. C. B Robertson acted as secretary

The minutes of the 1963 meeting were read and adopted. Out of the minutes came the fact from Reeve Alfred Rands that several traffic signs had been erected in conformance with a 1963 resolution. Also that Council had passed By-Law 277 granting right to cut and harvest hay and other crops on road allowances to farmers adjoining such allowances.

Meeting was informed that a weed "Cut" had been purchased for use in beckslopping for farmers wishing it, but 1963 had been so wet that not as much of this work as contemplated had been completed.

Reeve Rands explained that the Policy Position to date indicated Council entering the future M. D. He also advised that newspaper reports indicate the Provincial Government had postponed formation of a Municipal Police Force for a year, due to indications that RCMP were going to be thought to enlarging its force to take care of Municipalities.

Municipal Inspector's Report

The 1963 Municipal Inspector's Report was read and accepted

Financial Statement

It was agreed by the meeting that the report be gone over page by page, as Reeve Rands informed the ratepayers that the M. D., up to the present, had been able to maintain a debt free status.

The rise in the Municipal Rate for 1963 was questioned, and it was explained that the increase was due to rising costs and to provide services which are being requested. It was also disclosed that a new general assessment was being undertaken, to become effective in 1966.

The distribution of the Municipal Assistance Grant from the gasoline tax collected by the Government was explained, and Mr. J. Hillman, M. L. A., indicated that is is anticipated the Grant will be increased in 1964

Reeve's Report

Reeve Rands touched on the record passing of James L. Smith, former M. D. Secretary; Public Works; and that collections for 1963 were down slightly. Land has been purchased near Hardisty for the gravel, and the M. D. is currently hauling & stockpiling in the Bawden area. The 30-mile Forestry Trail road, which is being gravelled under the Winter Works Program.

Mr. Rands said that an estimate had been made in refunds on debentures & arrears from 58 to date, stating from January 1st, 1967 To 1984 under the M D Mutual Scheme

The Reeve indicated that Council experts to receive petitions from some areas for fire protection, and asked the meeting for some directions in this regard

Questions From the Floor

Re Stockpiling of Gravel: In fact Council's opinion this was a paying proposition because it allowed it to operate out of extra pockets, and gravel roads at most periods during the year, without a crusher.

The M. D. would, said Mr. Rands, sell crushed gravel to farmers, off the crusher belt providing there is no interference with truck haulers, and also from stockpiles if hauled by the Municipal hauler.

Fire Fighting

It was reported that petitions are being circulated at Forestburg for the M. D. to operate rural areas with fire fighting equipment, as many rural than town calls are answered. It appears the same situation exists at Daysland.

The meeting learned from a man present from the County of Wetaskiwin, that they have formed a Co-op fire fighting organization at a cost of $30 a year per member. If a nonmember called the equipment, the charge was $200. As a result it's has been saved on insurance policies.

Resolution

The following Resolution was passed by the meeting:

"Be it resolved that the Provincial Government amend the Mobile Equipment Licensing Act to include only those vehicles and equipment which moves freely about the roads of the province and requires a vehicle license, and that the Provincial Government amend the Mobile Equipment Licensing Act to specifically exclude power shovels, crane, lines, and similar equipment which must stay on the site all the time, and which does not require a motor vehicle operator".

On a request from the floor, one minute silence was observed in memory of James L. Smith, former secretary, and secretary was instructed to forward a letter of sympathy to Mrs. Smith and son Pender.

Agricultural Service Board

The Agricultural Service Board report was given by E. J. Koehli.

Arthur Bunny reported that the Forestburg-Heisler area is seeking a Municipal Seed Cleaning Plant

Chairman's Remarks

Chairman C. P. Hayes thanked the Council and the ratepayers for having him represent the M. D. on the Alberta Municipal Finance Board. Mr. Hayes is now chairman of that Corporation. He noted that very little borrowing is being done by rural municipalities.

Sanitary Inspector

The East Central Health Unit Sanitary Inspector reported on the conditions found at Sedgewick Lodge, in which he complimented the staff on the clean, excellent and sanitary conditions existing there. It was moved from the floor that a letter of congratulations be forwarded to the staff of Flagstaff Lodge.

St. Anne's Hospital

Information was requested regarding the proposed closing of the St Anne's Hospital at Hardisty, and it was explained to the meeting that the hospital had given a year's notice of closing because of difficulties in obtaining adequate staff. It was felt that some unapproved costs may have to be paid to all hospitals operating in the M. D.

Council Thanked

A vote of thanks was moved to the Council members and office staff for efficient work during 1963.

Mr. Guhle somehow managed to shut off the tractor and make his way to the house, but not before suffering badly with broken ribs and arm and severe bruises.

He was attended by Dr. Reist, and then taken to the Daysland Hospital. Later he was transferred to the University Hospital in Edmonton.

Ponoka Team Wins at M. D. Curlfest

SEDGEWICK — The Municipal Councillors from the County of Paskoka walked off with the Award in the annual Curlfest staged at Sedgewick Thursday of last week.

The event, which originated in Camrose in 1960, embraces the seven Municipalities which border on the County of Camrose. The first hosts were the then M. D. of Camrose. In 1961 the affair was held in Stettler, Paaska hosted the event in 1962, and Wetaskiwin in 1963. The trophy, which is up for grabs each year, was donated by Mr. Hume ex-Mayor of Camrose.

This year the Curlfest attracted Councillor teams from all the areas, and was entered in by rebelsins, girls and all composites, who picked up the expense tabs for the day.

Curling games were enjoyed, with a round-robin series determining the winner, and during the banquet hour in the evening, the Ponoka team was presented with the award by Rudy Magnussen on behalf of Mr. Hume.

Just where Flagstaff M. D. ended up in the play is not certain, but it appears they had a tough time competing against six Counties.

Entertainment during the evening was provided by Mr. and Mrs. Ralf Jacobsen in vocal duet, with Mrs. D. Bloom at the organ, and by Mike Kanily and Mrs. Austin Smith, who also imparted a pair of guitar players and singers from Camrose.

Speakers were C. P. Hayes & Mr. H. W. Smith, who brought greetings to the councillors and secretaries.

Hike In Pay For M. L. A.

Although there are only rumblings at the moment, word has it that a move will be made during the present session of the Legislature to bring about a pay boost for Alberta's M. L. A's. Already the grow and eons are being tossed around, with some thinking the increase is justified, while others are just as certain that members are overpaid already for what they do. Being of a fearless nature and committed to my own reasoning, I may just as well get into the thing at the outset and let my M.L.A. know exactly where I stand, just in case he is entertaining the notion of voting himself an increase. He probably won't read any further than the immediate above sentence, but in case he does, here is my opinion.

Most people think that a member of the Legislative Assembly sits in the House (sometimes) for a period of six weeks during the early spring of the year when he couldn't be doing much of anything else anyway, and then draws on the public coffer for his fat pay-cheque. The rest of the year he sits around on blue serge, twiddeling his thumbs and waiting for a repeat performance. Well, all members know, and some of who, aren't know too, that this is just not so. Many members are serving on committees and various groups which occupy a good portion of their "free" time. Those who are not burdened with this sort of work, still have their time occupied by being expected to be at the back and call of every social, civic and municipal organization in their constituency, who want a ribbon cut, a "first stone" laid or a curling rock bogged; even a baby kissed. He is expected to be there at his own expense; he is expected to always have a smile on his face and a speech in his head; to be on time, stay late and drive home sober. He is plied with every conceivable demand for special favors for special areas. He is expected to know all the answers, never ask any questions himself, and obligate himself to all manner of things.

All this notwithstanding, he is expected to do his job without mistakes, without favortism, with equality for all and with malice never a forethought. And to top it all off he is expected to continue to do his increasingly difficult job without expecting an increase in pay.

This corner is for an increase in pay for M.L.A's., with some provisos.

The increase should be moderate, as all increases should be, to keep gradual pace with the economy. A sudden large increase leaves a bad taste. The increase should all be taxable. This last, just to keep members in touch with the herd.

The Road To Prosperity!

It would be a very useful thing indeed if we were to take time out every once in a while to count our blessings here in this great land of ours. Thanks to a political and economic system which makes us among the freest people in the world, we find ourselves with a per capita wealth second only to the people of the United States. As a people we have more and better medical care and more of the other good things in life than people living anywhere else but on the North American continent.

Right now we are going through another period of expansion. Last year we had a six percent increase in our Gross National Product and there is every indication that in this year our economy will grow at about the same rate.

The year 1963 was one of steady advance, with unemployment reduced, industrial slack taken up and the payment position improved. Here we are, a tiny part of the world's population, and yet we enjoy so many of the good things of this world. Obviously, there must be a reason. Canadians have believed, that democracy is a pretty sound system, and we have been reasonably successful in keeping ourselves informed about problems and issues of the day and expressing ourselves through elected representatives. But we should never forget about democracy and our role as individuals.

The history of nations has been that, as people have grown wealthy and secure, they have also grown apathetic and indifferent to the major problems of the day and left it to a handful of people to manage the affairs of government for them. When that happens, the few take matters into their own hands, and right and privileges of the many are ignored and forgotten.

We have been successful, too, because we recognize the virtues and values of the economic system of competitive private enterprise. Men have been free to exercise their skills, their ingenuity, their enterprise in the fields which interested them most. As a result, there has been competition and we, as consumers, have reaped the benefits.

In the light of what is presently taking place, there is little wonder perhaps that people become a little complacent and say that everything is going so well, let's not rock the boat, let's not worry about it, let things go on as they have been going.

Well, the truth is that there are still a number of problems, including unemployment and slow economic growth, and it would be very foolish of us to believe that prosperity is assured without any effort on our part. The Minister of Trade and Commerce stated in his year-end statement that a further substantial broadening of the industrial structure has still to be brought about. He recognized that the economic scene in 1963 was brightened by the fortuitous fillip of Russian grain purchases and by increases in government purchases of goods and services. While there is some indication that there will be a continuation of large - scale foreign grain purchases, this may not last forever and when it is considered too that government purchases have been at the expense of continuing government deficits, then it is obvious that the situation merits our continued study.—Newsletter.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH FREE ENTERPRISE?

In all the current discussions about proposed pension plans, provincial and federal, a great cry arises from one segment of the populace that the government representatives who would like to see the plans handled by insurance companies are simply playing into the hands of the wealthy businessman.

Isn't it about time to clarify public thinking? Upon what historical basis or proven facts do these pseudo-socialists base the claim that the state can handle pensions and insurance more efficiently than private companies? Some state ownership has been necessary in Canada, where vast territory and light population would have prohibited private development. But in almost every case public ownership has meant staggering financial losses. The CNR and TCA are cases in point.

And why the sudden suspicions about the honesty and efficiency of insurance companies? Are you aware that an insurance company's methods of doing business are regulated at every turn by government itself? Insurance companies dare not so much as alter a few words in one of their policies without the approval of the appropriate government department.

That these companies are both honest and efficient is amply borne out by the mere fact of their existence. The public is hardly so gullible as to support crooked companies all these years. These companies have long since accumulated the experienced personnel and the necessary know-how to operate pension plans. Why would anyone want our governments to start assembling all the information required to run a pension plan of its own? One of Canada's greatest weaknesses is its multiplicity of civil servants. Is there any sound reason to add another vast department? — Wingham Advance-Times.

"THAT'S NOT STANDARD EQUIPMENT FOR THE MEDITERRANEAN!"

Provincial Affairs

(By John Warren)

EDMONTON — The familiar pattern of requests for more services and less taxes took shape early in the first session of the 15th Alberta legislature.

Almost every speaker who rose to take part in the throne speech debate called for new roads, schools, hospitals and other capital works at the same time deploring the steady increase in property taxes.

Their solutions to the problem varied widely, however.

Edgar Gerhart (S.C. Edmonton) thought more money would eventual ly find its way into provincial coffers if corporation tax rates were reduced to attract new head offices and development.

At least three members wanted to see royalties from the Athabasca oil sands, when production gets underway, channelled directly into the education foundation program.

Ernest Lee (SC Stavertown) suggested in his maiden speech that a sales tax might be the key to taking the east burden off the shoulders of property owners.

Only one person came up with a definite statement about where the additional revenue for education would come from. Education Minister Aalborg made it very clear that the increase was going to hit just about where everyone expected it to—in greater property taxes.

He outlined proposed revisions in the foundation program for school financing which would draw another $10 million this year from municipal property taxes and add to it greater sums from general provincial revenues.

It appears the same people will be nicked with an increase in taxes to support hospitalization also.

After Telephone Minister Raymond Reirson said AGT rates would increase this year also, rookie opposition member Bill Dickie (L-Calgary) reminded the government all that was not "socialistic work".

Mr. Dickie launched a wide-ranging attack on half a dozen programs and was condemned as erroneously from the government benches last speaker Arthur Dixon had to call for order.

Public committee hearings to study education problems, particularly problems of an expanding university, and health and welfare plans were called for. It seems doubtful that they will be held. Premier Manning has already announced one committee session will be held to hear submissions on a major CPR redevelopment scheme in Calgary that would involve legislative changes.

Most rural delegates cornered the government for its proposed action on a federal-provincial crop insurance program which they main tained will provide farmers with a needed measure of security.

But at least two of them, Mr. Lesvitt and Ezell Montgomery (SC Peace River) were strenuous in criticism of northern development and homesteading policies.

It seems more apparent every day that the government will be giving serious study to establishment of a Northern Affairs department to coordinate the somewhat disjointed programs affecting the north.

Mr. Montgomery suggested it be given an initial sum equal to that spent on irrigation in the south $18 million last year.

Citing the case of M. M. Verigin, Willingdon-Two Hills member Nebalize Reichl called for a thorough shakeup of legislation that permits a livestock buyer to take possession of stock without having the money on hand to pay for it.

Highways minister Gordon Taylor announced the first stretch of 70-mile-per-hour road would be opened this spring between Red Deer and Lacombe. The limit would be 50 at night — both increases of 5 miles an hour over present limits.

Mr. Taylor also said a plan would go into eff ct July 1st which would force uninsured drivers to pay 6% into the unsatisfied judgement fund in order to obtain license plates.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

STEALING THE SPOTLIGHT:

OTTAWA — Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker denounced the throne speech opening the second session of the 25th Parliament, at mid-month as a pallid document. In a sense he was right, since most of the measures which the Federal Government proposed were leftovers from the last session and therefore had already been anticipated.

Just because there was so little new or unexpected in the speech itself, two new developments which embraced both Mr. Diefenbaker and Prime Minister Pearson on the battle of a nationalism succeeded in talk ing the spotlight.

During the course of the Conservative annual meeting in Ottawa earlier in February, Mr. Diefenbaker found himself confronted with a resolution from the Quebec wing of the party calling on him to recognize Leon Balcer as the Conservative Leader in Quebec and his own chief lieutenant. The latter suddenly appeared to make it clear that he was prepared to accept the proposal. As if to underline the point, Mr. Balcer, the member from Three Rivers, was given the seat of honour alongside the Conservative chieftain when the Commons assembled at opening.

Up to that point all was well. Then Mr. Diefenbaker felt compelled to call a press conference in order to lash out at the devastating weakness of the program just unfurled by Mr. Balcer.

Daysland Red Cross Plans March Canvas

(Delores Dolanz)

DAYSLAND — The annual meeting of the Daysland Red Cross society was held in the Town Office on Feb. 19th with 8 present. The financial report was read, revealing that the 1963 campaign realized $643.00, and $61.00 received through memorials, for a total of $704.00.

The re-election of officers for the next year, returned Mr. Chas. Campbell as president and Mr. Cliff Driedger as secretary-Treasurer. Mr. Blake was voted in as vice-president, for the annual campaign, planned for early in March. The President will be in charge of the rural areas and Pats Schnell, with the help of Rose Heck, for the Town.

Some discussion was given to organizing for a Blood Donor Clinic for Daysland, but it was felt that this would have to be promoted by the community.

Mr. Paul Schnell suggested that with the annual Provincial Recreation Conference scheduled for Feb. 28th in Calgary, both representatives should be encouraged to attend, and in order to do this the Daysland Society should allocate $25.00 to the delegate from our district to cover the costs.

Luncheon Meeting Discusses "Centre"

DAYSLAND — A luncheon meeting was held in the Daysland Hotel with the 16 present, being a good cross section of organizations and clubs in the district. Mr. Jack W. Riddel, Asst. Supervisor of Community Programs, was speaker Mr Howard Carroll, school principal gave a report on the number of children attending school (400). This number would increase by 50 in the next two years. Mr Carroll also reported on recreation facilities at the school, and with the addition of rooms in the last few years, the school playground has been greatly reduced in size. Any further building or expansion would likely require further recreation facilities

Mr. Riddel gave a talk on the help available through their department in planning, drawings and financing. He said that specifics are available whenever required. Many centre now have a full or part-time Recreation Director, and if this person is properly qualified, some assistance is given on his or her salary.

Some of the points Mr. Riddel mentioned were that courses will be held in July for training recreation directors; Daysland should inquire into the Battle River Town Planning Commission; Application for such a Centre must be in by June 30, 1964. We should book out and chart the present grounds, and their department would make the formal drawing of the grounds. It was suggested that the Council set up a recreation committee of one councilor, one from the school and three picked at large (one a woman). This committee is to further investigate the Community Centre possibilities, and carry on the planning

The balance of the meeting was held a round-table discussion until 2:30 p. m., after which a drive was taken to view the school area. Areas, Curling Rink, Ball Diamond and Picnic Playground. As this was the day of the hockey tournament, Mr Riddel recommend to watch part of a game before returning to Edmonton.

Nature Notes

(By Stanley Zazulenchuk)

THE VALUE OF BIRD STUDY!

Have you ever asked yourself "Why study birds?" Probably the best answer to the question is that birds are indispensable allies of agriculture. Insect damage to farm crops, domestic animals, wildlife and forests is staggering. These losses affect us all. No one individual is the principal sufferer.

All insects tend to multiply very rapidly. Left unchecked they would soon reign supreme. Yet as a matter of fact their numbers tend to remain relatively stable from decade to decade. Of all the natural checks on insect populations, undoubtedly the most reliable and important is the army of birds. For many of our feathered friends, insects form either the main or exclusive diet. These animated mites are busy from dawn to dusk, diligently searching for these insects.

Another important reason for bird study is pleasure. Among activities that enhance and enrich life, outdoor activities rate among the top. They are a rich source of pleasure. Mankind is very near nature. In fact we could say a part of nature. Should anyone have the right to deny any individual a fair opportunity to enjoy this world and to draw inspiration and happiness from it?

Outdoor activities contribute directly and substantially to the physical and mental health of an individual. Certainly bird study is responsible for many health-giving hours.

Feeding and caring for birds, especially in times of stress, with the sense that one is aiding in the survival of valuable and useful creatures is certainly training in good citizenship, and it certainly helps foster a feeling of sympathy. Sympathy for fellow, weaker forms of life. This behaviour strengthens the principle of sympathy in one's nature.

Finally bird study is a training in discipline. Imagine waiting nearly endlessly in a blind to get a certain photograph of a bird, or rising early mornings to observe bird life at its optimum. Is this not a training in discipline?

In spite of all benefits accrued from bird study, wanton and often purposeless destruction of bird life still exists. So long as the population is not informed of the birds' true value we can expect to witness more of this primative behavior.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS!

The 1964 edition of "Recommended Varieties of Grain for Alberta" has arrived. Also the publication, "Private Sewage Disposal" which has been out of print for some years is now available from this office.

FARM AND CYPRESS!

This new wheat varieties, Cypress and Park, have been added to the list of recommended varieties of grain for Alberta. These are the only changes from last year in the list of varieties recommended by the Alberta Varietal Zonation committee.

Cypress, a awnfly resistant variety, is now recommended for most of the light brown and brown soil zones of Alberta, wherever awnflies are a problem. It possesses greater resistance to these crop predators than Chinook.

Park has been added to the list of varieties recommended for western and northern sections of the province for most of the black and grey wooded zones. However, for a large block in the Peace River area it is not recommended.

HIGHWAYS DEPT. TO LICENSE TRAILERS

Gordon E. Taylor, Minister of Highways, has announced that his Department was acceding to the many requests received over the last two or three years and would commence licensing trailers, effective April 1, 1964.

Considerable difficulty was encountered last year when trailers went outside of the Province and many were apprehended for not having a license. Alberta was, until now, the only Province not licensing trailers.

Within the Province a great many complaints were received as the trailer hitch obscured the license plate on the vehicle.

Licenses for trailers may be purchased from the Motor Vehicle Branch for an annual fee of $5.00 for the full year, for $3.00 for the remaining part of the year after September 1, and for $1.25 for the remaining part of the year after January 1, 1965.

The trailer plates will be registered in the name of the owner and they are transferrable to other trailers owned by the same owner

CAPITAL HILL CAPSULE!

The one shot American payment of $27.5 million (Canadian) for 30 years use of Canada's share of power produced on the Columbia south of the border as a result of Canadian storage dams, is proving not a simple a nit looks! A capital inflow of this size in four days would put Canada's reserves of gold and U. S. dollars too high for Washington's liking. As a result the money will be invested in long-term U. S. bonds on a standby basis. Meanwhile the ups must find an equivalent amount in this country to pay cash to British Columbia in October. It will have a choice between borrowing it on the open market and taking a chance of boosting interest rates, or borrowing from the Bank of Canada and risking the inflationary impact incomes they had, and true to their reputation for independence, they refused any and all help from their children.

Mrs. White managed to hold that job for a number of years, paying enough income tax, also into the Social Security, that when she quit her work she was able to draw a good, healthy monthly cheque.

It seems impossible that this dear old soul, through all these hard times and work, as well as seeing her husband pass away, later, but I never met her but what she had a smile and a cheery word.

The last time I saw Mrs. White she had retired, and lived in a wee new 2-room cottage on the outskirts of the town. She still had very few comforts, choosing rather to spend most of her monthly cheque on somemore unfortunate people she met. I was in those town a few years ago, and had bought a drum. I thought it might please her if I "modelled" it just for her benefit. She looked at it for a moment, then said, "Yes, I do like it, but it needs a brooch on the shoulder." Straightaway she took one from the front of her dress and pinned it on mine. I am sure it was the only brooch she had too. Believe me I treasure that brooch more than any I have or hope to have, and wear it only on special occasions.

She has gone on to her reward, some years ago, I am sure the world is less rich without her, but "Our loss is heaven's gain".

house (one room up in the loft), as well as 2 small rooms on the main floor, with green poplar poles, the same as most early pioneers when they first took homesteads there.

Mr. White would haul those poles from the bush, some 24 miles round trip, unload them in the door-yard close to the kitchen door. The door faced south and the kitchen range was opposite the door and across the kitchen. When Mrs. White needed wood for the stove, she braced the outside door open, and with the farend of the pole still out at the woodpile, would drag it into the kitchen and opening the little front stove door, push the one end of the pole into the stove, continuing this until it had burned up far enough that she could shut the outside door. Sometimes these green poles, without being dried out a bit beforehand would refuse to burn. Then Mrs. White would bravely grab the cord, and can I not portray a bit into an old can as would be the safer way), pour about a quart or so on the almost dead fire, and, you you have guessed it — Whoo-whoo-whoo, it would roar up the short stovepipe chimney until all the coolid had burned off the wood, then it would gradually die down grin. Sometimes she had to repeat this procedure 2 or 3 times before the battle boiled. Mr. White just didn't seem to have the energy to backsaw the poles. It was all he could do to feed them, although he did occasionally give some for the heater; but mostly they just burned "prairie chips" in the heater. He wasn't a well man at all, dying a few years later from cancer.

None of the neighbors dared to offer help in any way, as they were too independent. If one of us did venture a hand, they would cover-up to pay us back. However the children are all married now, and in very much better circumstances than the folks ever were.

Years slipped by. The 2 old folks were too lonely to stay in the old log shack any longer. They wanted to spend their twilight years down in the States where they both had spent their earlier life. So they moved to N. Dakota again where Mrs White got a job washing dishes in a big restaurant. Mr. White had, by this time, become so ill he could not work at anything lucrative. Some days Mrs. White had to stand for as long as 10 hours at a time, it being so heavy on her feet, this was cruel; but it was the only source of

"Got the order, got a bank loan – we're all set"

When a businessman wins an order or contract, he knows he can turn to his local bank for financial assistance. A loan may be needed for one or more reasons—to lay in a supply of raw materials, to buy new equipment, to meet a payroll, or to cover other costs until the firm receives payment for its products or services.

With bank credit, companies large and small can take on projects they couldn't handle if they had to depend on their own financial resources. Moreover, the chartered banks have steadily widened the scope of their commercial lending to serve newer expanded short-term needs. Every day, local bank managers are lending to producers, manufacturers, farmers, retailers and others, to help them develop opportunities, meet competition, keep men and machines busy.

Commercial loans are one of many essential services your local bank provides, to the benefit of everyone in the community.

THERE'S A MORAL IN IT

Once in a while it is the good fortune of an English teacher to come across a fresh, original piece of writing by a student. When he does, it's a drink of cold, pure water after days of wandering in the desert of mangled syntax, crucified spelling, howling triteness and tortured thinking through which it has been ordained that he should plod. It happened to me this week.

At first I thought my judgment might be prejudiced, because I was quite fond of the youngster in question, I read it again. It still sounded fine.

To make sure, I had it mimeographed and read it on my grade 11 students as a piece for critical analysis. Their smarts and giggles confirmed my first impression. Then we discussed it in depth. They could find little wrong with it. It had unity, coherence and emphasis. The tone was consistent. Well, here it is, just as it was written, on an examination under stress. See what you think.

The title was: The Wanderings of a Ten-Dollar Bill.

"My mother was extremely large and could make only loud, whirring sounds in her throat. The thing that puzzles me is how I turned out as I did when she was such a fatso.

"Anyway, when I popped out feeling like a wet piece of cabbage, a one, dark man with a dark cigar in his mouth & a left eye clutched me and said, "Oh, darling, lovely." He and the rest of the boys kissed me all over, even on the Queen's head. I was later to discover that I had the honor of being the first bill in my last batch of counterfeit money. I was the one who would set the plot in motion.

"First of all I was given to an unsuspecting old lady for a packet of cigarettes. The decrepit old woman hesitantly handed them the change, all in nickles. They turned out to be stamped out, leaving me to face the consequences. It turned out that the old lady was a trifle goofy.

"One fine day she traded me for pretzels, all pennies. I was pushed wildly into the buyer's pocket where I met a girl ten-dollar bill. It was so very and dark & there that I have to admit I was a little fresh.

"Suddenly I was jostled out and traded for more cigarettes. The store owner grabbed me and pulled. "The Queen doesn't have that many bumps on her nose." The trail was hot.

"Well, my boys were found. Unfortunately, they hadsteadily died from lung cancer because they had smoked so many cigarettes when setting bills in motion.

"I write this while sitting amidst coals in a large furnace. The penetrating heat is beginning to stifle me. My breath is coming shorter, the happy hunting grounds are coming nearer.

"But the moral of my story is, 'If you're going to produce counterfeit money, make only one bump on the Queen's nose and always buy guns, not cigarettes'."

The above essay was written by my daughter Kim, age 13, grade 8. A chip off the old creek? I'm only surprised that her second last sentence didn't say, "My breath is coming in short pants."

Killam Minor Hockey

MRS. DOUG KINZER, REPORTER

Our minor hockey teams, under the leadership of four or five public-spirited men, have been going great guns these last few weeks. The boys have been decked out with brand new uniforms, thanks to the generosity of some interested organizations in the community. All this is to the good, but one thing is sadly lacking, namely the support and the presence at the arena of the parents or guardians of these boys when they are playing their hearts out in hoping to become the future Gordie Howes or Stan Mikitas, or possibly a Killam Indian. What is the matter with the parents of these kids? Are they not interested enough to come out and encourage their offspring to become the hockey players of the future, or are they willing to let the various coaches act as glorified baby sitters while they themselves sit home and watch some corny T. V.? Maybe they just don't care where their kids are as long as they are not bothering around the house. Think it over folks. Come out to these games and give your boys that their coaches the support and encouragement they deserve. Don't send your boys to the arena — take them yourself.

The Hi-C of Knox United Church held their by-monthly meeting in the church basement on Sunday with 13 members and 11 visitors. The guest speaker was Rev. Kloepfer, who gave a very interesting talk on his work as minister of Bissell Mission in down town Edmonton. The members thank the public for helping to make their bake sale a success.

Reps from seven organizations at Killam attended a Home and School meeting in Hardisty. Mr. Wilhelm, supervisor of provincial libraries gave a very interesting talk on the work of regional libraries, and then displayed a film on the subject.

Mrs. Terry Robinson and Dale spent Saturday at Forestburg with Mr and Mrs Roy Boone.

Miss Linne Nikiforuk entertained six of her school pals last Friday in honor of her 7th birthday.

We would like to extend a sympathy to Miss Norma Mampaey and Mr and Mrs Jos Grant, who have both undergone surgery in the U. of A. Hospital in Edmonton.

On Sunday 13 little cousins met at the home of their grandparents'. Mr and Mrs Ed Manning to extend a warm welcome to little Raymond Charles, the new son of Mr and Mrs Charles Manning. They were accompanied by their parents Mr and Mrs Gilbert Bergerson, Mr and Mrs Dan Hayes, Mr and Mrs Ray Manning Jr. Mr and Mrs Lee Manning.

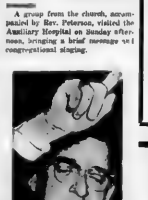
BAPTIST CHURCH

At a recent meeting of the Young Peoples executive of the Killam Baptist Church, it was decided to devote about twenty minutes of each Y. P. service to the objective of doctrine. Last Friday the Pastor introduced the five basic points of difference between Arminianism and Calvinism. This proved very interesting.

Rev. Peterson of Sedgewick gave the Sunday morning message, due to the sudden illness of the Pastor. A special welcome was extended to a first-time visitor, Miss Sandra Lynn Bartsch, infant daughter of Mr & Mrs. Gaynor Bartsch.

One of the laymen of the church, John Avis, conducted the evening service.

A group from the church, accompanied by Rev. Peterson, visited the Auxiliary Hospital on Sunday afternoon, bringing a brief message and congregational singing.



SETBACK FOR CAOUETTE. Strong Liberal wins in the Quebec by-elections of Laurier and Richelieu are interpreted as French-Canadian rejection of Real Caouette's separatist demands on Ottawa. His Creditiste party counted on Quebec voters to endorse his militancy for greater share of federal revenues. Abandoning formation of a new separatist group if defeated.

A Few Hardisty Flakes

(By Postie)

Well, after a bout with the Flu & much rest from this column, I should be in good form and put out a truly greatoffort, but no I sit down at this hammermill I appear to be at a loss as to where to begin.

I would like to express thanks on behalf of the Hardisty Legion to you wonderful people who supported our recent bingo. We made out quite well in spite of last minute adverse conditions which we planned as well as avoid. I would like to say a few words in connection with our Legion current fund raising campaign. As you may be aware, we have lost our main source of revenue as of August 1963, and as we have committed ourselves to provide accomodation for the pre-school and Well Baby Clinic without cost to this area, we are obliged to find other sources to raise funs's. Hence the program of bingos. Your support of our first effort was certainly great, and we thank each one of you.

The other point that I would like to touch upon, deals with a recent visit of a Prov. Gov. official at our Manor and School meeting to discuss the matter of libraries on the local and regional level. It would appear that the big problem at either level is one of finance, with the regional library covering a large area, giving the widest selection of books at the lowest per-capita cost. It was proposed that such a library be situated at Camrose and covering and area from Wetaskiwin to Provost, should provide the Highway 13 area with a good supply of books. The proposed library would be headed by a qualified librarian who would be in charge of stocking, recording and ordering; also repairing and rotating books from one area to another.

The meeting at Hardisty, will reps from Amisk to Daysland, set up a committee with a rep from each point, with power to add. The committee is under the chairmanship of Fr. Heffernan of Hardisty, who advises that an appointee will be invited to report progress to the Press in the area concerned. We would ask the Press readers to discuss the proposal and appoint a rep from your area, and contact Fr. Heffernan. The committee is supposed to investigate the possibilities of establishing a regional library in the area, survey the amount of support in each locality, and the support of governing bodies at all levels.

I hope that I have covered all main points, and I would advise that your comments are welcomed by the committee, so find out who is your rep and let them know your ideas.

It would appear that I have used much more than my allotted space for one week, so I'll sign thirty and get on with the polishing of the golf clubs. This weather makes one think of those evenire jars.

by the Liberal Government. That was his mistake.

Before long a reporter who had lost interest in Mr. Diefenbaker's condemnation of the Liberals wanted to know whether Mr. Balcer was now the deputy leader of the Party. After much to-ing and fro-ing, the leader contended there never was such a position in the Conservative Party.

At that particular point in time, any chance of Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Balcer singing duets together, appeared to have vanished. Within the hour, the Quebec chieftain called a press conference for his own solo performance.

"As far as I am concerned there was a resolution passed by the Quebec caucus in which it was said that I was appointed leader of the Quebec Conservatives and the chief lieutenant of the leader of the Party," he asserted.

In an effort to smooth over any ruffled feelings his remarks may have caused, Mr. Diefenbaker tried to suggest that Mr. Balcer would act as head of the party by virtue of his seniority in the Commons dating from 1948. But on that basis, the man who would actually have seniority, as Mr. Balcer pointed out, was Douglas Harkness.

If nothing else was clear, it was that Mr. Diefenbaker was going to have a lot of trouble in the future trying to prevent Quebec Conservatives from walking out of the party if he takes up his campaign against that province in order to capitalize on the anti-Quebec stirrings in the other parts of Canada.

Prime Minister Pearson's problems stemming from the clash between the two solitudes were on a less grandiose scale, but they underlined the difficulties both leaders face in these trying days.

As part of his herculean effort to weld French and English-speaking Canada closer together, or at least to prevent them from flying apart, the Prime Minister had proposed to reverse the usual order of things when it came to appointing Canadian representatives to London and Paris. He planned to dispatch former Justice Minister Lionel Chevrier, who is of French extraction but fluently bilingual, to replace George Drew as Canadian High Commissioner to the U. K. At the same time he had in mind transferring career diplomat Charles Ritchie, who is of English extraction & also bilingual, from Washington to Paris.

Stage one of the operation was duly carried out and Mr. Chevrier shipped off to London. But stage 2 ran into an unsurmountable obstacle in opposition in both Quebec and in France to the idea of sending an English-speaking Canadien to Paris.

There was nothing for it but to send another French-speaking diplomat to the post. The choice was an excellent one, Jules Leger, then Canadian ambassador in Italy and former under-secretary of state for external affairs. But the fact there would now be two French-speaking diplomats in the two most senior posts outside of Washington hardly seemed likely to do much to lessen the reaction to Quebec from other parts of the country.

And what of the throne speech that all these happenings put rather in the shadow? Well, it contained a few things that were new, but hardly of major significance.

There were interest-free loans for students at university who are in financial need, which was the most modest of four promises the Liberals made to young Canadians in the last election campaign.

There was a proposal to study the best way of limiting election expenditures, a worthwhile objective in a day when the parties compete among themselves for votes on the basis of which can make the most lavish bid for the electors' support.

And there was a plan to provide for the compulsory retirement of Senators. The age limit was not disclosed, although it is probably 75. Of more interest is whether it will apply to present members or only to those appointed in the future.

Because there is nothing new in the program does not mean that there is little business for Parliament to attend to. On the contrary, it has on its agenda one of the longest and most complex list of business ever to be considered in one session.

By the time members have finished dealing with such issues as the Canada Pension Plan, redistribution of constituencies, the overhaul of railway legislation and of the unemployment assurance fund, defence and the Columbia River treaty, and subsequent protocol they will have more than earned their pay.

The second display, held from February 17th to 19th, consisted of library books for all grade levels, and mainly Social Studies reference books for high school. The displays were available to the teachers because they were given a chance to actually see the materials before they ordered.

Ratepayers Talk Over Natural Gas

SEDGEWICK — Forty ratepayers turned out for the annual village meeting to hear the presentation of the financial statement, Inspector's report, and reports from the councillors on the last year's activities.

The financial report showed that while revenues were up, costs of operations also increased, but still ran up the village with a surplus.

Mayor Smith reported on the paving, Rec. Centre and the general affairs of the village.

The Council told the meeting that the revision of natural gas for the village was near, and all that remained was for the ratepayers to give Council the go-ahead to bring about a plebiscite and a survey of of potential users. JIVE CLUB FORMED

(By Wendy Saunders)

For the past month, many of the students of Central High have been enjoying a new noon-hour activity. It is called "Jive Club" Started by a group of interested students, the Jive Club has become very popular. Records are held twice a week either in the gym or downstairs recreation room. Music is furnished by the students who bring their favorite records. Even for the kids who do not wish to dance the Jive Club provides entertainment. Many find it enjoyable just to watch the many new dance crazes.

We hope in the near future to arrange a dance taking place soon to enable us to give prizes and make the Club still more interesting.

CAR ACCIDENT ON COUNTRY ROAD

(Dolores Dolanz)

DAYSLAND — Mr. Rudy Kostek and Mr. A. P. A. Beisner of Edmonton had a car accident on a Municipal road intersection two miles North and East of Daysland. No one was injured but the extent of damage to both cars was estimated at $1000.00. Brush on the intersection corner was to blame for obstructing the visibility.

Daysland Council Petitioned

(Dolores Dolanz)

DAYSLAND The annual ratepayers' meeting for Daysland was held on February 24th with the Mayor, six Councillors and 24 ratepayers present. Minutes and Inspector's report were read and adopted. Financial report showed the Town ended 1963 in a sound position, with indications for 1964 being favorable

Fire and Sewer

It was reported that some equipment had been acquired for the Fire Brigade; a block of new sewer line was layed and 8 connections made, for a total of $1,160.00.

Public Works

The hospital road was rebuilt and gravelled at a cost of $3,200.00, and about $7,200.00 in gravelling done on the streets. Sidewalk construction cost was $47.50 more than it was expected to be, but it was reported that the total expenditure was likely in this department. Some money was spent in mowing grass, and levelling.

Lights and Cemetery

Street lighting cost $2,677.00. Some fencing was done at the cemetery and a mower was purchased and man hired to cut grass.

Health and Welfare

There was no welfare paid in 1963. Health requisitions totalled $3,236.34. A new trench had been dug at the nuisance grounds, at $300.00.

New Business

It was recommended that in future the frontage on new lines be raised from 15 to 20 cents a foot, and that a ranking fund be set aside in case of repair to sewer systems. Water System was discussed and it was recommended that council look into it.

A petition was presented requesting that business tax be abolished in Daysland, as it was considered not equitable. Some of the petitioners asked for a flat rate or license for all, others thinking too many peddlers sold goods in town untaxed. Others favoured a straight property tax. It was felt that some trades or professions having no office from which to operate were not taxed, and it was felt they should pay a minimum tax or else the business tax should be dropped altogether. The Council said it would study the matter.

It was recommended that something be done about dogs running loose, and that council hire a recreational director and look into having transportation for junior athletic groups provided, to hockey games.

C. H. Students visit U. of A.

(By Donna Cookson)

About 30 students and 3 teachers from Central High recently attended the annual Varsity Guest Weekend activities held by the University of Alberta. The students were amazed and awed by the tremendous size and the literally endless number of interesting sights on the campus.

All were much impressed by the demonstrations given by the various departments. In the Pharmacy Department the making of aspirin and the separation of menthanol from water were shown. The Medical Building was especially popular with Centralites. Here they saw the operation of a real human brain, and were given an explanation of Mr. Bloomfield of diagnosing diabetes. At the Physical Education building everything from wrestling to diving to ballet was performed. Some of the more adventurous visitors had their leg strength and their lung capacity tested.

The Education Building and the new Library attracted much favorable comment. The beautiful architecture, attractive interior, thousands of books and the quiet studious atmosphere of the library made a deep impression on the students.

For some the evening was topped with the production of the Shakespeare play, "Hamlet". For some students Walter Kaasa as Hamlet and Ted Kemp as Horatio, did a superb job of acting. Walter Kaasa had a particularly distinct part to play as he was rarely off the stage during the three hour production. It was the "first" Shakespeare production the students had seen, and they thoroughly enjoyed it.

The Varsity Varieties completed the day for other students. An episode of skits based upon the struggle between man and woman for superiority, was greeted with much enthusiasm by the audience. Originality was the key note of the evening as was shown by the orchestra on the stage, the entrance of the actors down the aisles and the minimum of stage props and costumes. We found it hard to believe that such a play was entirely an amateur project.

Although all agreed that there was far too much to be seen in one brief day, everyone felt the experience was most enlightening, and all had a wonderful time.

LARGE CROWD AT GOSPEL SING

KILLAM The Killam Pentecostal Tabernacle was filled to capacity on Feb. 23rd for the Gospel Sing, which started at 8:30 a.m. went on to 11 p. m.

The Sing was sponsored by the C. A. Group of Killam Pentecostal Tabernacle under the able leadership of Talmage Thrasher. People were present from Provost, Metiskow, Hughenden, Amisk, Lougheed, Sedgewick, Killam, Strome, Camrose, Viking, Alliance, Forestburg.

CANADA AND NORAD!

There is no hope in war. The very great problems of this day must be defeated peacefully through the United Nations. Canada has had an influencial middle power voice in this organization, a voice commanding respect and admiration by both the super-powers and the uncommitted "new" nations. Yet the effectiveness of this voice has been seriously hampered by a vile and worthless agreement signed with the United States in 1958. This useless scrap of paper, cunningly devised by American Air Force brass, and signed by a Canadian government, has never been ratified by Congress. Norad is of great harm to Canada. It corrupts her actions in the U. N. It declares her a satellite of the United States (a very dangerous label since the uncommitted nations distrust her as much as they do Russia) and it lays her open to Russian attack, for Norad is incapable of stopping Soviet missiles. Indeed the time has come to correct this grave blunder. And correcting it will be a relatively easy matter, for as paragraph 9 states, either member may revoke the treaty at any time. What about it, Mr. Pearson? — Patrick J. Madden.

NO MORE LEADERS!

Towards the end of January, Sedgewick Central High School planned to hold elections to the various offices on the Students' Council. These elections were, however, delayed more than three weeks simply because there were so few students willing to participate. Eventually several of the new Council members were elected by acclamation. Had this been the result of unanimous agreement among the student body, all would have been well. But, unfortunately, the situation occurred because too many students did not wish to take part in the elections, or to assume the responsibility and give the time and attention required to have effective student government.

How alarming this is. For if high school students cannot even form a satisfactory students' council, it is highly unlikely that they will be able to elect and form a reliable ,intelligent government for Canada. And should the voting age be lowered to eighteen years, they soon will be doing just that.

Moreover, if students are reluctant to serve on their own councils, they cannot be expected to occupy positions of authority and become experts in their chosen fields in adulthood. Perhaps today's youth lack the courage and initiative essential to their becoming valuable, successful members of tomorrow's adult society. — Donna Cookson.

CLASS NOT COLOR!

The problem of segregation in Canada is one of class, not color. It is really the prejudices against what is deemed a lower class that causes this feeling; prejudices which are built up by years of observing and reading about the dirt, filth, and general laxity that these people apathetically accept as their lot in life Prejudice results from distrust caused by illogical and sometimes crazed actions in situations that call for methodical reasoning. Racial segregation, as such, is built on the fear that, through associations with these social outcasts, others might be dragged down to their level.

Although the feeling of apartness is usually associated with relation s h i p s among different races or cultures, it was, and still is, just as prevalent among those exclusively white. The "White Indians" of early Canada (white men who adopted Indian customs and lived in their environment) were considered to be as bad as or worse than the Indians. Today, the white "slums" of-the world are no more accepted by society than the dark-skinned ones. This, in conjunction with the fact that many educated colored people are respected and hold prominent positions, indicates the barrier is class, not color.

Having accepted the idea that the barrier between peoples is class, not color, the question that arises is, what must be done before these people can be accepted by our society without risk of their influence being detrimental to the conduct and deportment of minors, and others? The answer is obvious — education and instruction bent on raising the standard of living, and on producing an acceptable society "norm". — David Grymaloski.

LET'S LOWER THE VOTING AGE!

They're too young, too inexperienced, too naive. Is this the voters' real cry, or is it that we're too numerous, too eager and too willing to face up to what is really happening? Give them the vote, the voters cry. They're just irresponsible kids! But we reply — who are the ones taking world affairs courses that put us face to face with the world's real problems? Who are the ones that are learning practical politics and not the nominee's reputation? Who are the ones whose futures may lie in the field of politics, and are exploring this field? We are! The eighteen to twenty-one-year-olds, who have no say in our government. Who can be hung because they are responsible for their actions? Who can marry? Who can fight? Who can identify family? Who can fight and give their lives for their country? We can! The irresponsible youth.

We would question the premise that 21 is a magical number which necessarily gives the individual the required knowledge and sense of responsibility to vote. How many people older than 21 vote traditionally for a man or party rather than examining the platforms and policies of the parties? How many are aware of national and international crises? How many even cast their vote in the last election?

Are you afraid of the new ideas of youth? Afraid of their number & afraid of the challenge of awareness they have accepted and are asking you to accept? You're not? Then give us the vote. — Beth Walsh and May York.

CANADA'S RESPONSIBILITY!

Pledged through membership in NATO and NORAD, Canada helps to safeguard the freedoms, common heritage and civilization of the Western World. Her commitments to these organizations, though costly, are a major and necessary contribution to the protection of the Allies. This assistance consists of naval, air and land forces, both at home and abroad.

Most of the defenses Canada supplies to NORAD are found at home and, though absolutely necessary to safeguard both North and South America, Canada does no more than her share, yet reaps the greatest benefits. Her co-operation is a vital cog in the wheel of interdependence which is the very essence of the West's effectiveness. Canada's role, therefore, being so vital, stimulates national pride among Canadians.

To NATO Canada's commitments are mainly foreign. These forces are a positive indication of her willingness to share any responsibility in war. And, her co-operation makes possible the evolution of a common policy by the West. This combination of Western forces alone intimidates Communists to the extent that they actually fear war.

Originally, these defensive organizations were established to stem the rise of Communism. It remains now for each country to live up its responsibilities. How can Canada call herself a free nation, say she cares what becomes of the peoples of the West, or even maintain her national pride if she does not take an active part in the job to be done? In fact, Canada stands to lose everything by not participating and thus, it is a must that Canada maintain her present defensive policy. — Frank Rott and Jim McMahon.

Provincial Affairs

(By John Warren)

EDMONTON — Ted Hinman is one of those unusual cabinet ministers who speak only when they have something worthwhile to say. Friday he spoke for 1 hour and 20 minutes.

When it was all over, Mr. Hinman had brought down a budget calling for spending of $414,489,844.00, an increase of $40,566,908.00 over the last year's estimates, and a figure last left Alberta behind only Ontario and Quebec in the provincial spending parade.

In giving his ninth budget address the 57-year-old provincial treasurer noted that per capita government spending in Alberta is the highest in the country. He said the healthy state of the economy "justifies our present policy of obtaining revenue almost sufficient to meet these very large expenditures."

A tiny surplus of $36,712 expected during the current fiscal year ending March 31st will probably turn into a surplus of $20 million because of oil and gas revenues much higher than expected, said Mr. Hinman. No new taxes or tax changes were announced.

The province's rich natural resources are again expected to produce the biggest chunk of revenue in the coming fiscal year. Predicted natural resources income of $137,943,500 represents an increase of $28,963,000 from estimates for 1963-64.

Other major sources of revenue with 1963-64 figures in brackets are: Income tax $49,150,000 ($31,600,000); Fuel oil tax and motor vehicle licenses $58,816,000 ($54,253,000); Liquor revenue $26,500,000 ($25,500,000).

The budget includes "modest" increases in the remuneration of cabinet ministers and in the allowance of the opposition leader, speaker of the house and the deputy speaker.

The treasurer didn't say how much the increases would be in each category but his budget for indemnities & allowances was increased by $48,340 to $239,950. Members now receive a basic $4800 a year.

Biggest jump in expenditures was made in the department of health which has an estimated budget of $104,456,700, an increase of $17,332,960. The figure represents 30 per cent of estimated operating expenses.

The health appropriation included $73,870,000 for Alberta's hospital plan or an increase of $12,553,700. About 40 percent of the plan's costs will be recovered from the federal government.

Mr. Hinman said there will be no change in the four-cent tax levied on equalized assessments throughout the province as part of the municipalities' share of the hospital scheme. However revenue was estimated $2,500,000 higher at $9,000,000 because of an upward revision of the assessment base.

A total of $94,779,360 was provided for education, an increase of almost $10 million over 1963-64.

The government's contribution to the school foundation fund is expected to be $71,320,000, an increase of $7,530,000. Money from the fund is used to provide a basic standard of education throughout the province.

The budget allocated $14,600,000, an increase of $3,000,000 for the operation of the U. of A. at Edmonton & Calgary, and set aside $2,962,800 for campus construction.

Expenditures for public welfare increased $2,180,420 to $26,797,473, including almost $2 million for construction of homes for the aged.

The department of public works received $46,196,740, compared with $37,479,148 in the current fiscal year. Highways expenditure were estimated at $65,644,500, down $984,750.

The Letter Box

Sedgwick, Alberta
Feb. 28, 1964

Dear Mr. Editor:

May I have a short space in your very valuable paper? I have just returned from Moose Jaw, Sask., from attending the Seventh Western Canada Farm Safety Conference. As is my habit one of the first things I read is our Community Press.

I was saddened and upset to find during the time one hundred and forty seven people from all Agriculture interests in the three Western Provinces were studying farm safety, two very painful accidents had occured in our reading area.

It was a revelation to me when this body of farm people were broken up into groups to determine what the "Burning Problems" were among farmers, that Apathy was seen as the Major Problem.

Are we in this redding area apathetic to farm safety?

I wonder Mr. Editor where we have a multiplicity of organizations here how many of them have Safety Education as part of their study?

We in Alberta are very fortunate to have an active Safety Council who are more than willing to help with any project an organization wishes to set up.

It was interesting to me as Moose Jaw is one the Kiwanis Club presents a Golf Club with a Safety Trophy and a cheque for fifty dollars.

To the ladies a panel of ladies presented their ideas on "Womens Role in Safety Education." They came up with some very significant facts. You see, "Safety Doesn't Cost, It Pays."

Thank you Mr. Editor for this space.

Sincerely yours,
Florence E. Hallam
Safety Convener for Provincial P.U.A.

Two weeks ago the Community Press carried a picture of two Indian stone tools. Following is a letter from the U. of A. concerning the points.

Mr. Ralph Sorenson
Killam, Alberta

Dear Mr. Sorenson:

Thank you for sending the copy of the Community Press with the photo of your two artifacts. As you surmised, they are pestles and grinding grain; however, not for maize as that crop was not cultivated north of the Missouri Valley in prehistoric times.

We should like to examine your collection sometime next summer. Perhaps I could contact you at a later time and we could make arrangements for a meeting.

You may inform the editor of the Community Press that the pestles were used for grinding wild roots and seeds.

Sincerely yours,
Alan L. Bryce

SAWING BEE

The green poplar poles which our men had been hauling, (spasmodically), thro' the winter, had been piled up, one load on top of another until there was quite a pile waiting to be sawed up, and piled, to be used for summer fuel.

In those early years, we used every excuse we could think of, to get together, as that was the only diversion to an other-wise monotonous existence. The men used the excuse of, maybe, butchering, or sawing their wood, or possibly to put up another building, (or repair an old one).

Sometimes, we women decided we needed help to prepare a room or run some "Left-over" beef, or maybe do a quilt. But we always had occasions of "Unsniping" along with the more lucrative labour.

The men always liked to get together to discuss over the grain prices, hog and cattle market, some new kind of seed which some of them were going to sow in the spring, etc.

So, one morning in the later part of Feb., men were decided it was just about time to saw up our piles of poles.

There were no pioneers on the farms in these early years, so we sent notes to school by our children, to be given to the children of the men whom we wanted to come the next day. Unless these neighbors were sick, we could depend on them coming.

There was just one power-saw in our community, and that was owned by the district farmers. This saw was always left at the last place where it had been used, and picked up by the next farmer who wanted to use it. Each farmer furnished his own gas engine for power.

I re-call, this particular year of which I am basing my story. Dad had just finished lining the saw to the engine, when our neighbors drove into the yard. The two women were straightway in the house and after taking care of the two teams, the three men got busy, immediately at the wood sawing.

Usually, after the middle of Feb., one couldn't depend on real cold weather for much longer, and what it would warm up enough to start thawing the beef which had been kept frozen all winter, it was time to can what was left.

So, this year I had decided to can my meat, with the help of my rough locs, it had been brought in the day before to completely thaw out.

So the three of us got busy trimming and cutting it up in small cubes. We then packed it in quart coolers, adding one teaspoon of salt to each quart, (it made it's own juice).

Those were processed for hours, depending on the toughness or tenderness of the meat. This was delicious, either hot or served right from the cooler in it's jellied state

But back to our subject. The men had been working steadily all forenoon and were really ready for dinner. We women had the meat all in the coolers in time to cook potatoes, vegetables, make salad, etc., to assort, to prepare a real "Workingman's" dinner, topping it off with pie, (baked the day before and served heated piping hot).

The men soon went out to their job again, and after the women had finished up the dinner work, we put a quilt in the frames set up in the front room and I put the meat coolers in the boiler in which the sealers at most had been packed, was kept boiling constantly. (Of course, we didn't begin to get that quilt finished that day, but at least it was at the stage where I cou'd finish it at my leisure.

The wood-sawing was finished around 4:00 or 4:30, but no one even thought of going home then, so we had an early supper, the chores were hurriedly finished and we were playing crokinole when the young folks of those neighbors came into the yard on horse-back, bringing their guitar, violin and banjo, for a musical evening. As our young folks had a banjo, 2 violins, and a guitar, (also, we had an organ) it wasn't long until music echoed and re-echoed from the house into the country those days, these impromptu get-to-gethers were really thoroughly enjoyed by young and old, alike. We needed no preparing, no organizing, no planning before hand. Just the occasion of having to saw our wood, or butcher a beef or hog, or something like that, and "We were away" on a social evening

Around 10 o'clock we sat in to a lunch of sandwiches, and maybe cookies and tea. Not very fancy, but in those days, we didn't need to be fancy food, just the "Filling" not

Before they left for home, plans were made for the next "Sawing Bee". We felt the day was well spent. The wood was sawed, the meat canned, a quilt put in the frame and partly quilted, and, to top it all, we with our young folks had spent a most enjoyable evening

INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU ACT

Farmers are advised by Alberta's Field Crops Commissioner A. M. Wilson to thoroughly investigate any approaches made to them by firms or individuals wishing to sell or purchase seed on a contract basis. These approaches may be made in the form of newspaper advertisements, by mail or by personal contact.

Some of the firms promoting seed sales and soliciting contracts of various kinds are from outside the province. Mr. Wilson points out that persons entering into a contract with a firm outside Alberta has no protection whatsoever under our legislation. In Alberta all bonafide firms are licensed and bonded under the Seed Dealers Act for the protection of growers.

Anyone interested in deals of the above nature should investigate the reliability of the firm or individual before becoming involved in anyway. This can be done when the firm is in Alberta by making sure that it is licensed and bonded. In the case of contracts made from outside the province, the grower should ask for a bank reference. Incidentally, a bank reference is no use unless it is followed up by a letter to the bank asking for a statement on the reliability of the firm. The Better Business Bureau in Edmonton and Calgary will also make investigations if requested to do so.

PROVINCIAL JUNIOR SEED FAIR:

Farm young people are invited to exhibit at the Provincial Junior Seed Fair which will be held in Calgary on March 5th and 6th.

S. D. Fraser, Assistant Supervisor of 4H Clubs in Alberta, says high quality exhibits of cereal grains and forage seed are a great attraction in the open classes of the Fair. The inter-club classes for pedigreed cereal seed and the Provincial Forage Junior Project Bush Competition are of special interest to 4H Club members.

Further details and application forms can be obtained from your District Agriculturist or local elevator agent.

TWO DAY FARM BUILDING SCHOOL — LOUGHEED

A Farm Building School will be held in the Legion Hall, Lougheed - starting at 9:00 a.m. each morning of March 10th and 11th.

J. L. Reid and D. E. Darley, Extension Engineers from the Extension Branch will conduct the school. They will discuss Construction materials and Construction methods on Tuesday. The Wed. program will be on Utilities (Wiring, Water, Ventilation and Insulation) and management and materials handling.

This will be a worthwhile school.

FARM VARIETY PLOT

One Crop Testing Plan will again distribute, free of charge, to farmers who will undertake to grow, at least, a small demonstration plot, made of some 30 different varieties of wheat, oats, barley, flax. These include some of the newer and more promising varieties.

NATURE NOTES

(By Stanley Zaolenchuk)

WATER — the life blood of the earth.

Have you imagined life without water? It's impossible! In the absence of water the richest soil becomes desert.

One of the primary uses of water is to dissolve the mineral elements of the soil so that they may be absorbed by the roots of plants.

The average plant is about three-quarters by weight water. The average animal is about 80% water. Water consumption by plants added to human consumption is indeed enormous.

Water is constantly in a state of flux. Water that falls as rain or snow runs off, evaporates or sinks into the ground. All of it eventually returns to lakes, streams, rivers and oceans whence it evaporated into the air and ultimately falls again as rain or snow, following a continuous routine known as the water cycle or hydrologic cycle.

Unless properly controlled, water which runs off the land surface may cause injury through carrying a-

BRUSH CLEARING:

We are just a little concerned about all the brush clearing that is going on in the M. D. these past few winters. Large areas that were covered or partially covered with brush are being entirely cleared. Those large cleared areas give the wind a clear sweep at our land.

Are we consistant in our talk & actions? We have a large tree planting program in the province providing trees for roadside and field shelter belts. The farmers of the M.D. of Flagstaff have made use of this program, planting over 100,000 trees almost every year. We talk soil conservation and trash land farming to conserve our soil and moisture. Then we open our land so the wind can get at our soil.

Clearing our land is a step forward. But are we wise to clear all the brush out. A row of brush 15 to 25 feet wide left in our fields would be worth more standing than cleared. It would take a little planning and might not be quite as easy for the Brush Clearing Machines to leave some brush, but we're sure the effort would be worth the results.

way rich top soil of agricultural land and by causing disasterous floods. Excessive runoff may result in too little moisture for crop production.

Floods and erosion are also agents of destruction of fish habitats. Sediment eroded from fields kills off smaller animals which serve as fish food. Lessening water depth and increasing water temperature make intolerable living conditions for certain species of fish.

Water which soaks into the ground eventually reaches rock through which it cannot penetrate. This zone of saturation is known as the water table. A sufficiently high water table supplies the top soil with sufficient moisture for needs of growing plants. However, when the water table has shrunk too low crops suffer, springs fail and wells must be dug deeper.

The principle cause of the evils thus far mentioned is unwise land use. Land that should have been left in forest is broken and farmed. Marshes and swamps are drained for crop production. While some good agricultural land may be produced, the greater part becomes a loss. Marshes and swamps act as reservoirs, and water slowly seeps into the underground store of water.

Can we afford to be nonchalant concerning our water supply? Certainly not.Here is far too important incident for humanity to overlook Effective conservation measures should be employed to insure an adequate water supply for posterity.

In Memoriam

TETLOCK — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Howard W. Tetlock, who passed away in the Killam Hospital, March 3rd, 1955 Also our father, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face;
But you left us to remember
Those sweet words can take your place
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still;
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill
Ever remembered and sadly missed by: Wife Mary and Daughter, Lorreen. 46 1 p

BUSK — In loving memory of my dear wife and our loving mother, Mrs. Agnes Busk, who passed away on Friday, March 6th 1953.
One year ago today,
God called the one we loved away.
He took her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she lives still
Three years may wipe out many things
But this they wipe out never,
The memories of the happy days
When we were all together
Ever remembered and sadly missed by: Her Husband, Christ, and Family. 46 1 p

LEAP YEAR FROLIC

(By Carmen Bowman)

The female sex of Central were finally given a chance to get "Even Once" they were after when last Friday night rolled around. The theme of the Party "Leap Year Frolic". The old Gym, rocking to the music of Erickson's Orchestra, was decked out in red and white heart-shaped streamers, piles of balloons and cute leal symbols of Leap Year. On the front wall were eight silver crowns, bearing the names of the candidates for King and Queen of Central Hi. At eleven o'clock the twist and the shimmy was declared down for the ceremony. The candidates for whom the most tickets were sold, were the winners, The Queen's crown was placed on Sharon Nass of Lougheed, and the King's crown on Wyatt Hinky of Hardisty. After the gifts were presented to the group, Sharon drew the lucky ticket of Mr. Cotton from Killam, who became the winner of $25. Then all swung back to the gaiety of the ladies' choice of Butterfly. Twist and Ebbie. Everyone reported they had a "twisting" good time.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Grass Is Always Greener

"I wonder how it is that Thomas A. Jones has the whole dang pie on a silver platter." This is an expression often heard in the vast hinterland of our dominion, the true north, strong and free.

It is echoed with equal emphasis about Montreal, Halifax, Vancouver, Winnipeg, and the other dozen or so cities of any size.

The statement above is usually followed by a diatribe against "city living." Its high rents, its heavy traffic, its unfriendliness; its distance from that demi-paradise, the speaker's home town.

"Yes, I know it's nice in the summer up north there. But waddaya do all winter in that dump?" That is equally familiar. It is asked in the tones of simple incredulity of a sophisticated subscriber who spend all winter doing exactly what you do in that dump up north: working, playing, bringing up your family, trying to pay the bills, and growing older.

On most matters, I take a stand. But in this denunciation of the other fellow's mode of life, I take two stands.

The first is gentle agreement with my small-town friends. I go along with their belligerent argument that the city is no place to live; that I'd hate to battle that traffic; that living is cheaper in a smaller centre; that it's wonderful to live within five minutes of fishing, curling, golfing and friends.

When I'm listening to some old buddy who lives in the city, I nod eagely when he points out that the city is an exciting place to live; that it's wonderful to be able to go to all the shows and concerts; that it's grand to be able to go out for an exotic meal in a fascinating place; that the small town doesn't provide the same cultural opportunities for your kids.

Privately, I chuckle at both points of view. Both are full of contradictions. The city fellow claims there's no privacy in a small town — everybody knows your business. The small-town fellow explodes, "Privacy! How can you have privacy in the city when you're jammed into a two-by-four lot, in a house beside people you don't like and who don't handle kids."

The small-town fellow raves about that mythical "out — town" in the city, and goes out and roars around in service clubs and fraternal organizations and athletic clubs and church groups at a pace no city rat could stand.

The myths multiply. In a city of a million, theatres are half empty, concerts play to small crowds, exotic restaurants go broke. In a small place, one-tenth of two per cent. of the population is revelling in that fleshpot setting and so are at the front door. The rest are at home watching the same TV program as the fellow in the city.

On Saturdays, the whole problem is brought into perspective, on a four-lane highway. Over to the city, in one stream, pour the thousands of people going in for a day to shop, see shows, suck up some cultur.

Up from the city, in the other stream, pour the thousands of people going north for the skiing or swimming or fishing. They don't even wave to each other.

KILLAM HI - C

(By Ken Dotan)

During the last month the Killam United Church Hi-C has been very busally active. In January two carloads of members attended a Snowman's Ball in Castor, which was also attended by several other groups. The Xtatic Band played for this dance. Five rinks spent an enjoyable Saturday curling in the Killam rink. On Feb. 2nd, a truckload of members food and toboggans assembled on some hills near the town, with three hours of fun resulting. This was topped by a bonfire and lunch.

One week later a bake sale was sponsored to raise funds for the group's future projects. Over $30.00 in baking was sold. On the evening of Feb. 16, Rev. Klosphor of Bissc All People's Mission in Edmonton, spoke on his work in the slum area of that city. Since that time several members of the Hi-C group have visited this interesting mission in Edmonton. This Friday most of the group attended a record hop in the Recreation hall of the Viking United Church. Sedgewick Hi-C was also invited and all enjoyed the evening.

Future events of the Hi-C include a party to which Sedgewick & Lougheed groups are invited; a Sunrise Service; and a Debate. The following month indicates it will be an interesting one.

MINOR HOCKEY ROUNDUP

The Sabres now enter into the Battle River Juvenile Finals against the Daysland Elks, in a best of 3 series.

Led by Captain Dave Rossbough & a fired-up bunch of linemates, they eliminated the Irma Imperials 13-12 in a 2-game total point series.

In the first game Dave Rossbough's 3 goals, along with Fred Kueber and Doug Witwer with 2 each, were just enough for a 9-7 victory. In Irma last Thursday, it took an overtime goal at 16.17 by Brian Sorenson to put the Sabres into the finals.

The first game of the finals was at Daysland on March 3rd, with the second in Sedgewick on March 5th. Time is 8.30. If necessary the final game will be played Friday, March 6th, at Sedgewick. Support your local boys by attending these games.

UNTOUCHABLES WIN FIRST

The "Untouchables" hockey team from Sedgewick upset "Buff" Gallett's All-stars 9-7 in an action-packed game on March 1st. Coach Colbert however says that since six of his All-stars couldn't make the game, the score is not to be counted. His protest was not upheld, but the Untouchables have agreed to a return game.

CURLING

(By Don Robertson)

This year high school curling has been plagued by a very small turnout of the eight original rinks, sometimes as few as two show up. Those participating have enjoyed the year.

In the Taylor Pearson playoffs, Cumberland's rink came from behind and almost beat the Viking rink for the right to represent this area at Edmonton. Cumberland's rink consisted of Collin Cumberland (skip), Ron Cookson, third, Jim Pepe, second and Jacob Chapman, lead. Organizer and second, Don Robertson, was incapacitated by illness.

The weekend promises to give the school rinks a good test as the Provincial High School Bonspiel takes place at Sedgewick. There are 12 rinks entered including rinks from Daysland, Killam Segewick, Provost, Bruderheim and Galahad. If Sedgewick wins this year they are entitled to keep the trophy, as they have won it the last two years. A few supporters from the school would be appreciated.

CENTRAL HI FORMS BOWLING LEAGUE

(By Gail Bowen)

Because of the students' bowling facilities provided for at present by the new Rec Centre at Sedgewick, the Central High School formed a bowling league for the first time. The league, which meets every Monday after school, consists of four teams of five members each. The original captains of the teams were: Marilyn Marvin, Mary Ann Kowalski, Pat Gallett, Maxine Swanenot and Lee Scherman. Due to the fact that some members lost interest, and others joined up, the team captains keep changing.

The bowling club is under the direction of Mr. Rosiechuk, and its executive is: Pres., Gail Bowen; Sec., Pat Gallett.

On Saturday, Feb. 29th the league held an inter-school Bowling Tournament with a team entered from each town attending C. H. S., and including a teachers' team.

BROOMBALL NEWS!

(By Lyles McGowan)

The Killam, Sedgewick, Mirror & Lougheed Broomball Teams, under the leadership of four high spirited girls, have really been on the ball for these last few weeks. The four teams have travelled from town to town competing against each other. However, due to the changeable weather, the majority of games have been played at the Sedgewick Rec Centre. Killam, entering the competition late, has played three unsuccessful games against Sedgewick. Sedgewick, having only lost 1 game, to Lougheed, appears to have the best team so far. Mirror defeated Sedgewick once, tied twice and lost the rest. In the near future, a tournament will be held at Sedgewick Rec Centre, with all four teams competing. Good luck.

Past Pres., Peter Guenard, introduced Mr and Mrs. Bill Gatewich to those present, and remarked that Bill was one of the old-time breeders and instigator of the Hardisty Stampede.

The financial statement received that while considerable receipts had been entered, the expenditures took most of it, due to the extensive rebuilding program and re-location of the grounds. It was felt that the rebuilding program was well worth the effort, promising to culminate in an up-to-date rodeo and sports arena and that the 1964 dates for the

The chairmen of the various committees outlined the projects, such as ... bleachers, race track, rodeo arena, landscaping, brushing, booths and fencing, which required considerable effort by many people. Thanks were extended to all who assisted.

HOG PRICE SUPPORT TO BE CONTINUED

OTTAWA Agriculture Minister Harry Hays announced today that the price support for hogs will remain at $25.85 per hundred weight for Grade A hogs during 1964. As in previous years, the support program will be on a delivery payment basis and will apply to a maximum of 120 carcasses (grade A and B) marketed by individual producers.

This year's support price, same as last year's, amounts to 88.3 percent of the national average for the past ten years.

Hog marketings were lower last year than in 1962 and the national average hog price was $27.36. Since it exceeded the support price, no deficiency payments are being made for the year.

Prospects for the current year indicate that hog prices will be almost as high as the 1963 average

There were 7 percent more hogs on Canadian farms at December 1st, 1963 than a year earlier and intentions indicate a 7 percent increase in the spring pig crop.

Feed prices currently are somewhat lower than those prevailing at the same period last year, and, although this summer's crop conditions will influence them, the outlook is for little change from 1963.

Provincial Affairs

(By John Warren)

EDMONTON – The Legislature came to close at 11 o'en to round-the-clock sittings last week during committee hearings of a continuing development agreement between the city of Calgary and the C.P.R. The legislature became involved because the agreement would require changes in statutes dealing with taxation, expropriation and planning.

While primarily of concern to Calgary, the hearing was one of the most interesting the legislature has seen for many years. Premier Manning, Municipal Affairs minister A. J. Hooke and Highways minister Gordon Taylor led the parade of members grilling persons who presented briefs, both for and against the agreement.

The whole thing reached a crisis when Calgary city solicitor Carson MacWilliams was ordered by the Premier to appear, flew up from Calgary and promptly told the house the agreement committed the CPR to nothing and gave the city very little, except possible trouble. Mayor Grant McEwan said he hadn't even known of the solicitor's feelings and his criticism of the agreement which was so pleasing to the city fathers came as a surprise.

Later in the session the house will debate a bill and can either pass it, thereby validating the agreement, or reject it and cancel the plan. The hearing was expected to take 1 day but finally broke up only after three days and nights of sittings.

Mr. Hooke delivered the major speech of the week on Friday while taking part in the budget debate. He took nearly two hours to deal with topics ranging from "screwballs" on the university faculty to the ineptitude of the old line parties.

To a suggestion that the Liberals and Conservatives combine to form one effective party in the province, the Social Credit legislature veteran of 29 years responded: "You can't make a good omelet with two bad eggs."

In addition to a peppering of tried and true jabbs Mr. Hooke's speech contained at least three points of interest to rural Albertans.

He said consideration is being given a plan to provide towns and villages within a county to have a great er voice in determining county education and school policy. Basically it would set up a sub-committee to the county council's education committee. All villages would be represented on the sub-committee and it would select representatives to the county body and could pass recommendations on through them.

Legislation allowing establishment of such a body could be introduced at the present session, as a result of requests from communities that now have no representatives on the county educational body.

The municipal affairs minister said another bill might be introduced this spring to permit municipal districts to set aside a certain percent of tax money each year for a specific project, saving until they could pay for it, rather than borrowing at high rates of interest.

Citing road paving as an example of where such a fund could apply, Mr Hooke said that the pot could be built up by an additional amount tax levy of a mill or two. Such funds now must be spent within three years under provincial statute and a large enough pool for major road work cannot be built up.

The third matter of concern to the municipalities which the minister said was under consideration was that of elections. He said it is possible that legislation will be introduced next year to allow for election of a complete municipal council each two years. At present council elections are staggered over three years with a portion of the members chosen each year.

The present system doesn't permit voters to turn out a complete council even if it is opposed to their council's policies, said Mr. Hooke.

International Peace Officer

OTTAWA— The British request for Canadian forces to police the strifetorn island of Cyprus is one more indication of the increasing importance of the kind of role Canada can play in keeping peace in the world.

Forty years ago, in another age, a similar request, or rather a summons, from Britain for troops for the Chanak crisis, became a turning point in Canadian independence.

The position of the Canadian Prime Minister, Mackenzie King, at that time was that Britain could no longer commit Canadian forces in any course. Such decisions were a matter for the Canadian Parliament

Even Canadians often forget that their full independence dates back only a few generations. In just a few decades this country has developed not only its own complete independence but has taken on a full measure of responsibility in the international sphere.

When the British Prime Minister, Sir Alec-Douglas Home visited Ottawa recently, he put forward a strong request to Canada for military aid in Cyprus, where Turkish and Greek Cypriots were on the verge of civil war.

But this request was not made to Canada on any sentimental grounds. It was not an appeal to old loyalties. It was made rather in the light of Canada's previous contributions to peace-keeping in the world, and in the light of Canada's contributions to the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, the Commonwealth, and the United Nations.

It was fairly clear at the time that the Canadian Prime Minister, Mr. Pearson, was disposed to offer Canadian troops for a peace-keeping role provided a satisfactory arrangement could be worked out with the Cypriot president, Archbishop Makarios

Admittedly there was a little embarrassment and resentment over British Foreign Secretary Butler's public statement that he hoped Canada could supply 1,000 soldiers for

Dear Mr. Eastly:

In your paper published Feb. 20, 1964 you had a photo of two Indian artifacts found by Mr. Ralph Scott.

First I would like to say that I am by no means an authority on Indian artifacts, though I have been collecting artifacts for eight years. But I'm almost sure that they are both true artifacts. The long one on the left is a hide beater, used for beating hides to make them soft. The one on the right, the short one, is one of two tools. If the wide end has a chisel end then it is a skining stone. If the wide end is rounded then it is a grinding stone.

The hobby of artifact collecting is growing every year, in fact there isn't a Rock-Hound Club in Alberta that doesn't have two or three artifact collectors. For an amateur starting to collect I would recommend the book, "Stone Age On The Prairies". It has excellent photos to aid one in identifying his finds. Where but on our Western Plains is the artifacts hunting so good.

Sincerely,

30 YEARS AGO
(From the Press of March 15, 1934)

Sedgewick and Daysland will meet in the finals of the Highway 13 League when weather permits.

Mr. J. Galt and Fred Sedgwick were elected by acclamation as councillors as the M.D. of Sterling.

Mr. Fred Rogers is appointed Mayor of the Village of Lougheed to succeed H. MacDonald who resigned.

A truck load of U.F.A., C.C.F. enthusiasts accompanied H. MacKenzie to Lougheed on Sat. to hear him speak on the C.C.F. A case of eggs was also taken along but as they were not required they were sold to the highest bidder.

The finals in the Consolation of the Sedgewick hotspiel was won by the W. Rose rink over the venerable Sodbusters, skipped by W. J. Young. A perfect draw shot by Rose in the 13th end won the game by 1 point.

(From the Press of March 9, 1944)

A ladies rink composed of Mrs. Thorburn (skip); Mrs. E. Brooker 2nd and Marion Neilson 2nd attended the annual bonspiel in Forestburg and returned with second prize in the Marchant's Event.

The Killam Soldiers Gift Com. met at the home of Mrs. McPherson on Tues. and packed about 50 parcels for the overseas boys for Easter.

(From the Press of March 11, 1954)

After two postponements for lack of ice, the Hardisty Legion had a perfect day for their annual bonspiel on Wednesday. Visitors were present from Provost, Amisk, Markerides and Sedgewick.

Quite a number of Killamites took in the wedding dance of Gwen Spilo and Lillie Kimmel in Strome.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sisi and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Sisi attended the final games of the Brier Spiel, and the presentations to Alberta winners, and finals, runner-up. It must have been worth seeing, and to hear Frank and Mrs. Norman describe it, makes you feel the CBC overlooked the good announcers.

Mrs. Hurst, Mrs. Blakeney, Mrs. E. Simons, and Mrs. T. Sparrow won 1st prize in the Citizens of the Strome Spiel. Four lovely percolators.

Note Of Good Parents

A young couple I know had an unusual experience when they visited her parents during the holiday season.

The parents, solid folk, had recently retired. They bought a new home in a rather swanky development in a good sized Canadian city. They have a 17 year old daughter, now had, who lives with them.

When my friends arrived to spend Christmas, it was obvious Ma had been busy. Everything in the new house was sparkling for their visit. She was proud of her home, and with reason.

They had a pleasant Christmas. A couple of days later, the four adults were invited to a party down the street. The teenage daughter, implored to leave a few friends in for pop and music. Her mother gave in, specifying that 10 kids was the limit.

The adults went to the party along the street and enjoyed it.

The conversation, as so often, turned to puzzlement over teenagers. You know the sort of thing we old squares discuss: the switchblade heroes; the obstreperous party reported in Life, which wound up demolishing an old mansion; the couple in some distant place who found their son and found their teenage daughter on the second night of a three-day, all-night party, in their home.

Emerging from the party, as a circumspect hour in this circumspect suburb, my friends and the parents were astonished to see the quiet street lined with cars. What was up?

They found out, in about two minutes. Every light was blazing in their new home, and there was a sound of revelry by night whose intensity was unmistakable.

They hustled home. The son-in-law, a six-footer, was next in school, to give notice that the party was over. He was shaken to the tips of his number tens when he walked in. There were about 40 people, mostly young males, in the modest living room. Ninety-four per cent of them were drinking beer. The other six per cent were drinking something else.

Beer cans and empty vodka bottles fought for attention on the rug, which was a squishy mariagme of spilled beer and cigarette ash. Some of the young gentlemen had prevailed themselves in chairs and put their feet against the pristine wall. The old Dad's most cherished possession, a solid silver christening mug given him by his grandfather, lay on its side on the floor, a discarded beer-mug.

The Dad, with a mighty effort, forced himself to go round and invite himself. A few were civil. Most incinsing girls, sneered at him. Eventually, however the party had become a drag with these old squares around, the guests left, in their own sweet time, leaving half a dozen beer cans.

Who were those hoodlums, punks, vandals? A motorcycle gang, was it? One of them was the son of a national television figure. Another was the son of a professor. Most were university students, as their jackets proclaimed proudly. The rest were high school kids from good, middle-class homes in the area.

What happened to the girl who was hostess? Nothing. She's tough, ornamental and might leave home if crossed, or upset.

Next morning found the parents and the son-in-law and daughter-in-law and the grandchildren all busy with mops and pails and brooms and scrubbing brushes. Ma had been busy. Everything in the new house was sparkling for their visit. She was proud of her home, and with reason.

MINOR HOCKEY AT KILLAM

KILLAM — The hockey season is rapidly drawing to a close, but the Minor hockey teams have taken over from their big brothers the Indians. They have been dishing up some pretty good hockey lately. We witnessed an interesting contest at the Arena one evening last week between the 14 and under boys from Killam and Sedgewick, with the boys from the East coming out on the long end of a 6-4 score. Now that the season is about over, the Killam Minor Hockey Assn. wishes to extend thanks to the following persons and organizations who supported them in the promotion of minor hockey in Killam: Ivan Pierson for donation of a hog which raffled for $385; Harry Spiller for sweaters and other equipment; Killam Elks for sweaters; the Killam Legion and Odd Fellows for cash donations, and also to the various conches who donated time and talent; the teams; and to Benny Thomas for refereeing games. Once again, our thanks to all who contributed in any way to the betterment of minor hockey in Killam district. — Killam Minor Hockey Assn.

Stampeders Win B.R. League Championship

HARDISTY — The Stampeders have re-captured the Battle River League Championship, won in 1962 by Daysland, with a resounding win over Wainwright in 4 straight out of a best of seven series.

With only one win needed, Stamps went over to Wainwright and closed out the series with an 8-3 victory.

In the third encounter the Wainwright Club opened the scoring with Perkins tallying at 7.31 in the opening period. Boelter tied it up at 13. El to close out the period, Wainwright again took the lead with two fast second period goals, by Murray and Perkins, to lead 3-1. Stamps bounced back to notch twins on goals by Miller and Robinson to again even out the score going into the final stanza. A. NATURE NOTES

(By Stanley Zaseleschuk)

OUR FORESTS

Have you ever considered the vital role played by our forests in the development of our economy? Have you ever considered the contributions of our forests? Have you seen the arrival of the first pioneers, trees were hewn down for homes and firewood. Land stripped of trees was utilized for agricultural purposes. From meager beginnings grew and flourished great lumbering industries, employing many men.

Only through careful management of our forest reserves can we hope to continue to serve forest and wood using industries and continue to employ present and even greater numbers of industrial workers. All available forest land must be made productive. Failure to recognize this need will prove harmful to all mankind and to future prosperity.

Public recognition of the values of our forests and the effective utilization of this resource may well be factors in determining our prosperity. Wise use & wise management of our forests cannot be overstressed.

The present rate of industrial consumption of wood fiber is greater than the ability of the land to produce this fiber. The points of the fact that, present day, chief consumers of wood fiber may well be located in their resources will be dwindled by limited resources, unless we maintain and restore our forest bearing lands. A decline in economic prosperity of one phase of industry may well mean a lowered standard of living for everyone.

In addition to trees for industry, our forests fulfill certain aesthetic functions. Many individuals are found who enjoy the aesthetic contributions of a forest — its animals, birds, and flowers. Certainly this is no small gain.

Many other areas of conservation are dependent on forests. They help prevent soil erosion, increase our water supply, act as homes for wildlife and contribute markedly to recreational aesthetic values.

History has shown that adequate forest reserves of a nation and the wealth of a nation are directly related. Let us keep our nation wealthy by intelligent utilization of this valuable resource.

HINTS FOR THE HOME SEWER

"Hand-me-down" is a term which should not be used to describe remodelled clothing. Every effort should be made to have remodelled garments look new. Re-designing or re-cutting should be done to suit the individual for whom it is intended. If necessary, store the fabric or garment for a time rather than use it when not suitable.

Those factors which mark clothes as being out-moded are collars, sleeves, fullness of skirt, length of skirt, and waist line treatment. To begin your remodelled garment, do all mending that is necessary. You may wish to alleviate that faded look with a tint or dye of some new colour. This step should be carried out after ripping.

When ripping be careful in separating seams so as not to stretch them. Worn edges should be trimmed and grain lines should be determined by the quality of the fabric. If the fabric for remodelling is in relatively new condition, it would merit a more difficult pattern. It is economizing to spend a great deal of time sewing a fabric which is not going to be durable and well-used wear.

SELECT THE CORRECT THREAD

Selection of the correct thread for sewing the new fabrics is essential. If the fabric is similar in texture to cotton, or wool or rayon suiting, mercerized cotton thread is the best choice. However, if the fabric is sheer or silk-like, one of the synthetic threads will likely be most satisfactory. Nylon or dacron thread will give better stitching, durability and more uniform drying speed than cotton thread. When using synthetic thread on the machine, wind the bobbin first. There should be no tension on the thread as it is being wound. Be sure to use a felt pad and the proper pin so that the spool will be held steady when sewing and when winding the bobbin.

This big acre-eating brute handles like a pole pony — feeds like one, too. It's the world's fast economy king among all current 6-plow diesels.*

The 930 has a real tractor engine . . . 6-cylinder, 401 cubic inch Powered diesel or 377 cubic inch Powerdyne LP-gas. Famous Case big-bore, long-stroke, high-torque design. . . . built to LA-S-71

Fleet owners who keep accurate records swear by the 930 for rock-bottom maintenance costs.

You'll like the 930 once you feel its tremendous lugging power . . . its armchair comfort and convenience. Head out to your own fields what a Case 930 Comfort King will do.

*As of December 1, 1963.

MONEY MANAGEMENT MEETING — KILLAM

A meeting on Money Management will be held in the Co-op Hall in Killam on Thursday, March 19th starting at 1:30 p.m.

Leo Bauer, Agricultural Economist with the Provincial Farm Economics Branch will be the Speaker. Mr. Bauer has been very active in the Farm Management and Cost Study groups with the Province. Mr. Bauer will touch on several phases of money management including the use of the Partial budget to make wise decisions.

This meeting is planned and sponsored by the Alberta Department of Agriculture and the Killam and District Board of Trade.

WHAT IS DICAMBA?

Dicamba is a selective herbicide which controls such weeds as wild and tartary buckwheat, lady's thumb green smartweed, cow cockle and the top growth of Canada and Scotthistle.

Dicamba, having been tested in Western Canada for about three years under the name of banvel D, has now been registered for use in Canada for the control of these weed at a rate of 3 ounces of acid per acre when the crop is in the two to four leaf stage.

W. Lobay, Supervisor of Soils and Weed Control with the Alberta Department of Agriculture, states that the Western Section of the National Weed Committee announced at their meeting last December that dicamba will control the above weeds in spring wheat and oats at rates of 2 to 4 ounces of acid per acre. Although some stunting was noted in a number of demonstration trials last summer, Mr. Lobay says this was only growth suppression and did not reduce yields.

Like 2,4-D and MCPA, dicamba may be applied in 4 to 8 gallons of water or more per acre. To combine maximum crop safety with effective weed control the wheat or oat crop should be treated just before or at the full three leaf stage. Crop damage will occur if dicamba is applied during the four to six leaf stage when conditions are conducive to prolific tillering.

Dicamba is an important supplementary tool to cultural practices for controlling buckwheats, green smartweed, lady's thumb and cow cockle. As such it will certainly find a place in areas where these annual weeds cause serious problems.

Mr. Lobay also advocates giving consideration to "combination" herbicides where weeds susceptible to each component of the mixture are creating a problem. For example 2 ounces of dicamba per acre mixed with 6 ounces of 2,4-D or MCPA amine per acre will give good control of buckwheats and other weeds susceptible to dicamba as well as to those which are resistant to this herbicide but susceptible to 2,4-D or MCPA.

O. A. V. C. LITTLE ROYAL!

The Little Royal and Achievement Day will be held at the Olds Agricultural and Vocational College on Sat. March 14th. This will be the 31st Little Royal since it started in 1933.

Beginning at 10 a.m., the morning will be devoted to a dress review & livestock show. The dress review will be staged again at 1.30. One of the highlights will be displays arranged by students in the new Horticulture course and the new greenhouses.

FARM CASH AND NET INCOME UP!

Canada's farm cash income and net income both increased 2.2% in 1963. For farm cash income it was a record, and for farm net income it was the highest in the past 10 years.

Total farm net income amounted to $1,716.3 million, the increase over 1962 resulting from advances in Saskatchewan and Alberta. No other provinces reported increases last year.

Farm operating expenses and depreciation charges continued to rise in 1963. They were more than offset, however, by high cash income from farming operations and larger inventories of farm-held grain and livestock.

Total farm cash income, the most important component of farm net income, increased to $3,222.3 million in 1963. Significant contributors to the gain were higher receipts from the sale of wheat, coarse grains, tobacco, dairy products, and poultry products. Lower returns were noted from cattle, hogs, flaxseed, and Canadian Wheat Board payments on previous years' grain crops.

Farm operating expenses and depreciation charges rose nearly 5% to $2,179.0 million. Most of the increase resulted from higher outlays for feed, fertilizer, and the operation of farm machinery including repair-

Commercially speaking, the Douglas fir is more valuable than any other tree.

WILL DISCUSS PENSIONS: Both Quebec Premier Jean Lesage, right, and Ontario Premier John Roberts have indicated that Canada pensions plan will be key issue at the Federal-provincial conference in Quebec City, March 31. Quebec has already announced intention to stay out of pensions plan, while Ontario wants postponement and changes made.—

How Long Did It Take To Court Your Wife?

Did you just happen to see her, walk up to her, ask her to marry you and call in the minister . . . right on the spot —

PERHAPS NOT . . . it probably took a lot of calls, and trips, movies, flowers, candies, and a lot of putting-your-best-foot forward tactics. You had to "sell" yourself. She had to know all about you!

IT'S THE SAME WITH ADVERTISING . . . you can't "woo" customers with one Ad . . . you've got to "Call on Them" over a period of time . . . you've got to win their confidence and be convincing.

CONSISTANT ADVERTISING wins the customers if it's truthful, if it gives helpful information, if it saves shopping steps, if it is backed up with intelligent, courteous and honest values.

Cyprus.

Canadian Government officials thought this a bit of a dirty trick. By naming a figure, Mr. Butler in effect restricted the Canadian Government's room to manoeuvre. "He pulled the rug out from under our feet," said one official.

But this minor incident had no appreciable effect on Canada's assessment of its international duty. Canadian troops are now stationed in many parts of the world on peacekeeping assignments, and this country is uniquely equipped for such service. A specially trained and equipped infantry battalion is maintained on standby in Canada to provide at short notice a force for United Nations service in any part of the world.

The difficulty in the Cyprus situation was that it was not strictly a United Nations solution that Britain was seeking. Britain preferred to reach agreement with the major parties in the dispute for a type of force which would not be hampered by use of the veto in the United Nations Security Council.

The Canadian Government stands basically for United Nations solutions to such problems, but feels it has obligations also in this case as a member of NATO and the Commonwealth.

It seems likely therefore, that when the framework for a special police force for Cyprus is decided upon, Canada will supply up to 1,000 men to a force which is expected in total about 10,000 men.

This will bring to almost 2,000 the number of Canadian soldiers on peace-keeping assignments around the world, not including, of course, the full-strength brigade in NATO service in Europe.

There are about 900 Canadians serving in the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East, patrolling a sector of the Egypt-Israeli frontier.

In the Congo, more than 300 Canadian Signal Corps staff provide communications, and headquarters personnel for the United Nations force.

In Kashmir, Korea, and Palestine, about 25 Canadian officers engage in United Nations Commissions.

Besides its United Nations commitments, the Canadian Army provides about 75 officers and men for truce supervisory duties in Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos.

A glance at a map of the world reveals no scarcity of trouble spots, where the United Nations or some other agency may be called upon in future for police duty. East Africa, Malaysia, perhaps even Latin America.

Canadian defence policy appears to be moving towards emphasis on highly mobile, conventionally armed troops able to deal effectively with outbreaks in any part of the world.

Of course, such troops would never be used unilaterally. They would be made ready for use under the auspices of the United Nations or some acceptable authority. Canada's record in many demonstrations that this is a form of international service which it can provide with good effect. This country already has a high reputation as an international police officer. An even greater demand for these special skills may be exported in the future.

Hardisty Hospital Will Remain Open, 2 Years

HARDISTY— Due to difficulties in obtaining Nursing Staffs, it had been strongly suggested that the St. Anne's Hospital at Hardisty, would be forced to close its doors. Now, due partly to efforts made by the Flagstaff M. D. the Provost M. D., and the towns and villages from Sedgewick to Czar, and a brightening of the staffing problem, The Community Press has received the following announcement.

"Mother Maria Gertrude, Mother General of the Sisters of Charity of Halifax, wishes to announce that due to the representations and appeals that have been made, the Congregation will continue to direct St. Anne's Hospital at Hardisty, Alberta, for at least another two years; and that the sisters will not be withdrawn on December 31st, 1964, as had previously been announced.

"The main reason for considering the withdrawal of the Sisters was stated by Mother General in a letter to the Congregation dated November 12th, 1963 ... 'we no longer have a sufficient number of religious available to carry on the many duties in our several hospitals'. Another reason stated was the difficulty in getting lay nurses and other hospital personnel in a small rural community."

"During a recent visit in Rome, Mother Maria Gertrude spent considerable time in Alberta, reviewing the situation at Hardisty. Interviews and meetings were held with ecclesiastical, provincial, municipal, and hospital authorities. All seemed to agree that everything possible must be done to keep the Hardisty Hospital in St. Anne's Hospital.

The Lay Advisory Board in particular promised help and support, mainly in the following areas:

1. A continued interest and responsibility for the staffing problems of the Hospital. At present they are trying to secure the services of a full-time lay nurse; and other prospects are being looked into. They are also aware of the need of nursing aids, and hospital orderlies; and assistance in these areas will be forthcoming.

2. Improved recruiting schemes, bursaries, scholarships, and assistance plans would be considered by the Lay Advisory Board and other interested groups; so that young women would be encouraged to enter the nursing and hospital fields, and devote time to St. Anne's Hospital after completion of training.

3. Improved financial assistance. This would pertain mainly to the establishment of a fund for extra unapproved expenditures, such as additions to salaries to encourage nurses and hospital personnel to come to Hardisty. This plan has already been explored, and the surrounding villages, towns and municipal districts have expressed their willingness to contribute.

"Despite the fact that the decision to withdraw the Sisters has been changed, the fact still remains that the reasons presented for the closing of the Hospital are still valid, and unless something more substantial than appeals are forthcoming, the plans for closing will have to be carried out. However, the sisters people will be granted with the hope that during that time conditions will be so improved that the future of the Hospital will be assured.

"The Congregation will continue to do everything possible to assist that future, but we must rely on the promises, the support, the active and functional interest of the many friends and benefactors of St. Anne's Hospital.

Signed:
Mother Mara Gertrude,
Mother General.

Estimates! Increases! Taxes!

Prime Minister Pearson recently said, "Canadians must reject the faint heart & defeatism of those little Canadians who fear the future". Following on the heels of this statement came the White Paper in parliament on estimates, indicating that the main estimates of federal spending for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1965 will be $6.7 billion. Practically all estimates are increased.

Any issue worthy of comment has two sides to it. In this case Mr. Pearson says Canadians must reject the faint heart of little Canadians who fear the future. On the other hand, little Canadians are beginning to show fear of current trends.

Federal estimates will continue to grow each year; in fact each hour until those same "little" Canadians rebel; until they stop going along with every new proposal for increased spending, greater welfare benefits and larger degrees of folly in high places.

One clear instance of this folly is that the CBC is to be given $86 million for one year's operation, or to bring it closer to the layman's understanding, well over $235 thousand a day. Some of us well remember when the CBC spent $5 million a year in public funds.

Canada Council is asking for $80 million to increase grants to people in the arts, and social sciences, under the premise it will put a stop to talent drifting to other countries. An argument that is away off beam.

These of course are only two samples of irresponsible federal spending, helping to maintain huge annual deficits, commenced by the diefenbaker regime.

Is it any wonder then that the little Canadian is beginning to fear the future, and becoming of faint heart? Every time he gets a request to send a cheque to assist in this folly, he should enclose a letter like the following, to indicate his feelings: Dear Sir: In reply to your request for me to send a cheque, I wish to inform you that the present condition of my bank account makes it almost impossible. My shattered financial condition is due to federal laws, provincial laws, county laws and outlaws. Through these laws I am compelled to pay a business tax, head tax, amusement tax, school tax, gas tax, light tax, water tax, sales tax, liquor tax, income tax, food tax, furniture tax and excise tax. I am required to get a business license, car license, operator's license, truck license, not to mention a marriage license, or a dog license.

I am also required to contribute to every society and organization, which the genius of man is capable of bringing to life; to women's relief, the unemployment relief and the gold digger's relief. Also, to every hospital and charitable institution in the area, including the Salvation Army, Community Chest, Cancer Drive, Red Cross the Double Cross and Boys' Town.

For my own safety I am required to carry health insurance, liability insurance hail insurance and old age insurance.

My business is so governed that it is no easy matter to find out who owns it. I am inspected, suspected, disrespected, rejected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, summoned, fined, commanded, & compelled until I have not the knowledge or the ability to answer all of the many questions. Some of these are only two samples of irresponsible federal spending, helping to maintain huge annual deficits, commenced by the diefenbaker regime.

Is it any wonder then that the little Canadian is beginning to fear the future, and becoming of faint heart? Every time he gets a request to send a cheque to assist in this folly, he should enclose a letter

Is This A Private Fight?

Hog Producers Can Handle This Alone Thank You!

(From the Farm and Ranch Review)

Western farmers have a ringside seat for the ring round of the continuing marketing board fracas. It's being fought on the home ground of the prairie hog producers, and a few cinders are bound to fly before votes are cast on any compulsory plan. Whatever else, it will be an interesting bout. It is the hog producers' private argument and if left alone they would make their peace in their own way. But, unfortunately, they aren't being left alone. Too many of their "friends" have kept emotions at a boiling point & climbed into the ring to influence the decision.

The hog producer groups are made up largely of those whose sole or major occupation is the raising of swine, and most of these producers already have a pretty good idea of how they stand on the issue. This is their business and they know more about it than anyone else. Like any other businessman they have the right to introduce or withdraw from marketing experiments as they see fit. Some of the uncommitted may feel that the marketing board idea must have some merit to have remained in contention for so long; they might easily be persuaded, on economic grounds, to try on such a plan for size and see it stand or fall on its own merits. Yet they realize that the issues are not being contested on simple economic grounds alone. And many fear to accept compulsion lest they thereby, by its very definition, forfeit the privilege of later withdrawal. They would more willingly accept a marketing pool than a marketing board.

The economics is one thing; the politics another. The issues are clouded by certain elements in other groups and organizations, among them the farmers' unions, who are not necessarily hog producers, and who in the final analysis may have little or no specific interest in the hog business. Who cares about hogs! These individuals are promoting something else which has nothing to do with hogs.

These are the organizers who seek centralized power on principle alone; these are the eager beavers who want compulsion in everything; these are the political schemers who simply want hog producers (and everyone else) under the discipline of centralized authority.

Hog producers and other farm groups might have no hesitation about giving marketing boards a fair trial if only they could rid the farm organizations of the handful of potential little Hitlers with their unsavory philosophy who, if given a chance, will take hold and never let go.

Using the farm organizations as sounding boards and their promotional machinery as personal megaphones, they sit in the thistles and cry that all hands are turned against them. Posing as the only true friend of the farmer, they seek out Indians behind every tree and try to regiment the farmer "for his own good," and to protect him from enemies he never knew existed. With friends like this, who needs enemies!

GOING A LITTLE TOO FAR!

There is an old saying, facetious of course, that a lawyer seeks his mistakes to jail, a doctor buries his, but an editor prints his for everybody to see. Not all people like what an editor has to say, but the following little story, is, we think, just going a bit too far: "An editor died, poor as usual. A friend spent a day, almost fruitlessly, collecting a funeral fund. At dusk he pleaded with a stranger: Just a dollar, even? To bury an editor! 'What? Bury an editor? Sure, here's $5; bury five of them'„

Provincial Affairs

(By John Warren)

EDMONTON — After four weeks of sittings the Legislature still has not gotten down to the serious business it came here for — discussion and enactment of legislation and the study of the 1964-65 budget.

Several of the veteran members have commented on the fact that the session so far has been largely a matter of speeches, of "window dressing" and complained that legislators are going to have to start passing laws and such pretty soon.

However Premier Manning said there is virtually no chance of finishing up before Easter as the normal pressure to get everything out of the way by then is off this time.

Two of the legislature's personal resolution were dealt with last week, one with a somewhat surprising result.

The house voted by a 60-1 margin (Mr. Speaker Art Dixon and ailing Public Works Minister Fred Colborne didn't vote) to adopt a system of recording debates and the house proceedings. The hansard-type record will probably be available for the next year's session.

A motion calling for such a record has been defeated at every session but one since 1956, and the principle reason for its adoption now appears to be the installation of new sound amplifying equipment this year in which recording devices can be easily attached.

The other personal, calling for limited daylight saving time, went down to predictable and resounding defeat.

Proposed by William Dickie (Lib.-Calgary) the resolution would have allowed cities to vote on whether they wanted to adopt a time change legally sustain oil and gas as required Parks and the rights must be sold while they are at peak value.

Sugar & Spice

Culture? It's unanswerfull! And it gets unanswerfuller all the time. This was my only possible reaction after another shot at enriching the lives of some of our citizens.

Every year, when it's ever, I sign an oath in blood, sweat and tears that I'll never do it again. And a year later, there I am, up to my thick hand in the swamp of cultural enrichment.

It all begins innocently enough. I learn that there is going to be a production in a city theatre, of one of the plays the kids are studying in school. The date is a month away.

"Wouldn't it be grand," I coo to myself, "if the youngsters could see the real thing? It would be an experience they'd never forget. It would kindle a real interest in the drama. It would show them that Shakespeare (or Shaw) is exciting, and funny, romantic, not just a lot of stuff like that old failing action memory work, suspense, pathos and dramatic irony."

I contact the other teachers. They are enthusiastic. I contact the principal. He is not, but closes it with this action-packed:

The teachers ask the grade eleven boys if they would like to see "My Fair Lady," the musical based on the play "Pygmalion," which they are studying. About half the hands go up. When it is announced that we'll be attending a matinee and will miss half a day's school, the rest of the hands go up.

Then, with the speed and skill of a sportsfest water-fastion Mr. Bowery, the old impresario, lumbers into action.

Phone the theatre. Yes, they can give us 162 tickets for that date.

Call the bus company. Yes, they can shoe-horn us into their buses on that date.

Fire off a confirmation letter to the theatre, accompanied by the down payment, a cheque issued on Mr. Bailey's personal overdraft account. Everything is running like oil.

And just about here, gravel begins to get into the gears. Six kids who didn't want to go have decided I should go in their stead. They are added to the list and a phone call produces tickets for them.

For three weeks before the big day, teachers accost Mr. Bailey in the halls and hand him amounts of $20.25. This is for "nine tickets for the show and three bus fares except George Jones lent a dollar so I handed it to him but I had only 25 cents and Mary Smith's mother won't let her go and she wants her money back but I haven't her name ticked off so I don't know if she gave it to me and what should I do?"

In the evening three weeks Mr. Bailey, who gets a very small allowance at home, spends miscellaneous bits of ticket and bus money on lunches, cigarettes and raffle tickets, and quails inwardly as he contemplates the coming show-down

LIQUID FERTILIZERS NOT EFFECTIVE!
Liquid fertilizers have proved ineffective as a seed dressing or as a spray on established grain crops in Western Canada, according to Dr. D A Rennie, acting head of the Soils Science Dept., University of Sask.
He said they proved virtually useless as a means of supplying grain with the major nutrients, particularly phosphorous, and they had no significant effect on yield. The liquid fertilizers have, however, proved effective when sprayed on fruit trees, largely because of the addition of minor nutrients like iron, copper and manganese. The cost of the liquid fertilizers is much higher than that of the regular granular types.
BULL CALF VACCINATION POLICY CHANGE!
Bull calves born after January 1st 1964 will not be vaccinated for Bangs. A regulation to this effect came into force last December.
Although male calves are highly resistant to Brucellosis, they have been vaccinated over the years for export and to enable them to be taken to major bull sales without blood tests. However, since animals from clean herds in Federal Brucellosis & Certified areas can now go to bull sales without a test, there is no longer any reason to vaccinate them. Dr. W. F. Brisbois reports that approximately 2 million of our 3 million cattle, which includes most of the purebred breeders, are now in Federal areas.
Any bulls which have to be blood tested for export, will be done with arrangements made by the Federal Health of Animals Division, without any inconvenience to the owner. In the United States bull calves are not eligible for interstate movement without a blood test, and this ruling may apply in the future to animals imported from Canada. Dr. Brisbois says other provinces are contemplating similar action, regarding bull calf vaccination, to that in Alberta.

Mel Hill Beverages Co. Ltd.
CANADA DRY PEPSI-COLA SANCHEZ ORANGE

General Motors Products of Canada, Oshawa, Ontario

Gentlemen:

For years I have used Chevrolet trucks for my city and country deliveries, and have always had really good service from them, with very little trouble.

Recently traded my 1954 six-cylinder-engine model which had cost only $200.00 in repairs since new. A 1957 truck which I bought new is still running well with original parts throughout. From engine to rear axle, everything is original.

This kind of long service has convinced me that I buy the right trucks when I buy Chevrolet. Can mileage is better than on any other make of truck I have owned, and my drivers tell me that there's lots of power there for their heaviest loads.

A multi-stop operation such as mine is hard on all parts of a truck but from my previous experience, I know my new Chevrolets will stand up to the job.

Yours very truly,
Mel Hill

Home & School Meet Rated Very Successful

DAYSLAND — In February the Dayslend Home & School Assn. presented a play "The Prisoner-Nappers". The local CGIT group participated and held the attention of the audience throughout. Girls taking part in the play were: Judy and Patsy Candlish, Donna Wagner, Linda Hanrahan, Linda Schnell, Shirley Tomich, Beverly McDevitt, Heather Cockburn and Jennie Larson. Members of the H & S. executive to the adult parts. Everyone was involved in the discussion which followed, dealing with family relationships.

A very successful meeting was held March 9th at the home of Mr and Mrs. George Cranston, with about 30 present. There was some apprehension a nthe part of the executive in presenting the subject for the evening "The Retarded Child", but an immense amount of interest was developed.

At the beginning of the evening Dr. Gilmes introduced the subject of Retardation from the medical viewpoint. Many misconceptions were explained, such as confusing retardation with mental illness. Mr. Roger Burgess and Mr. Glen Smith from Camrose were special guests. Mr. Burgess told of his personal story of how he discovered that his son was retarded. He went on to tell the whole story of the formation of the special school for retarded childe n in Camrose. The meeting was amazed to find that a child can attend this school with room and board for $25 a month. It was explained that the retarded child has an I. Q. of 50 or less. Children whose I.Q. is between 50 and 85 should be in "opportunity" classes in our own schools & should not be expected to compete with children of higher intelligence. To expect the slow learner to keep up to average classes is not only frustrating and discouraging, but unreasonable.

Mr. Burgess presented the film "The Eternal Children". This story around everyone's sympathy for compassion, and the realization that this is OUR problem not just that of the parents involved.

The evening was completed with a social hour and lunch. Mr. & Mrs. Cranston showed their film slides of a recent trip to Arizona. The color and scenes of flowers, fruit, cotton harvesting were beautiful. Complete coverage of the famous Rose Bowl Parade held the interest of all. Suddenly realizing it was midnight the group dispersed that education is more exciting than ever.

The April program will present the Hobby Fair, always popular. Exhibits are welcomed from all neighboring communities. A special thank you goes to the wonderful support of the Strome people.

SPRAY STARCHES — CONVENIENT BUT NOT ECONOMICAL.

Costs Fifty Times More

With an old-fashioned dry starch it costs less than one-tenth of a cent to starch a shirt. With a spray starch it costs over 4 cents per shirt — about fifty times more. The higher cost is attributable to the relatively expensive aerosol packaging of most of the spray brands.

Spray Technique. Spray starches are not quite so easy to use as the T.V. ads might lead you to believe. The beginner must master a technique to get an even spray. The push - button must be completely depressed. If the can is tilted too far the propellant will escape, making it impossible to use all the contents of the can.

The best way to spray is to steady the spray rapidly back and forth over the fabric, not pausing to allow the starch to build up at any one spot.

Having Ironing Problems? An article that is too hot will scorch a heavy coat of starch. However, a steam iron generally is not necessary since spray starches dampen as they spray. Most manufacturers recommend a light application of starch, followed by ironing, another light application, and so on.

Time is a Valuable Resource. Spray starches are especially useful for light touch up jobs on a blouse, for instance, for spot starching of collars and cuffs and for small items. It is Up To You. You must decide which you would rather have — the money and the result or the convenience.

SUMMER HOMES FOR BIRDS

It won't be long before the first harbinger of spring, the Mountain bluebird, arrives. His thoughts of fancy turn to love and nest making. Fortunately for you, by providing him with suitable ready-made homes, you may attract, enjoy and enlist his services and the services of other colorful cheery birds.

The bird house should be durable, well built and screwable, since they should be cleaned after each brood. A good coat of paint helps to protect your bird house against weathering and increases its attractiveness. Medium to dull shades of earth are preferred. The roof should be sloped sufficiently to shed water. It should overhang the entrance by 2 or 3 inches to keep rainfall out. Provide ventilation by drilling small holes in the side walls near the roof, as this provides for heat escape and no draught, which may harm young.

The entrance to the house should be well above centre. This helps the parent bird remain hidden. Avoid the use of tin cans for nest boxes. They will heat in the sun and bake the nestlings.

Build only one-family houses, as most songbirds will not tolerate another bird family under the same roof. Purple Martins are excepted. Space your houses well, three or four houses to the acre.

Locate your birdhouses in sunny places. Birds like sun. Make certain they are safe from predators. If necessary, place a strip of metal at the base of the tree or post to prevent climbing creatures from raiding.

Use creativeness in constructing your nest boxes. The more rustic the better.

Providing homes for our birds is a real delight, one from which you will reap many intrinsic joys.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. Vera Hartley, who passed away March 17th, 1963.
We watched you suffer, we heard you sigh,
But all we could do was just stand by
For when the time came we suffered too,
For you never deserved what you went through.
God took you by your hand, and we had to part,
He eased your pain, but broke our hearts.
Ever remembered and sadly missed by her Loving Daughters, Helen and Margaret and Families. 48 1 c

SPORTS CORNER

MINOR HOCKEY ROUNDUP

The Dayaland Elks Juvenile Club continued their run over the Bonnetown Sabres, as they posted a 5 to 1 victory in the final game of the tourney. E. Kemperle led the Elks with 3 goals, while singles went to Hintz and Zimmer. Sabres' goals went to Sorenson and Ed Prahn (2).

Meanwhile the upset of the year took place when the "Untouchables" of Sedgewick posted a convincing 11-10 victory over Dayaland. But Dayaland was granted a bye due to overage players. Scoring for Sedgewick were Harris Patten, Norman Bradley, Bernard Simpson (2), Lr ner Bouchard (2) including the big winner, Dave Hooper (2) and Ken Yates with a hot trick.

Also in hockey Sunday night at Hardisty the "Untouchables" posted a 4-3 victory over the Bellshill Cowboys. Bob Rostchuk played an outstanding game in the nets, but after the game said he wanted to be traded or placed on waivers. There could be a trade involved with Red Colbert plus cash, for Bob.

We wish to thank the people of the district for supporting the key games over the winter.

FIRST PEE WEE TOURNEY

KILLAM — The first Pee Wee Hockey Tourney in the district was held Sunday March 8th at Killam. It was a bowling success. The games had all the thrills and spills of a Stanley Cup battle, complete with scouts from Blue Bombers and Ed Prahn (2).

The first game between Viking's Gas Kings and Killam Wheat Kings turned out to be the Patent of the day. Wheat Kings edging out a win by 2-1. Feature of the game was the stellar goaltending of Kelsberger in the Killam nets.

The second game brought together the Sedgewick Essos and Lougheed Reds. This game also featured some fine goaltending by Tommy Cochran for Lougheed and some fine passing and stick-handling by the Essos. The game ended 2-1 in favor of Lougheed.

The final game saw a fair crowd present. The game started pretty evenly with the teams being tied 1-1 at the end of the first period. Killam began to click later and the game ended 6-1 in their favor. Lougheed lacked bench strength, while Killam had a surplus of players, with coaches "Punch" Kinzer and "Sid Alle" Manning and "Joe Blake" Yours pushing in reinforcements.

Picking out the 3 stars we go over on a limb in picking David Kelsberger, Gordie Lewis and Bob Bible.

The tourney was a big success financially and sportwise Officials of Killam Minor Hockey Assn. are to be congratulated on staging the event. We hope it becomes annual.

Two days before we're to go, the bus company informs that only 3 buses will be available. Mr. Smiley raises hell and another bus. The day before we leave, eight of the kids haven't produced a nickel, three of them have changed their minds and won't go, and four are at home, sick.

Mr. Smiley, the poor old devil, flies about like a dert in a windstorm, trying to make tickets, bus seats and bodies come out even.

But, somehow, the cavalcade is sailing down the highway on Wednesday afternoon, the students singing merrily, Mr. Smiley, calm and mentoring to himself, slumped in one of the buses. Only two kids have forgotten their tickets. Only one is bus sick. Only three have tried to smash a window.

Eight hours, 280 miles and one cultural experience later, Mr. Smiley is delivering to her home, 14 miles east of town, the girl who forgot to tell her parents to meet the bus on return. Ecstatic and bright-eyed, she babbles effervescently, "Thanks - very - much - Mr. - Smiley - I - Really - enjoyed - it-and - had - a - wunnerful - time - do we - hafta - have - our - homework done - tomorrow?"

Shower Held For Sheila Armstrong

Bellshill Community Centre was the scene of a lovely shower on Sunday afternoon, March 8th in honor of Miss Sheila Armstrong, bride-elect of March 21st. The school was beautifully decorated with ping and white streamers, flowers and replica of a wedding cake.

Mrs. Porter O'Reilly and Mrs. M. Lowther were in charge of the program, which included a contest of twenty words beginning with 'Can', reading of Advice to the bride; three songs by the Besties; duet by Mrs. Reth Peacock and Mrs Don McAllister, and two old favorite songs by a group of girls from the district.

Mrs. O'Reilly spoke a few words on Sheila's behalf, and presented her with many useful gifts which were carried in by Valerie Armstrong & Isabel Peacock. Mrs. R. Matthews, twin sister of the bride, Miss Dianne Peacock and Mrs Don McAllister assisted in opening the gifts. Sheila thanked the 35 guests and invited them to visit her and Alvin at their home E. and N. of Alliance. Mrs. R. Matthews read a list of all that sheila said while opening the gifts. Lunch was served by the Bellshill Community and Grotna Goodwill Club.

St. John's W. A.

After the opening prayers, members heard a report of the Diocese work, which appealed for continued financial support. Reports were given by the secretary, treasurer & the sick visitor.

Flowers were to be ordered for the altar at Easter. The speaker at the Women's World Day of Prayer service, Mrs. Penny, had requested that the W.A. purchase two or three bibles, to be placed in the Church, instead of paying her travelling expenses.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Benirate had sent a very generous cheque to the W.A., and it was agreed to purchase a silver box for the Communion Wafers with part of this money.

Members were sorry to hear that Miss Cole would soon be leaving us, and it was decided to give her a small presentation before she leaves Sedgewick.

The Easter Bake Sale is to be convened by Mrs. Bettinette, Mrs. Zvanek, and Mrs. Culbert. Some new plastic table-cloths were to be put on order.

Strome Officially Opens Water-Sewer Works, New Curling Rink

STROME. — Tuesday, March 17th was not confined to the Irish in the Village of Strome, as officials and citizens gathered together to celebrate the official "turning on" ceremony of the new Sewer and Water plants, and the "opening" of the new 2-sheet artificial curling rink.

The ceremonies got under way at the Elks Community Hall, where the citizenry gathered to hear speeches by dignitaries. Mayor Alvin Gordon extended a welcome to everyone and outlined the purpose of the gathering. Strome has taken a big step forward in the installation of a modern sewer and water facility and an artificial curling rink, a major accomplishment for a small village.

Mr. Don Hayes spoke on behalf of the curling club, extended a welcome to all present, and complimented the village and the club on the accomplishment.

Mr. Hayes stated that the modern curling rink, now in use, becomes a greater accomplishment when it is known that it is entirely paid for.

Among the other speakers were, Mr. R. Cameron of G. C. McLeod Construction, Mr. Brian Beaton, of Strong, Leach and Nelson, Consulting Engineers on the project, Mr. [illegible] of Ghostpine, and Mr. Leah Hillam, M. L. A.

Mr. Art Yakes, local Health Officer, who was also present, stressed the importance of each modern facilities in the health of the people and highly praised Strome on its forward step.

Mr. Hillman emphasized the fact that more and more towns and villages are going forward with modern facilities, and that very few are now left without some equipment.

Following the opening part of the "celebration" the gathering went to the Pump House, where Mr. Hillman opened the valve and threw the switch to declare the Village's Sewer and Water plant officially opened.

From there the party went to the curling rink where Mr. Hillman cut the ribbon, and officially opened the new and modern curling rink.

Mr. Charles P. Hayes, local curler of long standing and an old resident, had the distinction of throwing the first "official" rock.

Back to the hall was the next order of business, where lunch was served by the ladies of the district, on tables which featured a cake decorated in the form of a house, complete with curling rocks and fire hydrants. Mayor Alvin Gordon acted as the Village's official cake cutter.

Mr. C. P. Hayes was the day's M C

Former Lougheedite 90 Years Young

The doctors and staff of Stony Plain Medical Centre took time out from their busy schedule last Wednesday to honor a Lougheed young patient on her 90th birthday. She is Mrs. Simon Larson of Darwell who has been Dr. C. Neidstad's patient for the past several years.

A birthday cake topped with lighted candles, highlighted the brief ceremony, followed by coffee and cake. A gift on behalf of the three Doctors was presented by Dr. Nicholson. Mrs Larson was accompanied to the clinic by her daughter, Edna, Mrs. A. Lachle and an old friend, Mrs. B. Gesse of Darwell.

Born in Norway 90 years ago on March 6th, Mrs. Larson emigrated to the U. S. with her parents when 9 years old. In 1901 she married John Larson, and the couple moved to Canada in 1904. Throughout the years they farmed in the Lougheed district. Shortly after Mr. Larson's death in 1929, Mrs. Larson came to Darwell to live near her daughter. A son, Melvin, resides in Lougheed, and another son, Adolph died in 1946. She is very proud of her seven grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

PWUA CONFERENCE

SEDGEWICK — The District 8 P. W. U. A. Conference will be held in the Rosalind Elk's Hall, Rosalind, on Thursday, April 2nd, 1964, commencing at 10:00 a. m.

An interesting program has been planned, and a cordial invitation is extended to all PWUA and PLA ladies to attend. Visitors are welcome.

Hardisty H & S

HARDISTY — The regular month ly meeting of the Hardisty and District Home and School was held on March 16th at the school. The main portion of the business meeting concerned a bake sale to be held soon.

The Home and School convention, to be held in Red Deer April 16-17, was also discussed. It was decided the executive would try to find a delegate to attend.

As the Assn. has been investigating ways of improving the school grounds, it had been decided at a previous meeting to ask our representative Mr. Closston to attend the March meeting as guest speaker. He explained the school budget, how the money is divided among the schools in the Division. Due to the heavy expenditures the division has made this past year, all Mr. Closston could allow for the grounds was $500.00.

Mr. Don Gillies was also present, and spoke of the various methods of improving the grounds, such as levelling, hauling in soil, planting of grass, etc. As these plans entailed considerably more than $500, it was decided to remove the hedge at the front and replace it with a suitable fence. It was also moved that the Home and School requisition the division each year for money for further improvements.

Lunch concluded the evening.

Next meeting is April 20th. We are planning on having a report of the library board. Also hoping to have the grades 2, 4 and 5 and possibly 7 and 8 teachers discuss some of the new teaching methods.

An Appeal To M.P.'s

Psychologists have reached the point we are told, where they suspect that the minds and personalities of children are being changed by TV in many different ways (some beneficial). Perhaps parents are more in tune with the times, for they have long known that such was the case. There is no doubt in my mind that children today are under the sway of TV sets for some good part of their waking hours. Research is going on to assess just what this is doing to our youth, and so far this intense look has come with at least one definite fact, which was predicted by sociologists, and has subsequently been demonstrated by teen-age gangs on back streets — eventually recorded in police courts. It is this. Youth today is more brutal, far more likely to land in jail than was his father — because he has learned to be like that from the TV set.

C. E. Edwards, Deputy President of the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation, remarked recently that juvenile crime and brutality are mounting rapidly in the western world, and that parents are failing to realize the gravity of this social sickness.

Television has unlimited possibilities to become a medium for educating and civilizing, but the unfortunate situation is that the influence of good TV programs is swamped out of all proportion by the constant flow of programs that emphasize crime and violence.

Mr. Edwards said that once he returned his credit card to an oil company because they were spamming him a series of early evening programs that, until he turned the switch, had my children vicariously enjoying the excitement of the juvenile TV actors as they broke into homes, molested old people, destroyed property, pillaged and plundered". The resulting correspondence between him and the Co. brought about improvement in the early evening fare they sponsored.

There is no doubt that (especially in the cities) the past decade of constant glorification of the fast-draw, the switch blade and the judo chop are showing up clearly in our police courts. The indications are alarming, and statistics suggest that juvenile crime may be snowballing.

To back up their argument B. V. S. gives a few facts:

American teen-agers are turning to crime in record numbers. Arrests of 17 and unders are increasing three times as fast as the growth in juvenile population.

The number of persons between the ages of 18 and 21 convicted of indictable offences in Canada increased 35 percent from 1957 to 1961; this was about three times the population growth in this age category.

In Ontario, figures for the last 5 years show convictions for juvenile delinquency in York County had almost trebled, from 922 to 2726. Four youths were tried by one judge, none over 16, for capital murder in the past two years.

His comment: "Young minds are being insidiously educated in ways and means of crime, by the car, TV and magazines".

In Britain the increase in juvenile (under 17) violence has been dramatic. A survey was launched by the Home Office in 1963 to establish what relationship this might have to TV viewing. In 1957 Britain had 60,666 convictions for juvenile delinquency; by 1961 the figure was 120,198 — almost double. But in the same period juvenile convictions for "violence against the person" went up almost fourfold from 454 to 1717.

The Canadian Home and School Assn. is trying to do something about this growing menace. For three years they have been asking the BBG and CBC to undertake research into the effects of TV on children, without success. Now they have turned with a direct appeal to all members of parliament to help. It is time for M. P's. to give an ear.

What's Ahead For Business!

Canada's economy has plunged into 1964 at a pace that guarantees record-break ing levels of activity through the winter months. In a remarkable performance for a three-year-old business expansion, four out of every five key indicators of economic activity are on the rise.

Housing starts doubled in December under the impetus of the government's winter building bonus. Exports followed a 14 percent year-to-year gain in November with a 29 percent jump in December. Biggest wheat shipments pushed the totals up at yearend, but iron ore and lumber exports also helped bring Canada's sales abroad up to 10 percent in 1963 as a whole. Imports, reflecting rising consumer and industrial demand in Canada, jumped 19 percent during 1963, seasonal factors discounted. Industrial production made three strong advances in a row topping the progression with a 1.9 percent rise in November, one of the biggest increases o fthe current expansion. This brought the gain since July to a full six percent.

Manufacturing activity is moving ahead very strongly with the output of durables setting the pace. Total shipments in September, October, November averaged 5.5 percent above those of the previous three months, Backlog of orders is the highest since early in 1958. Merchandisers began 1964 after a solid 3 percent advance during the last quarter of 1963. Despite earlier uncertainties, car sales reached a record rate in October & November for a 30 percent year-to-year gain. — St. Paul Journal.

Politics And Business!

A character by the name of Parkinson is a British subject who has made some shrewd observations concerning governmental operations. What has become known as "Parkinson's law" observes the British civil service grows at the rate of 5.59 percent each year, regardless of war or peace, slump or boom, socialism or non-socialism.

Recently Mr. Parkinson has made another observation: "That nationalization of industries have a built-in tendency towards bankruptcy." There is an element of truth in that saying, and the people are responsible to a considerable extent.

Canada's Trans-Canada Air Line is government-owned. Last year, for the first time in three years, it made a profit. But it could make much money, several million dollars a year, if its repair depot at Winnipeg could be moved to Montreal.

But politics, seemingly, won't let that happen. — Brooks Bulletin.

SHOP-LIFTING!

Apparently shop-lifting is on the increase in Canada, and the Innisfail Province in reporting on the subject had this to say: "People most capable of fighting shop-lifting are parents. When a son or a daughter suddenly possesses a large num ber of expensive articles of merchandise, more than the allowance would permit, it is time to step in and demand an explanation. Action in the early stages of a shoplifting career can save a jail term later in life.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Two Bulls In The Shop

OTTAWA — Even his political enemies have noticed the change in Harry Hays since the new session of Parliament began.

The Agricultural Minister rarely misses a question period at the opening of each day's sitting. He comes into the Commons well-prepared confident, ready to answer questions and alert to the daily crisis related to wide-ranging and difficult portfolio he holds.

Last session he was often absent, auctioning cattle, attending service club meetings, or just talking to farmers — a more intelligent audience he claimed than any he found in the House of Commons.

But this session there is without doubt a new Harry Hays. He seems determined to show that he is a real Minister of Agriculture, aware not only of his duties and responsibilities as the chief spokesman for Canadian farmers, but also of his position as a spokesman for western Canada.

Why the change?

It may be that the rough-hewn member from Calgary has begun to feel at home in the House of Commons. It may be that he has finally come to realize the unique position of responsibility that is his as the only real spokesman for the Prairies in the Pearson Cabinet.

It may be too that he feels a distant threat to his own personal prestige as a result of certain governmental changes in the making.

It should be recalled that on January 29 Prime Minister Pearson announced some major changes in his Cabinet. On the surface the changes constituted a simple shuffle as a result of the departure of former Justice Minister Cherrier and former Postmaster General Denis.

But at the time Mr. Pearson also announced a revision of the Department of Agriculture. He said that Maurice Sauve, Liberal member for Iles de la Madeleine, in Quebec, would be named Minister of Forestry. Furthermore the Department of Forestry would eventually become a part of the Department of Agriculture, with Mr. Sauve having responsibility for the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Agency and other development programs.

Mr. Sauve's new title would be Minister of Forestry and Rural Development. But Mr. Pearson made no bones about it. This new portfolio would be within the Agriculture Department and Mr. Hays would be the Senior Minister. Now apparently we have a struggle going on within the Cabinet, and the future of Agricultural progress is in doubt.

Mr. Sauve, it should be known, is not the type to be "junior" to anyone. He came into Parliament with a tremendous reputation—put to be proved—and raised a terrible fuss when he wasn't invited to join Mr. Pearson's First Cabinet. At that time in fact, he hotstily rejected a Parliamentary secretaryship. If he couldn't be in the Cabinet he wasn't going to take a second prize.

Putting a man like Mr. Hays up against a man like Mr. Hays was just asking for trouble. "Two bulls in one China Shop" was the way one observer put it. There was no discernment in this, of course. Both Mr. Hays and Mr. Sauve are recognized as men of exceptional ability, though each one has rather glaring deficiencies as well.

The trouble has stemmed from the vagueness of Mr. Pearson's plan for the Department of Agriculture.

While Mr. Pearson made it plain at first that the new department of Rural Development and Forestry would be part of the Agricultural Department, he since appears to have backed off. In the Commons this session, he contented himself with saying "we will have a Ministry of Forestry and Rural Development".

The question now is, will there be two separate departments, and if so, how much of the present Agriculture Department will the ambitions Mr. Sauve take with him?

The Liberal members of Parliament are said to be largely in favor of two separate departments. The Liberal Liberal premise of course, was for a separate Ministry for Eastern Agriculture. This has been abandoned and replaced by the Rural Development Ministry, but the predominantly Eastern Liberal caucus still favors a separate Ministry which could concentrate on Eastern farm problems. This is the battleground to the present hot dispute in the Cabinet. Harry Hays and Maurice Sauve are lined up against each other, though not to the point of course, of open conflict.

On the day that Mr. Sauve was sworn in (Feb. 7) an order in council was passed transferring to the Minister of Forestry the functions of the Minister of Agriculture under ARDA, the Farm Credit Act, the Maritime Marshland Rehabilitation Act and the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act.

Apparently Harry Hays, seeing much of his Department disappear from beneath his feet, reacted violently. Seventeen days later, the order in council was revoked. Even Maurice Sauve, it is said, thought that the original order in council was going too far too fast.

But the original showdown has only been postponed. Maurice Sauve and Harry Hays are engaged in a struggle for power and influence in the Cabinet. It will probably end in a draw off.

Whether or not the struggle still have any advocate effect on agricultural programs is still unknown. Probably not. But these personal battles often do have far-reaching effects on policies of the whole government. For the moment it's not the battle seems to have resulted in keeping Harry Hays in the Commons and making him a real Agriculture Minister.

For some people at least, that will seem to be a most welcome result.

YOUNG SOCREDS PLAY RED DEERE FOR CUP

On Sunday, March 15th, a memorable game was played on the Young Social Creditors travelled to Pine Lake to challenge the Red Deer group at curling. The Red Deer S. C. group is now in possession of the Aberhart Memorial trophy, and to defend their position must accept all challenges in any sport.

The two rinks, skipped by Tom Lewis and Ray Pottage, turned in a commendable two games out of four but lost in total points. This was, however, relatively unimportant, as the curlers made the acquaintance of other Young Social Creditors and had a lot of fun as well.

At the regular meeting on March 19th it was decided to try again for the trophy but in another sport.

The young people enjoyed a St. Patricks Day party and lunch after the business meeting.

The next meeting will be held at the Barry Cameyne home, April 21.

St. Patrick's Night was celebrated in Killam with a big dance sponsored by the IOOF Lodge. The dance was a complete success in every way with receipts over $135.00.

DR. WIEDNED TALKS TO C. H. ON AFRICA

SEDGEWICK — "The fact that most African States are controlled by one political party does not necessarily mean they are under the power of a dictatorship," declared Dr. Donald Wiedner, at a meeting sponsored by the Central United Nations Assn. of Students.

Dr. Wiedner, who has recently been named head of the University's Department of History in Edmonton, spoke to an audience of 80 students and adults. In addition to students from Central High, representatives from Hughenden, Camrose and Forestburg attended.

Dr. Wiedner stated that the single party state was in itself and expression of democracy, in that the party embraced a wide spectrum of political thought and that differences in opinion and policy were resolved within the party. The single party state has resulted because each state is concerned chiefly with the problem of establishing independence and stability, and until these goals have been achieved, African politicians will bury their differences in favor of developing strong individualism. He noted that in many cases unrealistic policies, advocated by irresponsible opposition leaders, have resulted in even greater support for the majority party. He warned of the danger of imposing Western ideas on people who have matured in entirely different cultures.

Dr. Wiedner discussed the future of Africa, noting those countries which could develop into multi-party governments, and those which could develop into dictatorships.

An extensive question period followed his talk. C.E.N.U.N.A.S. hopes to invite other speakers in the future.

JIM AND JESSIE BLYTHE

Jim and Jessie spent the ensiier part of their lives in Ontario, where both were born and raised in the same district. I can't honestly say they were schooled in the same school, as I really do not believe either of them attended school any more than the law demanded at that time. In these early days a man's dressed necessary to acquire a good education, as soon as they were big enough, both were got to work being very doubtful they earned, home to their parents.

When Jim was about 16 or 16, he became fed up with this arrangement and decided to come West. He was a big lad for his age and could be taken for much older.

He had been seeing Jessie occasionally, sometimes just sitting in the parlor, but often enough they realized that they thought quite a bit of each other. One day he told her of his secret plan to go out West where he had heard of such golden opportunities for young men who were not afraid of hard work. Jessie thought it a splendid idea, and wondered if there wasn't some sort of work she could do too, as she too had become fed up with slaving away day after day, then adding her wages over to her folks. They talked and planned and figured, and finally decided they would get married (both were legally too young), but they could either one pass as 16 or more without any questioning. Doing it this way, Jessie would not have to give her wages to her folks, no matter where she worked.

But it was decided he would go out West after they were married & she would remain where she was, holding her job (she was dressmaker, hair-cook, in the town's only hotel) & send him every cent she could spare for him to buy cattle. She would follow him in a year or so.

This idea really suited Jim. They were quietly married the next weekend and Jim left for Manitoba the following week. He came straight to the district where, many years later, I came from the U.S.A. with my family.

Jim's first job was really menial, sweeping and cleaning the many spittoons used in the bar-room, and washing floors in the town's only hotel. At first he did this for his board, but in about a month he received a small pittance, every cent of which he hoarded. Meanwhile he kept his ears open for a chance to get a job on a cattle ranch. The opportunity came along in time, so, after all he was working in a good place to hear of such a chance. He pulled out of here and got sitting alongside his new boss, a typical western rancher.

Jim was a man of few words; but never-the-less very little escaped his eyes or ears. He noticed that the white-faced Herefords predominated the prairies; that these were the type that could withstand the rigors of the severe Manitoba winters, as well as being splendid beef cattle. So after working for six months at $20 a month, he asked his boss if he could invest his wages in one of the purebred Hereford calves. He had formed of the money Jessie had been sending to him also.

That was the beginning of Jim Blyth's raising of the best Hereford stock shipped from Winnipeg for many years. Jim kept at his job and saved every dollar. This, coupled with what Jessie was sending, soon brought quite a small herd of Herefords, so one day, Jim decided it was time he took out a quarter section. He took his cows to a piece of his own. His dream was coming true at last. He took land on the banks of a good-sized stream, built a log shack, herded his cattle over onto his own grazing land, and went to it his own.

He then sent for Jessie, but upon her arrival she immediately took a job in the hotel in that town, but instead of giving Jim her wages now, she decided to do a bit of investing on her own. She wasn't at her new job very long until she realized that there was real money in the hotel business out here in the west, so she decided she would buy the place, the building, business, bar and all. Soon as Jim got over she had done he suggested they make their own liquor and bootleg it to the many ranchers and farmers around the country.

Together the two of them worked tirelessly and every day, for into the six nights, for months, converting this evil firewater.

As you know, in those days, Liquor was not to other men were pretty slack, and Jim and Jessie soon managed to collect a small fortune with the proceeds from the hotel, the law fel bar, the bootlegging, as well as from the occasional pile of Jim's cattle which he periodically shipped to Winnipeg.

However, all things come to an end (good or bad) and sooner or later. Then the day came when Jessie announced that "those Revenue Officers were getting just too snoopy for comfort and she would sell the whole kaboodle to the first bidder".

The place and business sold in no time at all and Jessie then went out to live with her husband in his vee log shanty. They started planning right away to build, not only a lovely big house, but the biggest, most up-to-date, ship-roofed barn for their cattle in this part of the west. They built the house of field stones, a huge, square place, also the main part of the barn was also of stone, then, by using stones they were also running off their fields. And altho' these buildings were put up in 1907-08 they are still there, in splendid condition, and are still a land-mark known as the "old Blythe Place".

With such an unhappy ending life which they both had in their teens, coupled with all of those years of hard work, skimping and saving, wouldn't one think that now they can enjoy the fruit of their labor. Surely they can now live a happy, comfortable life and not have to count every penny. That trend of thought is not only logical, but basic. In a lifetime are hard to break. Truly, money does not buy happiness.

Next week I shall endeavor to tell you of the life Jim and Jessie lived in their beautiful new home.

(By Stanley Zandenbekk)

INSECTS OR NOT

Just what is an insect? Can you tell the difference between a true insect and a bird?

All Arthropods (jointed-leggers) are divided into groups according to number of legs. This means that persons without specific knowledge or experience can identify various arthropods by counting the number of legs. There are five groups according to this method of classification.

The true insects such as flies, bees and beetles, have three pairs of legs.

Spiders, ticks, mites, scorpions & other members of the spider group, have four pairs of legs.

Crustaceans have from five to seven pairs of legs.

Centipedes have one pair of legs on each body segment.

Millipedes have two pairs of legs on each body segment.

All arthropods have a chitinous exoskeleton. This requires the creature to periodically shed his old skeleton to accomodate any new body growth. This process is known as moulting.

Insects are the world's most numerous inhabitants. There are more kinds of insects and more insect individuals in the world than all other animals combined.

Insects are also most widely distributed of any animal group. They are found everywhere, in the air, on land, in water, in plants and animals and from the tropics to the arctic.

What adaptations do insects possess that enable them to be so successful?

The tough exoskeleton offers protection against injury and dissecation, all without being cumbersome and unwieldy.

Their small size permits easy hiding. Short interval between egg and maturity permits several generations in a season. Extraordinary adaptive features — the ability to sleep through adverse conditions.

If members of abundance and extent of distribution are any criteria for measurement of success, then truly the insects are successful.

Because of their great numbers & vast distribution, insects are capable of tremendous good or evil. Let us encourage beneficial species, while maintaining our defences against the detrimental ones.

FLAGSTAFF SCOUTS

A regular meeting of the Flagstaff District Council Boy Scouts of Canada was held in Forestburg with president Bob Sesi presiding.

Discussion took place on the tent. Correspondence was read regarding the Queen Scout ceremonies. There will be two ceremonies, one in Calgary and one in Red Deer, on May 23rd. Also a Pack Scouters training course in Camrose on April 5th, at Our Lady of Mount Pleasant School.

Reports from the groups were given, and accepted. There are plenty of badges on hand. The formation of a Scouters Club was discussed.

Field Executive Denny May was present and mentioned the Physical Fitness Theme in Scouting, and that this would be carried on until 1967. He also mentioned that there are now four fitness badges for Scouts. Badge certificates will be returned to the A.D.C. A Camp will be planned for a weekend if the groups are interested.

The meeting adjourned, followed by lunch served by the Forestburg group.

F.U.A. NEWSLETTER

● The man-killing pace being set in the current campaign for hog marketing boards in Alberta has seen thirty special meetings of producers so far this month. Before the Alberta farm organization's educational program is completed in mid-April, at least 60 more will be held.

An average of about 50 people have attended each meeting to date. Efforts are made to reach as many producers as possible. "Their elusiveness has been a problem," says Ed Nelson, program co-ordinator, "as between continuing to use the same selling methods, or to try a new method." "Producers know what they have now," Mr. Nelson said, "it is our job to explain how a marketing board, the best alternative until of selling available would work."

● Finals in the first annual Farmers' Curling Bonspiel Prov. Curling Championships were completed on March 11th at Edmonton Sportsman. The Art Cullen rink from Olds captured the Alberta Wheat Pool cup, winning out over the George Earle rink from St. Albert. The Final score was 18-4. Cullen was A event winner, coming through five games undefeated in the two-day, double knock-out competition. The trophy was presented to the winning rink by Mr. Jack Parker of the Edmonton office of the Wheat Pool.

Eleven out o f the 14 districts had representatives at the final. The FUA intends to make this an annual event

THE IRISH IN SPRING

Caught between the Seventeenth of Ireland and the Twenty-first of Spring, I was in a quandary about a topic for this week's epistle (A quandary is a cross between an Irish bog and the first day of spring in Canada.)

Come to think of it, the two have a lot in common: the Irish & spring in this country. You never know what to expect. You may be in for a bout of weeping, a hurricane of abuse, or a blast of hot air, from either.

Perhaps it is this unpredictability that makes the company of the Irish and the coming of spring in Canada such a constant source of bewilderment, delight and despair. I speak as an expert. My wife is half Irish and I've battled my way through a good few of these Eskimo's nightmares—first day of spring—in this land.

I never know any more than the kids do, whether my wife is going to hit me or kiss me. And I never know whether the twenty-first of March is going to wrap me in a great volcanic embrace or fling me the back of a wrist that would freeze the brains of a horse cowboy.

There's a great deal of myth in the popular conception of these tricky twins, the Irish and spring in Canada.

Irishmen are supposed to be bubbling over with the juices of life. They are understood to be warm-hearted, charming, gay and lively. They're expected to be sentimental and eloquent, generous and devil-may-care. And many of them are.

But don't blame me if the first Irishman you meet after reading this is a loquacious, long-faced, mournful, money-grubbing, pleasure-

PLANNING YOUR GARDEN
Perhaps this seems early to be discussing gardens. However with the lovely mild weather lately, and the arrival of seed catalogues, we get itchy fingers to do a little digging.

How have your gardening results been the last few years? Did the varieties you chose mature early enough to miss frosts? Did you get good results when you fruze your garden produce?

Before you send an order for your seeds, send in this offer for the bulletin "Vegetable Varieties Suitable for freezing". This lists common varieties that have excellent results in freezing tests.

Another publication which is a must for home gardeners is the Alberta Horticultural Guide. It lists vegetables, fruit trees, perennials & ornamenta ltrees that are recommended for the various soils and climates in Alberta. This is extremely helpful in deciding which varieties and perennials are best suited for this area and can save you time and money in choosing material to beautify your grounds.

SPRING BLENDS
Looking at the new spring fabrics a number of blends are available to the home sewer. At man made fabrics can be blended with wool, cotton, linen silk or other man made noses. The result may be a fabric that has more soil resistance, shrinkage resistance, greater resistance to wear and tear generally

The percentage of each fiber in the fabric should be known, since the expected result will depend mainly on the predominant fiber in the blend.

When selecting and caring for your garments, consider the predominant fibre present. Usually 65% or more of a man made fibre will give the fabric advantages of wash and wear, and pleat and shape retention in laundering. Increased wear life & resistance in shrinkage control may be obtained with 20% man made fibre. Under 10% of a man made fibre gives only novel color and pattern effects.

The change-over from the old to the new bottle will take place in Alberta on or shortly after March 23, 1964. This will complete a program of long-term research by the brewing industry to design a better bottle for beer. The result is the compact bottle - a returnable container, approximately three inches shorter than the old bottle, lighter in weight and slightly greater in diameter but containing the same 12 ounce volume.
With the new bottle will come a new look in beer cartons - smaller, neater and easier to carry.

THE NEW COMPACT BOTTLE IS REFUNDABLE

Public Urged To All Attend C.D. Meeting

(Dulcere Dulcae)

DAYSLAND — The Civil Defence Committee of Daysland urgently requests the people of Daysland and immediate district to come to a meeting to be held at the Daysland Elks Hall on April 13 at 8:00 p. m.

The purpose of this meeting is to explain the need we have of volunteer helpers should we ever have a disaster such as the one at Lamont.

The people of Lamont had held 2 Disaster Plan work-outs in preparation for some such need, and because they were prepared and acted without panic and with purpose, the Doctors have said that five or six lives were saved that would have been lost through delay in treating.

We expect to have a Disaster Plan work-out in Daysland on June 3rd. In order to plan for this exercise we need the help of the whole community. Will you join us at the Elks hall on April 13th? We need volunteers in many capacities in order to make this community project a success.

The lives of those dear to you may well be in YOUR hands.

P. F. R. A. PROJECT

OTTAWA — The Minister of Agriculture, the Honourable Harry Hays, announced today that P.F.R.A. will start during the coming summer on the construction of the Chain of Lakes water storage project in Southern Alberta.

This is a multi-purpose water storage project which will ensure adequate supplies of water for a large livestock population in the area, for domestic use, and for irrigation. It will also protect against flooding from Willow Creek and Stimson Creek, and as an auxiliary benefit will provide water supply for several towns in the area.

Preliminary investigations for the project have been completed. Detailed surveys will be started immediately, with construction to start on the completion of these. It is expected that the project will be finished in late 1965. The total cost of the project is estimated at $700,000.

Pipeline Permit Applied For

Hughenden Pipelines Limited has made an application for a permit to construct a pipeline for the transportation of propane, butanes and condensate. The line will run from the Kimbey-Nevis supply source to the Hardisty-Hughenden area. The size of the line will be 6 inch and the length will be 125 miles.

The company will transport LP gas through its system for delivery to distribution companies and local dealers at various point along the line. The distribution companies will take delivery at certain places along the line and transport the LP gas to the consumers by tank truck. The combination of pipeline transport & tank truck distribution of LP gas will result in a lower cost to the consumers.

The demand for propane is somewhat with the highest demand occurring during the winter months. The company intends to store excess LP gas during the summer months when gas plant production exceeds sales If, during the winter months, sales exceed gas plant production, the company will draw LP gas from the underground caverns and the flow in the line will be reversed. The Co. expects to have 3 million gallons of propane in the underground caverns before the end of 1964. The storing of LP gas in underground caverns during the off-months will have a stabilizing effect on the LP gas price, and this in turn will benefit the consumers.

An Edmonton based consulting engineering firm, Tattrup and Associates Limited, are the engineers, project managers, and agents. The engineering company employs a staff of 40 andcapacity has a technical staff of 25 men working on the project. The peak construction crew will consist of approximately 250 men. A good part of the preliminary engineering work has been done and the company is confident that the line will be completed by the end of October 1964. Pumping stations and other facilities will be completed later, but the company expects to have the system in operation before the end of 1964. The total cost of the project is estimated at 4 million.

The company stresses two main points: First, the importance of providing a dependable supply to the Alberta consumers at all times, particularly in the winter months, and second, the importance of insuring against price fluctuations dictated by outside markets during periods of shortage, by providing sufficient storage.

M.L.A.'s Get Pay Increase . . .

(By John Warren)

EDMONTON — The good news for members and cabinet ministers was finally made public last week. Everybody is going to get a pay increase. Members will get $900 more a year, starting with the present session, under a bill introduced last Tuesday. The increase in the total indemnity and allowances will give members a total of $5,400 annually. The indemnity will jump to $3,600 from the present $2700 and expenses will increase to $1800 from $1400.

Cabinet ministers will receive a pay boost to $12,800 from the present $11,000 and the Premier's pay will go up to $16,000 from $14,500. All of them also receive $5,000 as MLA.

The healthiest pay boost is reserved for Opposition Leader Mike Maccagno however. He will receive a sessional indemnity of $7,600 and expense allowance of $3,800 annually. At present he gets $3,600 in addition to his basic $4,400 as a member of the legislature.

The Speaker's sessional indemnity is increased to $6,000 from $4,750 & his expense allowance under the bill would jump to $3000 from $2250.

The Deputy Speaker would get an increase to $4800 from the present $4000 and his expense allowance is to go up to $2400 from $2000.

All in all the payment seems adequate for a month and a half's attendance at the Legislature.

Among the other major bills introduced during the week was one permitting the government to give greater financial assistance to junior colleges and a new deal for financing the university.

Under the bill the government would pay operational and construction grants to public junior colleges and operational grants to private colleges.

Outside the House Education Minister A. O. Aalborg said the government hopes the junior college program would arouse interest and lead to construction of more new colleges through the province, taking the load off first year university classes.

The new formula for grants to the University would allow $1,270 per student, per year. For the next year this will total about $14,600,000 as against last year's operational grant of $11,500,000.

Amendments to the Town & Village Act to allow councils to establish a fund, built up by a property tax levy over a period of years, for essential capital works, were also introduced. Similar legislation dealing with municipal districts was introduced the previous week.

The bill would also permit a council to contribute towards a scheme of insurance for employees against sickness, accident or death. It would allow a town to acquire wells for a public utility and permit acquisition of land from the province for establishment of industry whether or not such property is within the boundaries of the town or village.

It would also reduce the time to 1 month from 3 months in which a property owner must remedy a condition or demolish and remove an unoccupied building deemed to be a nuisance. The town or village could recover any costs involved from the property owner.

Challenge To Agriculture!

There is an old saying that time and tide wait for no man. You may wonder what this has to do with agriculture, but the saying applies to most phases of life, and agriculture, according to Mr. Charles W. Gibbons, President of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool faces a challenge in this modern day. He says that Canadian wheat farmers in future will have to grow more wheat on fewer acres in order to meet growing demands for meat, and the world demand for food. He also says that Canadians may have to find ways of processing wheat so it will be more readily acceptable in the rice-eating areas of the world. These were some of his observations in a recent speech to the National Research Council in Saskatoon.

Canada's long-term outlook for the domestic scene seems to indicate a large increase in demand for feed grains, expanding fodder requirements and additional demand for cereal grains.

Livestock producers are going to require the best nutrient quality of feed grains and fodder they can have from the least acreage of cultivated land and at the lowest possible cost. If increases in feed grains, fodder and pasture lands require switching land from present wheat cultivation ,this also means we must continue to improve quality and yield of our bread wheats to meet expected rising demands from the smaller acreage.

At a Canadian resources conference in 1961, economists predicted that by 1980, Canada would see a doubling of effective demand for meat, 70% increase in total volume of food consumption and an 80% increase in the demand for feed grain.

Others tell us that if Canada is to produce a marked increase in livestock that a large portion of the increase must take place in Western Canada, partly because natural pasture lands in Eastern Provinces have limits to their expansion & partly because the absolute quantity of pasture land now available may be dissipated by urban and industrial development. They say, too, that most of the increase in feed grain production must come from the Western Provinces.

Others tell us that a sizeable area of arable land in the West now under cultivation ought to be retired because it is submarginal for our known technology and market conditions. We can certainly suspect that some of these areas now in crop will be retired to pasture land if the livestock numbers are to increase by the numbers predicted. This in turn suggests opportunity for improvement in both yield and quality of wheat and the feed grains. In terms of the market place, farmers who feed livestock want feed grains that will yield high in bushels and grade high in nutrient quality and still be priced within the market in which they must sell the finished meat animal.

Maybe some of us are cultivating the wrong kinds of grain. Barley growers for example, often try to produce a malting variety because of a premium, and getting it on the market outside of their regular delivery quotas. There may be good reasons for some to cultivate improved malting barley varieties, but what of the areas which traditionally produce poor malting barley? Perhaps they should be trying to grow a high-yield feed barley, which will provide high nutrient feed at a relatively low cost.

Economists also told the 1961 conference they anticipated an 80% increase in world food demand by 1980, which they expected to be largely filled by increases in cereal grain production. A large portion of this expected demand increase will occur in countries in the southern portion of the world, where per capita disposable incomes now are extremely low and likey will remain relatively low for most of this century.

Many areas of the southern region now are large rice producers. If their demand for cereal grains increases sharply, and it certainly will as their populations expand, they may widen the gap between the actual requirement and production simply because they cannot increase rice yield quickly enough.

The question arises: can wheat from the high wheat-producing areas of the northern portion of the world become an effective alternative to rice?

One of the problems of substituting wheat for rice is that wheat's main derivative is bread and many Eastern countries do not have the bread-eating habit. But perhaps a way can be found to serve whole wheat in a patty form, much like a hamburger patty that can be cooked over open fires commonly in use in the hilly countries in Asia. Or can wheat be served in boiled form & eaten as rice is now? The big problem in boiling wheat is that it comes out in a pasty mass like porridge and cannot be eaten with chop sticks, the conventional eating equipment of many Asiatic countries.

A development to make wheat a more suitable alternative to to rice for these people has recently come to our attention. In Australia, a flour miller has come up with a wheat derivative which he claims looks, cooks and eats like rice, but is even more nutritious. He calls the product Rycena. It contains 50% more protein, four times more B group vitamin and three times more iron than rice. It also claims Rycena's liquid absorption makes the product when cooked one third more in bulk than rice.

The long-term outlook in the world at large also indicates rising demand for feed grains and the cereals, again at the lowest possible cost. We should find a way to feed people who are hungry, partly by making available to them through assistance programs and other means the foods we traditionally produce, and also by trying to find methods of processing our present products in such a form that can more readily be used within their customary eating habits.

I don't think we can say we've done a good job simply by sending bakery teams abroad on programs of educating rice-eaters into our bread habits. It may take a generation or more to change habits of long-term standing. But when so many people now consume as much a low nutritional level, it seems to me that the onus is on us in the Western world to find some way to market our foods in a form which they can use now. Possibly their known techniques of cooking and food preparation. Maybe the Rycena people in Australia have hit upon a worthwhile method that we haven't considered worth pursuing.

It is all very well to favor instant Canadianization and to deplore "hyenated Canadianism" but there is no reason to forget absolutely those worthwhile things which have been flowing into Canada from other parts of the world for some 350 years now. — Nanton News.

The Vancouver Province says that fine inspirations must not be discouraged, but they will have to be tempered with a little more realism and the knowledge that, even in these days of easy credit and huge government deficits, there is a limit to the length of Canada's purse.

IT'S NICE, BUT DON'T STEP BACK TO ADMIRE IT . . .

Mark Time Budget

OTTAWA — The second budget brought down by Finance Minister Walter Gordon for the coming fiscal year could hardly have been more different than his first last June.

That first budget by the prestidigitating Minister of the shiny new Liberal Government blazed forth in streak-of-lawn of economic nationalism and political partisanship. It was bold, decisive and far-reaching in fact, it reached much too far. In the ensuing storm that it blew up, Mr. Gordon was forced to begin a series of humiliating retreats that had yet to end when he brought down his next budget.

This second statement of fiscal policy was ultra conservative, ultra cautious. In the background could be heard references to economic nationalism, but they were softly muted. Not a note of partisanship could be found. It was a budget framed by a committee of the Cabinet not to promote action, but to keep the Government out of trouble. From that point of view, it seems to have been a successful budget.

In terms of straight fiscal policy, the only changes of any consequence announced by the Finance Minister was a withdrawal of another one of the major provisions in his last budget, the withholding tax.

In an effort to promote increased Canadian ownership of domestic industry, Mr. Gordon proposed last year to reduce from 15 to 10 per cent the withholding tax on dividends paid to shareholders living abroad by companies which provided Canadians with at least a 25 per cent stake in their enterprise.

But for those companies which failed to meet the Canadian ownership test after the end of 1964, Mr. Gordon proposed legislation to raise the withholding tax on dividends paid to non-residents from 15 to 20 per cent, a move that raised a howl from investors on both sides of the border.

On the flimsy pretext that retention of the existing 15 per cent maximum withholding tax in Canada would be just as effective under the reduced corporation tax rate approved in the United States, the Finance Minister said that there was no longer any necessity to go ahead with the planned increase in the Canadian dividend levy to 20%.

In retrospect, it appears that Mr. Gordon would have been far wiser to have proposed retention of the 15 per cent rate from the beginning for companies which did not meet the Canadian ownership test, while reducing the rate from 15 to 5 per cent for those companies which did. Why Mr. Gordon even now did not propose to reduce the lower rate from 20 to 5 per cent in order to maintain the strong incentive provided by the 10 percentage point differential originally contemplated still remains a mystery - for the 5 per cent incentive is, really less than 1-2 that after U.S. Taxes a new 2% tax benefit isn't likely to move many non-resident owned mountains.

Apart from this withdrawal, the budget had one over-riding objective the reduction in the chronic deficit of the Federal Treasury. Mr. Gordon foresees that after ending in deficit during the current fiscal year on the budget and old age security fund by $740,000,000 he would wind up the new fiscal year with his loss cut to $440,000,000.

Absent the only major concession made by the Minister involving increased expenditures was the establishment of $10-a-month family allowances for the parents of children 16 and 17 who are still attending school.

In his single-minded determination to bring about a sharp reduction in the budget deficit, Mr. Gordon was pursuing a policy that was opposed by the bulk of Canadian businessmen and was at variance with the fiscal measures adopted in the United States. Until recently, there was fairly general agreement among Canadian businessmen that the Government should make a major effort to get itself out of the red.

Over the past year or more, however, there has been a startling transformation in the attitude of businessmen in this country, who appear suddenly to have embarked with a passion the Keynsian budget policy of the U.S. administration.

It was some two years ago that the late President John F. Kennedy proposed a substantial cut in both personal and corporate income taxes. At that time there were wide-spread fears that the economy was heading into a recession which could only be prevented by a sharp stimulus from the Federal Government.

During the long months the proposal was still hanging fire in Congress, it gradually became apparent that far from tapering, the boom was gaining strength. As a result a new theory was advanced to justify a tax cut, namely that unless tax rates were reduced there was danger the boom would be prematurely choked off.

In this country, businessmen took up the bus and cry, endlessly repeating the argument that a cut in taxes would spur economic growth, which would result in rising revenues to the Federal Government, which would result in a balanced budget.

Mr. Gordon argued that across-the-board income tax cuts were not necessary to stimulate expansion of national production, which appeared likely to increase by some 5 1/2 per cent in 1964 without the help of a boost from the Federal Government. With the general level of unemployment substantially reduced, what was required were selective measures to provide jobs in regions where the remaining unemployed were most heavily concentrated. Quebec and the Atlantic provinces, the Minister maintained.

While there may be a lot to be said for Mr. Gordon's argument as far as it went, one of the major omissions in his budget was the introduction of any new programs aimed at tackling the problem of regional and local unemployment on a selective basis.

With his provision of a three-year tax holiday and accelerated depreciation in the last budget for companies establishing in depressed areas, Mr. Gordon took the first major step to tackle a problem that other countries began dealing with more than a quarter-century ago. With so much more crying to be done in Canada, this hardly seems the moment to start marking time.

The 930 has a real tractor engine . . . 6-cylinder, 401 cubic inch Powrcel diesel or 377 cubic inch Powrdyne LP-gas. Famous Case big-bore, long-stroke, high-torque design . . . built to LAST!

Fleet owners who keep accurate records swear by the 930 for rock-bottom maintenance costs.

You'll like the 930 once you feel its tremendous hugging power . . . its armchair comfort and convenience. Find out in your own fields what a Case 930 Comfort King will do.

NITRATE POISONING IS DEFLATED

There is little or no risk of nitrate poisoning involved in the use of nitrogenous fertilizers as recommended rates, says the Alberta Advisory Fertilizer Committee.

This fact is substantiated by studies in Wisconsin and elsewhere in the U. S. It should alleviate any fear caused by recent reports that nitrogen fertilizers are likely to be the cause of nitrate poisoning in this province.

The committee point out that reports from Wisconsin, where the problem has been carefully studied, indicate nitrate poisoning results from use of feeds high in nitrates (over 0.5%). Among the conditions that may cause these high nitrate levels are drought, lack of sunlight, poor and crowded growing conditions weeds with a high nitrate content such as nettles, pigweed, lamb's quarters and goldenrod, special conditions of temperature and humidity during curing or storage, and high nitrate levels in the soil. These conditions may occur whether or not nitrogen fertilizers have been used. Further research will be needed to discover the final answer to the problems.

The rate of application of straight nitrogen fertilizers, recommended in Alberta by the committee is from 25 to 80 pounds per acre of nitrogen. Very few farmers are using more than 50 pounds of elemental nitrogen per acre. When coupled with phosphate, up to 84 pounds of nitrogen is suggested for certain soils and crops. It is unlikely that such small amounts would cause nitrate poisoning unless abnormal conditions in the soil or climate exist.

The committee has no hesitation in pointing out the danger of fertilizers when eaten by livestock. Nitrate fertilizers which have been spilt on the ground or left where animals can get at them, might well lead to nitrate poisoning. Anyone using fertilizers should make sure they are properly applied to the soil and that unused supplies are safely stored away for future use.

CALF SCOURS!

Alberta Veterinarians report they can now save many calves which would formerly have died from scours, by intravenously administering large quantities of fluids & salts over a period of hours. This treatment often necessitates leaving the animal at the Clinic or Office for a day or two but the results are well worth the trouble.

Dr. J. G. O'Donoghue, Asst. Director of the Field Services Division of the Alberta Veterinary Services Branch, says calves often die "as a result because the diarrhea dehydrates the body of fluids and depletes its salt content.

If a problem is apparent, calves can be treated for scours at birth with commercial preparations designed for this purpose. Most calf

Although calf scours cannot be attributed to any single cause, it is an infectious disease in that different types of germs or viruses are generally present. Viruses probably play as insignificant part in beef calf scours compared to their role in dairy calves suffering from the same disease.

Outlook Said Bright

MONTREAL — If current plans are retained, Canada's 1964 capital expenditures will not only be higher than ever before but also will register "a significant upturn" in the nation's total output for the first time since 1957, according to the B of M's Business Review for March.

"This year, on the assumption that gross national product rises 5.5 per cent in current dollar terms, capital expenditures could represent about 22.5 percent of G.N.P.," the Bank of Montreal review observes.

"Current investment plans seem somewhat more broadly based" than in the mid-1950's "with a large part directed towards the creation of facilities to meet increased domestic demands and to improve the competitiveness of Canadian industry."

Business Speeding Up

The B of M notes that the 8.4 per cent rise in capital expenditures planned this year for business includes a rise by manufacturers of some 20 percent.

"Substantially larger investments are planned for new capacity by the steel, cement and pulp and paper industries and, in the secondary manufacturing field, by the producers of transportation equipment, rubber and textiles."

Outlays planned by business "are almost certain to ensure a higher level of construction activity in the coming year" even if the expansion in hous ng does not prove to be as strong as ever expected, the bank says.

While the possibility cannot be ignored that some weakness may develop in the economy as the year progresses, "The present outlook seems very favorable indeed for continued buoyancy in demand expectations both at home and in Canada's chief external markets," the bank says.

The B of M concludes that reali-zation of a capital expenditures program of the size now expected "will be an important additional factor in maintaining the present upward trends in revenues and business activity."

The Bible Today

Three million copies of Scriptures were moved recently in London, England, into a new warehouse in another part of the city.

The demands now being made on The British and Foreign Bible Society in the parking and shipping of cargoes in hundreds of different languages for despatch to all parts of the world, has long overtaxed the original accommodation in Bible House, explained Sir Robert Hutchings, Chairman of the General Committee of the Society.

"The size and extent of the move can be judged by the fact that nearly three million volumes in over 400 languages had to be transported," said Sir Robert. "The total weight involved was just under 1,000 tons. This is the largest stock of Scriptures in the world.

The new warehouses are located at New Cross where much larger facilities are available, in these new quarters stocks are now centralized and despatched efficiently with modern equipment.

BANKS OUSTED. Hal Banks, Canadian czar of Seafarers' International Union, has been ejected from his post by order of the Maritime Trustee. Announcement was made in House of Commons by Labor Minister MacEachen, and was greeted by desk-thumping applause. Here is hoped to end the history of violence on Canada's Great Lakes.

BAPTIST CHURCH

KILLAM — The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Rancier, Thursday evening with 18 ladies answering the roll with an Easter verse. The missionary sketch was read by Mrs. Coyne, with Mrs. Cyr bringing the devotion. The scripture and prayer session was led by Grandma Heartberg. Several business items were dealt with including the Spring Rally to be held in Edmonton April 4th. Committees were appointed to be in charge of a shower to be held on April 16th. Thank you's were presented for several acts of kindness. A time of fellowship and lunch was enjoyed by all.

The Killam Baptist Young People presented a special Good Friday service entitled "The Passion Week". This was given in narrative & musical form and enjoyed by the large attendance.

Rev. Grymaloski spoke at the Easter Sunday services, with special music by the choir, and solois's H. Heartberg and Mrs. W. Fradrick. This being the last Sunday of the month the Young People were in charge of the Sunday evening service. A special announcement was given encouraging all to attend Sunday School next Sunday morning, April 5th, when has been pronounced "Family Sunday" and a number of children will be dedicated during the morning service.

Down Memory's Lane

(By Mrs. F. M. Cantlon, Hardisty, Alberta)

Jim and Jessie Blythe settled down in their new home and began right away to skimp and save, to buy more purebred stock. If Jim heard of a sale of purebred Herefords anywhere in the Province, he almost invariably attended and brought home one of more stock.

He always kept two extra men, & when he would go to a sale he would take one man with him to bring the animals home, and one had to stay home to herd the cattle and clean out the barns, etc.

The old saying "the more you get, the more you want," proved only too true with Jim and Jessie. As they saw their bank roll fatten, they actually became wrapped up with the love and urge to add to it, until Jim was considered one of the wealthiest men in that part of the country.

Jessie always milked 2 or 3 of the best cows, churning the cream, and trading the butter for groceries. She also had invested in a few pigs to feed the butter milk to, and separated too, so she didn't waste that commodity either. Therefore she kept a huge barrel right in the kitchen water and summer in which she would put a concoction of chop, sour butter milk and separated milk. Naturally in time it turned so sour (especially in summer) one could smell those awful odors as soon as one drove up to the door. However Jessie fed her pigs faithfully three times a day. Every so often she sent to the city for a buyer and got rid of 5 or 6 big 200 to 250 pound pigs. She never failed to get top price for them, as well as a premium.

They just loved for the all-important dollar, never sending anyone who came in their home away empty, until at last folks quit trying to be friendly with them and left them to their hogs, cattle and money.

The hard work, with no relaxation, no diversion from the daily grind, begin to tell on them both. Mostly on Jim. Jessie plugged away day after day, carrying that evil-smelling slop out to her pigs and carrying chop and water back to re-fill the barrel, milking the cows and churning butter, happy in just "let the rest of the world go by."

Their place was situated just one mile out of town. On churning day she'd pack her butter into a container, walk into town with it, doing her shopping at the same store every time (a grocery and bakeshop).

One day, after the store-keeper had creamed Jessie with what butter she had brought in, Jessie said, "Now I'd like to get some Cooking Butter". Incidentally in those days, with no facilities to keep butter fresh, sometimes the store keeper would find some of his butter had turned rancid. When that happened, he would sell it at half price, or else trade it, calling it cooking butter.

"Why didn't you keep some of your own butter?" asked the storekeeper. Without batting an eye, Jessie replied, "I did keep out enough for myself to eat, but this cooking butter is good enough for the men."

Another time, Jessie thought the fresh buns in the showcase looked pretty good, so asked the price (Everything sold cheap in those days including baking.) When she was told they sold at 5¢ a dozen, Jessie decided she'd buy a dozen. In about an hour she was back in the store declaring there were not 12 buns in the bag. So the S. K. gave her another bun, remarking, "that was a long walk for just one bun. Was that all you came in for this time?"

"Yes," answered Jessie. "When a boy pays 10¢ for a dozen buns she wants a dozen, and not 11."

A while after the above incident, Jessie decided she wanted another dozen buns (He wasn't too much for a dozen each surely buns). This time the S. K. put 13 buns in the bag just to see what Jessie would do. Jessie never came back to make that mistake right, that day, nor at any other time.

Jessie loved cheese, but figured it was a luxury far too expensive to feed to the men. However, quite often she would get its worth, take it home and put it on her end of the table where she kept guard over it, making sure those men got none of it. She always sat at one end of the long kitchen table, well away from the other end where the men sat. She made sure her precious butter and cheese were well out of the reach of [illegible].

In those early days every settler needed every boy and man in the family who were able to work, to stay at home and help their Dad. This made it almost impossible to get extra help, and settlers such as Jim and Jessie, who had no family and needed help so badly, would send over to the "Dr. Barnado Home" in England and get young lads. These boys would work, sometimes for years for their food and a few necessary clothes, and sometimes 1 or 2 dollars a month. So that was the type of help Jim had.

Jim and Jessie had become so absorbed in their one and only ambition in life of making money, they inevitably became miserly & bitter over spending a dollar, until if (according to the men) had become just one big round of arguments and fights.

It finally got to the place that days, even weeks went by without either one speaking to the other. One of the men said that even at the table if either Jim or Jessie wanted the salt or the bread, etc., which happened to be at the other end of the table, instead of asking for it to be passed they would get up, walk to the other end and get it. One was as bad as the other. What an atmosphere.

Next: week I shall continue telling of their later years.

At January 1, 1964, Canada's population was estimated at 19,102,000, an increase of 335,000 in a year and of 964,000 since the census count of June 1, 1961.

45 DIFFERENT MODELS OF CARS

Why one stop at your Chevrolet dealer's is like having your own private auto show

And if we had room here we could go on and on and list all the engines Chevrolet offers, starting at the Chevy II's 90-horsepower 153 4-cylinder (it's the thriftiest!) and ranging all the way up to the big Chevrolet's extra-cost 425-horsepower 409 V8 (it's the greatest!). We could wax eloquent about the choice of transmissions, and how they team up with those Chevy power plants to produce some of the going-est cars ever. Or the fact that you can have umpteen different exterior and interior color choices — enough, in fact, to allow some of our lady customers to have the sort of fun in buying and choosing that they generally reserve for shoe stores. And all the models with bucket seats and all the models without — all of them comfortable as all get-out. And the hundreds — yes hundreds — of different extra-cost options . . . serious ones like Positraction and gay ones like the new AM-FM radio. But all that's best left to your Chevrolet dealer. The long and short of it is, he'll go to any length to show you exactly the kind and size and price of car you want — and exactly how reasonable that price can be for you to be able to enjoy so much more car.

Alberta Medical Plan Open Registration

Alberta residents again will be given an opportunity to enrol under the Alberta Medical Plan without the necessity of a 90-day delayed effective date for their coverage. A 31-day open registration period, from March 16 to April 15 inclusive, has been arranged near the deadline for federal income tax filing, to permit Alberta residents who become aware that their level of taxable income entitles them to premium subsidy, to make immediate application.

Individuals enrolling during this open registration period with Medical Services (Alberta) Incorporated or with the approved insurance company of their choice, will have their coverage become effective May 1, according to an announcement by the Hon. Dr. J. D. Ross, Alberta Minister of Health.

For those who are eligible, the provincial government subsidy also will be effective May 1.

The Alberta Medical Plan, a voluntary prepaid medical insurance plan operating through 47 approved insurance companies, members of the Canadian Health Insurance Association and through Medical Services (Alberta) Incorporated, and with the support of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, is open to all residents of Alberta. The plan was announced last year and went into effect October 1, after an initial open enrolment period. The Plan defines benefits, guarantees maintenance of coverage, and establishes a maximum premium.

There are now more than 600,000 Albertans covered under the Plan and more than 143,555 are receiving subsidy payments. The plan has been well received by Albertans with a monthly enrolment increase of 15 percent since it started.

For persons whose income is below the taxable level according to Federal Government Income Tax Regulations the Government of Alberta will make the following contributions toward the payment of their medical services insurance premiums:

For a policy covering one individual - $18.00 per year.

For a policy covering a married couple with no dependents - $42.00.

For a family of three or more - $72.00 per year.

In the case of citizens whose taxable income is not in excess of $600, according to Federal Government Tax Regulations, the government contribution toward the payment of their medical services insurance premiums will be:

For a policy covering one individual - $9.00 per year.

For a family of three or more - $46.00 per year.

Benefits under the Alberta Medical Plan include:

(1) Payment of medical, surgical & obstetrical services of any physician and required for preventive diagnostic and therapeutic treatment and care.

(2) Specialist and consultant services when required.

(3) Anaesthetist services.

(4) Necessary laboratory services & diagnostic aids, including X-Rays, when ordered by a medical practitioner.

(5) After a policy-holder has been covered by the Alberta plan for a continuous period of two years, he and his dependents will be entitled annually to a routine medical examination to help ensure their continuing good health.

(6) If a single person or the head of a family, covered continuously under the plan for at least two years, becomes totally disabled prior to age 65 as the result of an accident, injury or disease, he will not be required to pay any due premiums for a period of up to six months starting the third month after his disability.

Under the Alberta Medical Plan the head of a family must insure himself and all members of his family under the age of 19 years, for whom welfare he is financially responsible to qualify for a government contribution. Upon attaining the age of 19 years, the individual will be responsible to apply for his own insurance coverage but in such cases any waiting period shall be calculated from the effective date of the original family contract, provided application is made and the required premium paid within 30 days of the person attaining the age of 19 years.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

LUCK TO THE BURTONS!

A great load has been lifted from my mind. For a while there, I thought that chap, Richard Burton, was not going to do right by our Lis. Now I can sleep of nights.

And I was delighted that they were married in Canada. Even though it took place in Montreal, and everybody is aware that Montreal is a wicked, wicked place, being married in Canada is a pretty serious proposition, as we all know, don't we?

I wonder if anyone pointed out to the happy couple that a Quebec marriage can be dissolved only by an act of Parliament. There could be some mighty exciting times in the House of Commons in a couple of years. Or six months.

Can't you just hear the separatists bellowing that the English are trying to ram this divorce down the throat of La Belle Province, and thereby insulting her sacred traditions, detaining her ancient glory and honor?

Anyway, it was a fine ceremony: the English-born American film star of Jewish faith, married to the Welsh Presbyterian stage actor by a Unitarian minister in a French-Canadian city. On Sunday.

A pretty select company at the wedding, too. A few friends, a gaggle of lawyers, and a brace of public relations men. None of those maiden aunts weeping all over the bride's make-up.

I'll bet that, even if the groom was a little rusty, Liz knew her lines. This was her fifth appearance in that particular scene. She'd scarcely need prompting.

The groom had been through the ropes only once before. This culminated in a Mexican divorce last December, which is reported to have cost him $1,500,000. Question: Would you pay that to get rid of your wife? Depends on whether you had it, you say? Sorry I asked.

I'll bet I know what you're thinking. You're thinking I am writing this snidely, with tongue in cheek. You're wrong. I'm just glad things are settled so my wife can get back to the ironing.

A lot of people, including some who wouldn't even give a nickel to their blind leper cousin if he ran around with gyris, have taken a very dim view of the behavior of the glamorous pair. People have told me, with great satisfaction, that Toronto's upper crust deliberately ignored them.

Admit it, girls. Who would you rather be than Lis Taylor? Four husbands behind you, four kids, a couple of million bucks in the bank, and Richard Burton and a ring, all at the age of 32. Admit it, chaps. Where is the hardship in getting home from work and having Miss Taylor throw herself on your bosom?

They may not be Abelard and Heloise, Charles II and Nell Gwyn, or Napoleon and Josephine, but they have given us a love story with enough color, dash and flair to stir even Canadians in the grip of March.

Mr. Burton is the most electric actor I've ever seen. Miss Taylor is a lady I would definitely cross the street to chat with. Good luck to them. And if it's any help, my wife says, "This will definitely last. She's found the right man."

THE FACE LIFTING of St. Mark's Anglican Church in Hardisty was completed in time for the Easter service, attended by a large congregation. As may be seen by the picture, the old church has a completely new look. The material for walls and ceiling were given by a member of the congregation in memory of Mr. J. A. French, whose passing last winter left a real gap in the church. Volunteer labor and cash donations were soon forthcoming for the completion of the job, and the W. A. supplied flooring.

St. Mark's was placed on its present location in 1911 and has since seen many ups and downs. The parish hall was added in the '50's, a country schoolhouse being bought for the purpose. Last year a transept was built connecting the two buildings and housing a heating unit.. A dedication service was held on April 5th, with Archdeacon Cole officiating. — Photo by Wilder's Studio.

Over 100 Bills For Legislative Session

(By John Warren)

EDMONTON For most MLA's we suspect, last week was little more than a pleasant break in the dull routine of wrapping up a legislature session.

One would like to think each member took home a volume of the more than 100 bills that have been introduced so far, and spent long nights entertaining them and interviewing his constituents for opinions.

Undoubtedly there is some truth to the claim that the MLA's had a chance to study and discuss the legislation in caucus before it was ever formally drafted. And there is some truth to the suggestion that many of them have already talked this over with constituents.

But the volume of bills that was hauled into the house the last week before the break, most of them unprinted so that there were no copies for members of the press, makes one hope the opportunity is taken to study and debate them thoroughly. It too often happens that after the budget has been passed the members with a few exceptions, seem more concerned about drawing their pay and going home than they are about the important business of the house. That is the drafting and passing of laws.

We can hope this year, however, that the break in the routine has given them all a chance to sharpen up a few questions to fire at the cabinet when the proposed legislation comes up for detailed study.

For members of the cabinet, the week's layoff was not a holiday. A minister's mail increases in volume as people in all areas of his responsibility read what is going on in the house and decide to say something about it. In addition each department head must try to obtain a masterful knowledge of the small details of his budget and of the various bills that do come under his authority.

In many cases he must be prepared to answer almost daily questions of fact posed from both opposition and government members. And he must somehow find the time to write and deliver a few speeches, meet petitioners and deputations, and answer a dozen reporters who are convinced there is an important story somewhere that if it is their duty to try out. They don't find time to relax too much, in or out of the session.

For Premier Manning, Treasurer Hinman, Health Minister Donahoe, Lands and Highways Minister Taylor the session's lunch meetings provided an opportunity to lunch heads with other provincial and federal officials at a conference in Quebec. For Mr. Manning it was a chance to pick up a cold as well.

They can all be certain of one thing: Mike Maccagno and Bill Dickie were burning the midnight oil with Liberal thinkers, looking for flaws in all that legislation and preparing to put their doubts before the house. The layoff from the routine, which will make this session one of the longest in recent years, was one they heartily welcomed.

A room, guess shows at least five pieces of legislation that are still liable to run into opposition. One is the bill that would require all drugstores to be owned by Pharmacists (in the case of companies, more than 50 percent of shareholders must be drug stores). It has yet to have second reading. The colored margarine bill has to go through third reading. A bill requiring government control of types of fuel tanks from 50 to 60 per cent will come up again. Municipal Affairs Minister Alf Hooke has already said it may be reviewed and changed. Then there's the crop insurance bill and the investment fund legislation. Half a dozen others deserve with farm policies and municipal governments won't be passed without some questioning.

This last week or two just could be interesting.

NEEDLE BUSTERS PLAN RALLY

LOUGHEED — The April meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. Watts. The club practised two demonstrations, Presto! Another outfit by Verna Starkmakes and Gayle Swanson, and Shopping for Shoes, by Norma Denham and Diane Valcart. A posture skit was practiced All of these are for the 4-H Rally on April 11th in Camrose.

For roll call everyone modelled a homemade Easter bonnet. These varied from decorated cake pans, baskets, boots, etc., and showed much artistic work.

The theory was that the homemade battery would produce enough energy to light up a bulb. Looks like the Professor made his point, judging by the pointing finger of one of the students. — C. P. SORRY, THE POT IS EMPTY!

Hundreds of unemployed went to the district Unemployment insurance offices on Monday to draw their usual cheques, only to find that the kitty was empty, the cupboard was bare. For some time now the fund has been dangerously low, and has only been kept "alive" by being replenished in unorthodox methods. When the Liberal party was overthrown back in the '50's there was somewhere in the neighborhood of three quarters of a billion dollars in the fund. The Conservatives brought it to an all-time low, and, in fact almost broke it. Therefore it seems rather ironical that a Conservative Senator should now be the cause of the fund lacking any financial resources whatever. The government will no doubt act quickly on this one, for the howls of indignation from recipients of weekly hand-outs will be loud and long. It may be a good thing at that, to let people know that money doesn't grow on trees. It may just inspire some of them to try and get to work even if it means taking less and subjecting themselves to more menial tasks.

SPRING IS IN THE AIR!

After the past weekend you may not be convinced that spring is here, but the certain signs that it is are in evidence. The crow, the gopher and early song birds are back with us, pussy willows are ready to burst forth into the sunlight, and the early-bird farmer is already trying out his machinery on the land. Spring is the season of renewed hope, spurring mankind on to greater efforts; it is the time of the year when you are glad to be alive.

GIVE POLICE MORE POWER!

There cannot surely be any doubt left in the minds of thinking people, that crime has become big business in Canada, more especially in the cities where congestion is an ideal location for criminals. That something must be done has been recognized by law-enforcement officials, who, while viewing the situation, seem reluctant to do anything about it. Mr. Alan Phillips, writer, believes that police must be allowed more powers. He says they should be allowed to tap telephones, and Canada should have a permanent corps of federal prosecutors to direct the war on organized crime. This same writer, a while back, described the infiltration into Canada of the underworld cartel known as the Mafia.

The war against crime is a literal fact, not a literary cliche. We are clearing the slums, setting up boys' clubs, studying criminology, and crime is increasing three times as fast as our population.

We must give the police the power that many four, last society can crush the Mafia and avoid the fate described by U. S. crime committee chairman, McClennan, who recently said, "this country will soon be perfectly close to standard rule by a group of gangsters who will make the current crime chieftains appear to be schoolboys playing simple games."

What this country needs is a law allowing policemen who have court orders to tap gangster phones, better police intelligence, more liaison between forces, better pay for police in the front line, federal jurisdiction in labor racketeering — and magistrates and judges who will "lower the boom" on convicted law-breakers.

There is this difference between the two temporal blessings — health and money; money is the most envied, but the least enjoyed; health is the most enjoyed, but the least envied; and this superiority of the latter is still more obvious when we reflect that the poorest man would not part with health for money, but that the richest would gladly part with all his money for health. — Charles Caleb Colton, 1780-1882.

It is more difficult to conceal ignorance than it would be to acquire knowledge.

AN UNLIKELY UTOPIA!

(Guest Editorial by C. J. Harris)

There has been considerable comment recently in support of the theory that compulsory retirement at an earlier age would be good for workers and for the economy. The arguments goes that if in the immediate future industrial production workers were pensioned off at age 55 — with an income high enough to sustain consumer purchasing power — automation's threat would be met by the reduced size of the labor force. Then, if retirement age were steadily stepped down over the longer range, there would always be more jobs than workers, and unemployment would be banished.

Disregarding for the moment the economic implications of the theory, it should be reported that a couple of heart specialists attending a recent cardiac symposium in Vancouver, warned that leisure is not without its perils.

Drs. Richard Bing, Wayne State University, Detroit, and Oscar Magiadon, University of Southern California, opined that if people could retire at 40 with all the money they needed, heart disease would be much more prevalent. "It's not the strain of competition that gets you," said the doctors. "It's the frustration, and there are frustrations in retirement. Do you know of any utopia that works?

"Strain and competition are not the cause of coronary heart disease. There's a difference between competition and frustration. We don't think competition is unhealthy, provided you have the psycho to meet it. If you're frustrated in your job, you'd be frustrated out of it."

As to the economic implications of the early retirement theory, it must be recognized that paying workers for not working would have to be a charge on the economy. The pensions would have to be paid out of production. Unless the productivity of the reduced labor force could be increased in proportion, the added pension costs would simply be added to prices, raising living costs for all.

A law compelling employers to provide early retirement pensions is in the realm of the possible, but legislation does not produce wealth. It is also within the realm of the possible that the law could compel employers to double all wages and salaries. But of course it would result in a loss rather than a gain to the public because there would have to be a compensating increase in the cost of living.

Higher wages, shorter hours, more jobs, earlier retirement, better living standards — all are the fruits of economic growth, of increased wealth production. The gains achieved in the last decade or the last half century are obvious to all. But there is no magic wand of legislation to force that growth.

LEAD-SWINGERS ABOUND!

The English have a name for it. It's called swinging the lead. It means that you do the least work for the most money. Charles King, a Southam correspondent in Britain, reports that an inquirer from California learned that a substantial proportion of workers in Britain get a part of their wages not in money, but in leisure, and most particularly in the leisure at the place of employment. Mr. King reports that it takes from three to six times as long to build a house in Britain as it does in North America.—Printed Word.

"AND WHOSE LITTLE BOY ARE YOU?"

The Pension Plan . . .

OTTAWA— It would be the irony of ironies if a Liberal Government that has promoted, if it did not invent, the phrase "co-operative federalism" should founder on the rocks of Federal-Provincial relations.

It may be only a remote possibility. The Pearson Government at the moment has an appearance of forging on anything. With only a minority in the House of Commons it looks as healthy as a barefoot boy with a long life expectancy.

It has wound up the pre-Easter lap of the session with a tolerable budget under its belt, approved by the House, and in much better shape politically than during those dark 60 days of decision when everything seemed to go wrong.

After a one-day debate it has sent a bill, granting to Canada Pension Plan approval in principle by a unanimous House of Commons and a 51-page bill introduced which eventually will be passed by the Senate.

But this week that bill is the centre of a battle-royal with at least two provinces, Quebec and Ontario, in battle that might conceivably end with a Supreme Court decision tossing the whole thing out the window and leaving the Liberals in an unenviable position.

This again is not probable. The eventual result of this week's conference at Quebec City is more likely to be acceptance of a "Pet accomplished by Ontario and the recognition of Quebec as the only "non-participating province" with its own pension plan.

But the Federal Government, after encounters reverses on the pension plan to meet the objections of both the big provinces has finally dug in its heels. The bill provides that no province can drop out as Quebec has given notice of doing unless it has a pension plan which in the opinion of the Federal Cabinet provides comparable benefits.

This is perhaps the weirdest rug ever waved in the bull ring of a Federal-Provincial conference. From what Ottawa knows so far of the Quebec pension plan it is planning to approve it as comparable. But Quebec will be allowed to remain aloof only by virtue of an Ottawa decision and not by its own right. This rarifies all the sensitive feelings of Ontario's most sensitive Premier.

For Ontario the legislation is almost a challenge to test the constitutional validity of the Federal pension plan, something Premier Robarts up to now has said he would not do. It is his only alternative to full acceptance of the legislation.

Bill C-75 robs him of any bargaining weapon. Since the so-called Ontario plan merely provides for portability of private pension schemes and compels employers to provide a private plan for employees it obviously does not give comparable benefits to Ottawa's social insurance plan. If the Ontario Government continues to support private pension plans it does not qualify. This, of course, is the intention of Ottawa which must have Ontario in the Federal plan.

Private pension plans, the largest number of which provide for contributions by employers of 6 per cent or more of earnings and relate pensions at retirement to the number of contributions made, will mean several of much larger pensions by young workers than the Federal scheme. Older workers, joining a pension plan as close to retirement cannot hope for anything as generous.

To take the simplest possible example a worker aged 55 in January next year and retiring at 65 will make a total contribution over the 10 years of $480 if he is earning $4,800 a year or more. His employer will make an equal contribution on his behalf. His minimum contributory pension when he retires in 1975 will be $72 a month. Under a private scheme, assuming payment of 5 per cent of earnings he would contribute $2,280 for a pension of less than half that amount.

Since it is a social insurance plan aimed at giving a minimum payment to the small wage earner the legislation fix as maximum pensionable earnings which, under the revised plan, has been set for the next five years at $4,800. After that it will be adjusted yearly through a Canada Pension Plan earnings index designed to determine average salaries and wages. A pensioner's average monthly pensionable earnings below this maximum will be adjusted in relation to the maximum and averaged over a period of contribution. From this average as can be calculated one year in 10 is cover low earning years but the man who does not contribute to the plan in any other years will get a smaller pension than one who makes the maximum possible number of contributions.

Our man aged 55 on January next who retires 10 years later will have three choices:

1. He can wait for another five years before applying for his old age pension when he will get $75 a month, for a total of $150 a month. Meanwhile he will be drawing his contributory pension of slightly more than $72 a month, provided he is not earning more than $900 in addition.

Above the $900 earning limit his contributory pension drops by stages until it is eliminated at earnings of $3,100. This retirement test was added to the plan when the maximum pensionable earnings set at 9%. Originally the maximum contributory pension, like the old age security flat rate pension did not become payable until age 70.

2. He can accept a flat rate old age security payment of $81 at 65 which with his contributory pension gives him $126 a month.

3. He can continue working and contributing to the plan until he is 70 when he will then get a total pension of $150 clear of any conditions. There is no longer any limit to his outside earnings.

KNOCKED SPIRITS. Glazyr, an orange Persian pussy, ventured into the garden—and three soft pussywillows caught her eye. Her cats' curiosity got the best of her, and she sniffed at a sniff, perhaps trying to establish why a lowly bush should be honored with the name "pussy."

Down Memory's Lane

(By Mrs. F. M. Cantlon, Hardisty, Alberta)

AFTER THE FUNERAL

Something I cannot understand is, why do folks who never attend any church services (some even keep of the fact they have never entered a church) yet demand the most ceremonies at the time of a funeral of a loved one, or at some relative's wedding.

One retaining attribute which Jessie possessed was her marked honesty in not pretending to be one thing and then being another.

Refusing to have a church funeral because she had never had anything to do with any church, she busied up Jim's best clothes (which the undertaker said afterwards was a disgrace) she brushed and pressed Jim's only good (?) pair of trousers, washed and ironed a plaid shirt, and with a grey sweater which Jim had purchased quite recently, Jessie figured that was good enough. She did not believe in buying a suit, even for her departed husband, only to bury it in the ground.

The funeral service was conducted by an Anglican minister, right from the home to the cemetery. A few of his relatives from nearby came. For decency's sake a few neighbors went, also, as after all, mean and miserable as Jim has been in life, his soul had passed into His Maker, and it was only right to pay last respects to the departed.

In due time all legal procedures were done away with. Jessie sold her share of the home place, her pigs, and Jim's lucky nephew moved in, bag, baggage and family. I believe there were six in all. However they allowed Jessie to live in one room until the house she was having built in town was finished.

The little cottage she had built was really a "honey" looking place from the outside (I don't believe anyone except the carpenters ever saw the inside. She had a neat white picket fence built around the metabet, and finally moved in and settled down. The few who had known Jessie and had worried and sidetaped all her life, thought that now she would, and could, take it easy as she still wasn't what one would term old. But habits of a life-time are hard to break. No one knew all she did to put in the long days, except that she had a lovely lawn, with shrubbers, flowers, etc., which kept looking like a park.

She walked up to the bakeshop occasionally and bought a bit of cheese and maybe some buns, toor straight home again, for most days found the days terribly long with no other interest than her home. She did not encourage neighbors to be friendly, nor did she ever call on them. So the days slipped by.

Jim had passed away in the early spring, and a year from the following summer one of the women of the town had a brother, and old retired sea Captain, come to make his home with her. No one knew the old fellow's exact age, but even his sister It is doubtful if he knew it himself. But from appearances one would judge him to be around 80 years. He wasn't settled in his sister's home for very long until he bossed all the "wealthy widow" folk up and down the street. Being foot-loose & fancy-free, he began secretly making plans to get acquainted with her — object, matrimony of course.

Now, no doubt, to her previous unhappy married life, Jessie was a bit wary of any and all male attentions, especially if she twigged they had their eye on her bank account. However Tony Malcolm played it pretty cute. He would be strolling along past her place and maybe see her out chopping wood for her stove. Straightway he would gallantly offer to do it for her; or possibly he'd pause (?) to see her at the lawn pump, getting a pail of water, and he would rush over, take the pail, & carry it home for her. He never hurried at his courting, but rather he sort of let her become used to having a man doing things for her, a thing poor Jessie had never in all her life, been used to before.

As time passed no one was surprised when it was noised abroad that Tony and Jessie he'd gone to the next town one day and been married.

There was no noticeable change around Jessie's place for three or four weeks. Then folks noticed that Jessie was chopping her stove wood, emptying the ashes, and even carrying water from the town pump. And Tony? Why he was living the life of Riley, being a real gentleman (?) of leisure. Some days he would spend hours at one of the garages looking at the newest cars on display, ostensibly comparing, at times, that he was planning to purchase one of the sleek models one of these days soon. Incidentally Jessie had another plan and that was that he wasn't buying any car, as she knew it would be her money he would have to use.

One morning the neighbors noticed a carpenter talking to Tony out behind the house. They were stepping off a piece of ground, and jotting something down in a little book. It wasn't long until they understood what that was all about. Tony was having a garage built.

Jessie had been heard to say in different people, that if Tony purchased a car it wouldn't be with her say-so. Everyone knew that before Tony married Jessie he had no cash of his own, but according to the law, as her husband, half of her money was his. So the garage grew & in a really respectable looking building, covered with grey insulbrick, and a bright red roof, same as the house. On clear days the neighbors shd, Jessie's voice could be heard yelling at Tony (who paid no attention to her but just kept on building) At times they could hear her saying (in fact screaming) "over my dead body you'll bring a real gentleman (?) of leisure home. Some days he would spend

BONNET WITH A TWIST. Putting a real twist into Easter bonnet fashions is freckle-faced Sharon Barker of Scarboro, Ont. Her hat is a live bail python, four feet long and still growing. She's one lady who's positive no one in the Easter parade will be wearing the identical hat.—

Colorful Life Of Gordon Brown Comes To End

As a mark of deep respect, and because of his association with the Beahaw Elks Lodge, the patrol team turned out in full color at the funeral services, and acted as guard of honor at both the church and cemetery when last rites were held on Monday afternoon, March 23, 1964, for the late Gordon Brown. Services were conducted from the Beahaw United Church at 2.00 p. m., with R. Newsom officiating, and interment was in the Beahaw cemetery.

Hundreds of friends came to pay their last respects, and the church was filled to overflowing. Honorary pallbearers were Bob Miller, E. Kronsbein, Bill Brown, Jake Camelish, Jack Sills and Ed Paterson. Pallbearers were Henry Hay, J. G. Paterson, Ian Nugent, J. H. Paterson, Pete Schmitz and Herman Schmitz.

As the sun sounded its course westward, the remains of Gordon Brown were committed, while Brother Elks paid their last tribute.

During the service Mr. A. Dahl of Camrose sang, "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied by Mrs. J. G. Paterson the organist. Favorite hymns of the deceased, Lead Kindly Light and Abide With Me, formed part of the service, and the text an eternal life was taken from St. John's Gospel 17th chapter, first four verses.

Gordon Brown passed away March 20th at Camrose hospital after having undergone surgery a week before, and his progress was indicated a good until the last day.

He was born Sept. 28, 1887 at Glasgow, Scotland, and here grew up as a young man. His course of life in the old country led him into many avenues and it was here that he developed a liking for, and was active as a singer, a trait which he continued through life with a fine appreciation. While yet a youth he joined the British merchant marine and served on the seas of the world at the beginning of the century. It was in 1904, as an adventurous young man, following his discharge, to be a rank-hand for the P. Burns holdings on the famous Roundup country east of Olds. Later, as he saw the opportunity of the country he homesteaded at Beiheld, and later farmed south of Killam.

In March 1911 he was married at Sedgewick, Alberta to his dear wife Ellie, now surviving him.

For some years he was linesman for the Cochshutt Plow Co. and later entered into extensive business enterprises. Throughout his life he was a keen gardener, and many times won the flower garden award in Beahaw. He was secretary of the Elks Lodge for many years, terminating his work only a short time ago. He was active in caring over the years, and along with a few others regarded the organization of the Beahaw Golf Club with great eagerness at which he worked to see it was successful.

All in all, he earned merit by doing, and yet was fond of the days when he could reminisce and sport with his cronies.

Besides his loving wife there are left to mourn his loss, two sons, Mr. Les Brown of Edmonton; Alex of Trail B. C.; three daughters, Mrs. Beth Barnett of Beahaw Mrs. Marjorie Matthews of Edmonton, Mrs. Irene Whitney of Wetaskiwin. Two sisters, Mrs. J. L. Higginson of Durban, South Africa; and Mrs. Christian Landals of Jasper, also survive him.

The day of the early soldier is fast going, and we should take note of their wisdom of the years that come before us.

BEFORE YOU BUY . . . WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THE UPHOLSTERY FABRIC?

Perhaps it's the hint of spring in the air or a need for a change at the end of winter — whatever the reason, there have been a great many enquiries lately about upholstery fabrics.

Because shopping around for upholstery fabric is not an everyday affair, homemakers can suddenly find themselves confronted with a complexity of patterns, colours, types and textures — fabrics ranging from the classic weaves to the latest novelties.

THE FIBRE:

WOOL— a natural fibre — has an extremely good hand, good crush and soil resistance and cleanability. It gives excellent wear but is costly.

COTTON— a vegetable fibre — has a pleasant hand; it is fairly strong and durable and takes dyes exceptionally well. It is subject to shrinkage, has poor soil resistance and fair cleanability.

ACETATE— derived from wood pulp; has a silky hand but poor durability and crush resistance; takes colour well but is subject to fading; resistance to soiling is good and cleanability fair.

VISCOSE RAYON— another form of processed wood-pulp; is fair in durability, soil resistance, cleanability and light fastness. It has poor crush resistance but excellent colourability.

NYLON— 100% nylon is an extremely durable fabric with good crush and soil resistance, also excellent cleanability.

HOW MUCH SHOULD YOU PAY?

When you buy a new sofa or chair the fabric usually accounts for at least 25% of the total cost of manufacture. However, appearance and performance do not always go together.

You can pay large sums for custom designed handscreened fabrics such as silk, which are breathtakingly beautiful but not built for rugged wear.

OR! — Some cheaper fabrics can look lovely but because they tend to be made of lower - performance fibres and have poorer construction, their overall performance may not be satisfactory.

Consider performance and be prepared to pay accordingly.

ALWAYS TEST BEFORE BUYING FEEL THE FABRIC— It need not necessarily be smooth to the touch but make sure it is not scratchy.

EXAMINE THE BACK - be suspicious of a fabric with very heavy backing, this may be to cover poor construction.

TEST THE SURFACE - for a close weave and plenty of body in flat fabrics and good dense pile in frieze fabrics. Be wary of pile fabric in which the backing shows through. Rub the pile with the edge of a coin to see if it is readily frizzed up. Avoid fabric with loose loops which catch buckles, etc.

Velma Young Wed At Knox United

Armitage - Young

KILLAM— Knox United Church, Killam, was the scene of a pretty spring wedding when Velma Irene, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hersey Young of Killam became the bride of Mr. James John Armitage, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Armitage of Sedgewick.

The Church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with daffodils, lilies and carnations. The pews were marked with satin and white bows and small sprays of lily-of-the-valley.

Wherever injuries showed a 10% increase to 844 the total number of accidents dropped 27% to 4,208. Pedestrary accounted for 428 injuries and 2,206 accidents.

Two hundred and sixteen injuries were reported by R.C.M.P. with Calgary having 61 and Edmonton 36. Lethbridge and Red Deer had 14 & 12 respectively.

Edmontonians were involved in more accidents than either R.C.M.P. or the City of Calgary. Edmonton City Police reported 973 accidents while R.C.M.P. tallied 693 and Calgary 625. The City Police of Lethbridge chalked up 44 accidents with Red Deer reporting 37. Of February's accident total of 2,200, 12 collisions caused 18 deaths.

Fringe benefits provided in Canadian industry were estimated to cost $1,202 per employee in 1961, nearly 23 per cent of payroll overhead.

For her daughters' wedding the brides' mother chose a blue dress with pink accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The grooms' mother was dressed in gold brocade with white accessories and a corsage of talisman roses. Mrs. Wilfred Fortner sang "A Wedding Prayer" to the young couple.

Immediately following the wedding a reception was held in the church hall for 110 guests. The brides' table was laid with a white lace cloth centred by a beautifully decorated three tiered cake flanked on either side by white tapers.

Mr. Austin Arntzen was M.C. The toast to the bride was given by Mr. Richard Peterson, uncle of the bride, to which the groom ably responded. A congratulatory telegram was read from the grooms' cousin in Vatican City, Rome.

For her going away outfit the bride chose a figured silk dress with yellow cluster and brown accessories. Her corsage was of talisman roses. After a short honeymoon the happy couple will reside on their farm south of Sedgewick.

READ and HEED LABEL DIRECTIONS:

To get the most out of your herbicide investment, read and heed all label directions advises W. Lobay, Supervisor of Soils and Weed Control with the Alberta Department of Agriculture.

Herbicides will do a good job if they are used for the purposes intended and according to directions. Every herbicide container has a label with directions and recommendations for the effective and safe use of the product. Farmers must be familiar with these before they use the chemicals. Often a difficulty can be traced to the improper use or abuse of the material.

Following is a list of the key points which the Pest Control Products Act states must be on every herbicide label. This Act is the authority under which all herbicides are registered.

1) The name of the manufacturer and what the chemical is designed to accomplish.

2) Directions for use - how to apply the material, precautions to be taken for the crop and the weeds controlled

3) The active ingredient(s) in the herbicide.

4) Recommendations for specific weeds and crops, the timing of applications, the rates to be used and other special remarks.

5) Storage precautions to be observed.

6) Personal precautions to be taken.

As Mr. Lobay points out, it only takes four or five minutes to read the label thoroughly but those four or five minutes are important. It may make the difference between success or failure in the ultimate results.

PRUNING ROSES:

One of the cardinal rules for pruning roses is to prune heavily for larger flowers and lightly for more blooms.

P. B. McCalla, Supervisor of Horticulture with the Alberta Department of Agriculture, says the tender types of roses, which are the ones which have to be protected during the winter, should be pruned as soon as they are uncovered in the spring. The hardy bush varieties, on the other hand, should be left until growth has started. This makes it possible to identify the dead wood.

Hybrid Teas, Polyantha and Floribunda roses require heavy pruning. Mr. McCalla points out that Hybrid Teas should be pruned back to two or three dormant buds on each of three to five stems.

Hardy shrub roses, including Rosa Rugosa, Rosa Alsiaca, Rosa Laxa & other named varieties only need light pruning. The old wood may be removed by cutting it back to the ground or by cutting it back to a bud. The latter method should be used on bushes thick and dense. Most hardy shrub roses grow three to five feet high.

GRASSHOPPER CONTROL FOR 1964:

Relief is in sight for prairie farmers who have been harassed by grasshoppers since 1967.

The 1964 Grasshopper Forecast Map shows that 25,000 square miles will be threatened this year which represents a 20 per cent decrease compared to 1963 figures. Despite the good news that the outbreak seems to have passed its peak, Alberta's Supervisor of Pest Control and Crop Protection J. B. Gorbe warns prairie farmers that they will probably still have to control hoppers during the coming season.

The Forecast shows that grasshoppers are expected in varying outbreak numbers in that part of Alberta lying south and east of a line through Chauvin, Provenburg, Daysbury, Calgary and Pincher Creek. The infestation is rated "light" for most of this region with the exception of Edmonton - Hanna, the Vauxhall region and the north and west margin of the outbreak area through Delia, Crossfield, Calgary and MacLeod where it is expected to be "moderate".

Mr. Gorbe says the 1964 Forecast Map has been distributed to all municipal offices and district agriculturists as well as to all grain company agents in the outbreak areas. Farmers should obtain the map for conditions expected in their districts. Cropping, cultural and chemical operations can then be planned with the forecast as guide.

The Alberta Department of Agriculture and municipalities will be stockpiling insecticides in outbreak areas for distribution to farmers at cost. Under the 1964 Grasshopper Control Policy, Dieldrin insecticide will be available for use early in the season on cereal and row-feed crops. According to Mr. Gorbe, Dumethoate will be used on pasture, forage and other feed crops because it does not appear as a residue in milk or meat.

Printed control recommendations will soon be available from district agriculturists. All concerned should become well informed on control measures and be prepared to take any necessary action.

Canada had a favorable trade balance of $413 million in 1963, the third consecutive surplus for a 3 year total of $685 million; in the preceding eight years imports exceeded exports for a cumulative deficit of $2.3 billion.

THE RED X Means TIME TO RENEW

Lions Roaring 20's Snccessful

(Dolores Dolans)

DAYSLAND — The first night of the Roaring 20's started off with a bang- everyone was given a dime (phony bucks) when they came in. With this they tried to build their bank roll up on various games scattered around the hall. These games were kept going all evening. If you were unlucky & lost there was a bank that sold you more money. The Indian had a souvenir booth, selling beads, gewtaws, headbands and hats. The lunch counter was kept busy for the evening, and if one was unlucky at the games he could console himself eating.

The Wildcat Jazz Band (better known as the Blue Sox) provided the dance music all evening.

A few stage shows were performed each night. Four highschool girls, Patsy Reisenberg, Merilyn Hansenberg, Cheryl Rakoe and Gail Lessner did a theatre act. Mr. Jon Kaspersen and his son sang a song from the 20's, accompanied by Elmer Lotter at the piano. Four Chic Can Girls of Dansalia gave the audience an enjoyable few minutes by doing the Can Can. Somewhere along here Al Capone showed up with his 3 men, and robbed the bank. The money was retrieved by the cops, one of who did a good job of keeping law and order. Before the evening ended Mr. and Mrs. Dolans did the Black Bottom, a dance from the 20's

Saturday showed an even bigger crowd. The Queen candidates kept themselves busy selling tickets each aspiring to be Queen. Saturday was a repeat performance of Friday except for a couple of stage shows that were unable to go on due to a shortage of time.

Just before twelve the Queen was crowned. The 6th runner-up was brought out first, Ardeth Dansbury- er of Dansalia, then the others, Sh. Betty Ann McLeod of Alliance, 5th Donna Lasen, Heisler, 3rd, Melody Kennedy, Rosalind, 2nd Dianne Lazchowski, Hardisty. Daysland queen candidate, Sylvia Kofoed, was crowned Queen. The Queen was given a trophy for remembrance, also a necklace set and train case. Each of the other candidates received a train case

Before the close of the evening the Queen made the draw on the tickets that were sold by the candidates. The $50 went to E. Hassett, Hardisty; $30 to Neal Nelson from Hardisty and $20 to Bruce Gean- ault of Forestberg. The winners of the best roaring 20's costume were Donna Lasen of Heisler, Mrs. Eric Carlson of Calgary and Sylvia Kofoed of Daysland.

The Lions wish to thank everyone who in any way helped to make the Roaring 20's a success.

Spring Banquet Honors Stampeder Club

HARMENTY — The Harmenty Stampeder Hockey Club held their annual banquet on Saturday evening in the arena, with members of St. Mark's W. A. catering to a turkey dinner. Presiding at the head table was Ken Drever, president of the Hattie River League. Walter Kowal, president of the Stampeders (banks) all the players and executive members for the fine co-operation in bringing the club up from its first of season slump to lead the league. Pat Madden, sec.-treas., gave a good report, saying that final figures would be published later.

Several other members of the club spoke, including Johnny Golka, once again the top league scorer. The president mentioned that John has won this trophy every year but two since 1964, a real record. Vern Miller was given a life membership, presenting credit to his team-mates for their fine support.

Welcomed back from their Hawaiian honeymoon were Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Miller. Alvin being a close contender for top scoring honors.

Prayers from Carr, Lougheed and Killam also spoke, as well as Lou Golka representing the Arena Assn., and Lorne Rooke for the ever-popular referees.

The hope was expressed by all that next year will see a better and stronger club than ever from the start of the season. A social evening followed.

FORESTRY COMBATS EROSION!

"I think that I shall never see, a sight more beautiful than a tree!" — or anything more useful to hold the balance of nature.

That forest and brush clearing has become a big and important part of the economy of grain growing regions was once again brought to light with the announcement that since 1945 somewhere in the neighborhood of five million acres of forest and brushland have been cleared in Alberta and converted to cultivated farmland. With the explosion in population, and the needs of other lands for grains of all kinds, it is understandable that the need for more cultivated land has come to the forefront in the minds of the farming community. But what is not so understandable is the disregard shown for the future and the lack of understanding on possible results from the action.

Nature has a way of taking care that the balance of things vegetable and animal is carefully kept, but it has been left to man, in his foolish ways, to upset that status quo, and this he has proceeded to do with typical human frailty and complete disregard for the lessons of the past. The lean years of the 1930's when terrific dust storms, drought and barren wastelands were draining the farming areas of productivity and human inhabitants both in Alberta and Saskatchewan; the Dust Bowls of the Southern States and complete soil erosion of many thousands of once fertile acres, brought to naught the best exertions of human endeavour, yet mankind fails to heed the warnings and continues to ignore the facts of life and of land. He continues to uproot and destroy the vegetation, thereby upsetting the natural habitat of birds and animals, and thus visiting upon himself all manner of misfortune. When will man learn that haste brings waste, and the destruction of nature's valuable assets brings misfortune upon himself and those about him.

How long will man continue to rid the land of trees in a careless and willful manner without replacing them in an orderly fashion. It is quite impossible to understand why trees could not be replanted as shelter belts along the borders of farmlands, and even through the centre of the fields. This is done to some extent today, but not nearly on a big enough scale. While it is realized that brush piles in the middle of fields cause extra work in cultivating and seeding, it is impossible to believe that orderly shelterbelts would not aid in production, in soil preservation and in beautification. Besides this it also would restore the natural habitat of birds and animals and thus maintain the balance in nature of nature.

It is a proven fact that erosion is minimal under forest and brushland conditions, and while the danger need not become great in deforestration if proper precautions are taken in the selection of areas, there is infinite danger in the continued disregard of all past experiences.

Alberta has certain laws which prohibit deforestration where erosion is a distinct possibility, and other studies are to be undertaken to determine where brushland should be maintained as is. This is all to the good, and if the net results are to preserve the natural and native land, and restrict the cultivation of land that should never feel the plow, we are all for for such studies and resulting laws.

FED.-PROV. CONFERENCES!

While it would be wrong to state that Federal-Provincial conferences are to all intents worthless, it may be apt to say that they will never be entirely fruitful until attitudes change. Some good came out of the recent conference, in spite of those who claim otherwise.

The answer is not in programs but in attitudes toward them.

We have the Prime Minister on the one hand, fighting to maintain the rights of Ottawa; to distribute revenues in a most equitable manner, and on the other hand we have ten provincial Premiers, each one intent on getting a better and bigger deal and share of the federal revenues. We have provincial representatives trying to guard the rights of the provinces and to guard against Ottawa encroaching into provincial fields, and at the same time attempting to get the federal treasury to undertake a bigger share of the costs in provincially-controlled matters. A point in instance is the Minister of Education for Ontario suggesting that Ottawa assume a bigger share in costs of education —even though he knows that under the B.N.A. Act education is a provincial concern.

Each of the eleven governments wants to, and is going to spend more money. Some are going to give more handouts, and some are going to want someone else to help them do it. But it is the taxpayers across the country who are going to have to dig down in their pockets for the extra dollars. It is not a matter of too much concern to him whether it is the federal collector who gets his money, or the provincial treasury, but he is concerned with how he is going to be able to escape from the continuing upward trend in the tax costs. Well the truth is that there is no escape, even in death, for that too is taxable.

The only way that Federal-Provincial conferences are going to be entirely fruitful is for the representatives to head for Ottawa with an outlook of what is best for Canada as a whole, and not with the attitude of getting something, anything, for a particular province. To try and get an advantage for a province at the expense of the others will do little to hold Confederation together.

FARMERS ARE HARD AT WORK!

As the popular modern saying goes, "Spring has sprung" in sunny Alberta, and farmers are once again hard at work preparing fertile soil for the 1964 crops. Last year was an excellent one for the growers of grain, and while this year is not one of the wettest we have seen, the sub-soil moisture condition is good. Snow was at an almost minimum this past winter, run-off was exceptionally low and many fields of summerfallow have been bare for some weeks.

With the demand for Canadian grain especially wheat, at the highest peak in our history, and indications pointing to a continuance of this trend, farmers have little fear in going all out with production certain in the demand remaining strong. While crop failures in other lands may not be in evidence this year, even with an average to good crop they will be unable to feed their increasing populations and build up a reserve without the importation of millions of bushels of wheat. Canada still remains the best hope of these countries, and continued large sales will bolster the local economy for at least another two years.

Sport cars are not universally popular, in spite of publicity to the contrary. Reason in some quarters is bucket seats. Not everyone has the same sized bucket.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Useful Progress

OTTAWA — Federal-Provincial conference are failing about as like autumn leaves nowadays, such are pyromaniacs helping to smoke or unmake Canadian Confederation.

Some great Prime Minister up there in the sky is perhaps keeping score, and come Judgement Day we will know whether the process of facts have tended to save Confederation, or caused it.

Meanwhile about all the true believer can do is work and pray, and perhaps learn to speak the other-official language.

There is an uncertain feeling of helplessness among ordinary Canadians about the course of Canadian Confederation, with the cleavages between French and English seemingly growing wider and deeper.

This feeling is shared—and sometimes abetted—by the ten Provincial Premiers and the Prime Minister of Canada, the men most immediately responsible for charting this course.

After the Federal-Provincial conference at Quebec this month, for example, there were indignant and theatrical protests by some Provincial Premiers. There were also incendiaries and violent attacks on the conference results by Opposition leaders in the House of Commons. The impression has been spread that Confederation has been shattered or at least shaken.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker with his instinct for the meretricious claimed that the Federal Government was fostering "the piecemeal dismemberment of Confederation."

Quebec Premier Lesage's indignant objection to the results of a conference which he knew could have no other result, were of the stuff of the theatre, and probably designed to allay criticism at home.

Then of course came the hysterical screams from extremists on both sides of the cultural curtain — one side protesting a sell-out to Quebec, the other demanding complete major ism of Quebec.

And yet, in spite of the political din, some very useful progress was made at the Quebec conference.

The pension issue was considerably clarified. The Federal Government will proceed with the Canada Pension Plan, to operate in any province of province. Quebec will have its own plan, which will be fully per table with the National Plan.

Ontario, understandably interested in the large investment fund that a Provincial Plan would produce, has not decided whether it will establish its own plan or participate in the Federal Plan, but seems no e to be tending toward its own plan.

At any rate, all Canadians will have available basic, portable pension coverage, whether under a Federal or a Provincial plan.

Important progress was also made on a formula for allowing provinces to "contract out" of certain joint programs, such as hospital insurance. Any province wishing to do so will be able to take over the administration of these programs, and will be given additional tax room to pay for them.

The fears of Mr. Diefenbaker and others that contracting out means "de-confederation" are difficult to understand. There has always been contracting out in relations between the Federal and Provincial Governments, and there always will be.

There was also discussion of the Federal Government's plans to extend family allowances to students of 16 and 17, and to provide interest free loans to university students.

Mr. Lesage says he will test them in the courts. So be it. That's exactly what the courts are for, and it's too bad they haven't been used more often in these dangerous family quarrels.

One must ask though why the Federal Government blatantly proposed a measure such as the family allowance extension without making the least provision for alternative proposals in a province where similar payments already exist. Quebec has been paying such allowances to the students of 16 and 17 for nearly 3 years. In any case, these topics, along with discussion of a special tax study in depth, were the major accomplishments of the conference. It was undeniably a useful conference. Why therefore should Federal-Provincial relations be surrounded by clouds of doom?

Those clouds of doom are probably as much a sign of the Canadian times as the mushroom cloud is of international times. No matter what course Mr. Pearson takes, it will be violently opposed by some elements in this divided country.

At the moment no one knows how close the walls are to tumbling down. The Ottawa-Quebec, the French-English, the two cultures conflict can not go on much longer as it is. The crisis in Quebec must soon be resolved. Either there will be a heavy public move towards separatism, or a heavy public reaction against it.

Who knows what seemingly harmless action taken today might influence that move in the wrong direction?

It's easy to wish for the appearance of a great leader, a superman who would know what to do and what new law to be the good old days.

But the solution of Canada's problems now requires patience, hard work, compromise.

We are at a position which must be exercised by all our members now and in the days to come.

BRAKES ARE VITAL TO CAR SAFETY

"As with many vital parts of an automobile, the condition of the brakes is all too often taken for granted by motorists who drive until suddenly they fail," said S. E. Swallow, of the vehicle safety committee, Canadian Highway Safety Council. Mr. Swallow, director of service for the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., urged every motorist to have his car's brakes tested and, if necessary, repaired, particularly during the Council's annual car-check campaign, running through April and May.

"Only someone who has experienced brake failure in traffic can fully realize the grave part they play in traffic safety," said Mr. Swallow. He stressed the need for regular car-checks, but emphasized the stronger need in spring when many cars have just come through a car-freezing winter season. Besides checking the car, he added, "check the crisis in Quebec must soon be reached. Either there will be a heavy

WALSH — PATERSON
LOUGHEED — St. Andrew's United Church, Lougheed, was the scene of a pretty wedding March 7 when the Rev. Lewis united in marriage in a double-ring ceremony, Zena Maureen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Paterson and James Victor, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walsh of Sedgewick.
Given in marriage by her father the bride looked lovely in a floor-length gown of white organza over nylon taffeta, featuring a sweetheart neckline, lily-point sleeves and a spray of appliqued flowers from bodice to hemline. She carried a cascade bouquet of deep pink carnations and her chapel-length veil was held in place by a rhinestone and pearl trimmed tiara.
The groom's attendant was Mr. Donald McKinnon, and ushers were Mr. Gordon Jackson and Mr. Gerald Kenhil.
The bride's mother chose a powder blue sheath complimented by a deep pink carnation corsage. Mother of the groom wore a two-piece blue flowered dress with black accessories and deep pink carnation corsage.
An open reception for 175 guests was held in the Community Hall, which was decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells. The head table, laid with a lace tablecloth, was centered by a beautifully decorated 3-tier wedding cake. The toast to the bride was given by Mr. Bud Paterson, uncle of the bride, and was capably responded to by the groom. Miss Betty Walsh, sister of the groom, was in charge of the guest book.
A well attended wedding dance was held during the evening in the Lougheed Community Hall.
Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. M. Keath, Mrs. F. Crickin and Doreen.
Mrs. M. Vandewoerk, all of Edmonton; Mr. Willard Graham, Elnora; Mr. and Mrs. R. Hagar, Myrna, and Mrs. J. Hagar of Hartley.

Irene Wegenast Wed At Galahad Church

HALLUM — WEGENAST

GALAHAD — An early spring wedding was solemnized in the United Mission Church at Galahad at 2:00 p.m. on April 4th, 1964, when Rev. W. D. Anstett united the double-ring wedding vows pledged by Irene Ruth, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Wegenast and Wilhelm Hallum, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hallum, Sedgewick.

Given in marriage by her parents the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. Her gown of satin and organza had a fitted bodice with lily-point sleeves, heart-shaped chest which was draped in the back with a short train. The bride's jewellery of chipped crystal in pendants & earrings was a gift of the groom. She also carried a white Bible with red rose buds and stephanis on satin ribbons.

As maid of honor her cousin Miss Carol Forster was attired in ice blue brocaded satin with headdress to match. The bridesmaids, Miss Doreen Coe, and cousin Leila Wegenast, were similarly attired. Bride's gifts to her attendants were crystal drop pendants. Their bouquets were of pink carnations.

The groom was supported by his only brother Howard, Douglas Forster Jr. and Wayne Wegenast, the bride's brother.

Mrs. Ken Wilson of Killam supplied the music, and accompanied Mrs. Wilf Forster who rendered "As We O Lord Have Joined Our Hands" as a vocal solo before the signing of the register. Ushering guests to the pews marked with white satin bows and ferns, was Stan Forster, cousin of the bride, and Leonard Rothleigh cousin of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Wegenast chose a navy double-knit suit with green accessories, and corsage of yellow roses. The mother of the groom chose blue embossed with bronze and matching accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

Immediately following the wedding a reception for 150 guests was held in the school auditorium. The bride's table was laid with a white linen cloth centred by a beautifully decorated four-tier wedding cake, flanked on either side by white tapers. The silver service for the bride's table had been the wedding silver of the groom's grandparents.

Mr. Harvey Stowe of Sedgewick was Master of Ceremonies, and with his ready wit held some of the groom's past experiences. The toast to the bride was proposed by her uncle Mr. Wilf Forster, to which the groom ably responded. A congratulatory telegram was read by the groomsmen from the J. Peterson family of Illinois, cousin of the groom. Open house was held at the home of the bride's parents, followed by a wedding dance in the Sedgewick Community Hall.

After a short honeymoon in the south of the province the happy couple will reside on a farm south of Sedgewick.

Down Memory's Lane

(By Mrs. F. M. Cantion, Hardisty, Alberta)

THE NEW CAR ARRIVES

The garage was coming along and was about finished, the monotony broken by the appearance of Jessie at the back door of her house, and screaming at Tony because she had to carry all the water, chop the wood and in fact do all the chores, while Tony wasted his time building that garage where there never would be a car, if she could help it.

One morning Tony was rather up set as the carpenter not showing up and when Jessie stood there screaming at him, he suddenly turned and threw the hammer at her. She had a big soup-bone in her hand which she was going to throw in the garbage barrel, and, sooner than you blink and eye, wham, went that bone straight at Tony's head. Her aim was better than his. The hammer had missed Jessie, but the bone hit Tony on the head, and he fell quiet as soon as he touched. We never did know what explanation he gave the Doctor, but Tony had a bandaged head for about a week.

Tony decided one day in the early fall that he would surprise Jessie and do his garage. It was finished, a credit to any home-owner. Things became more or less normal now; no more hammering out at the garage, and no more screaming from Jessie.

But the next morning just as the sun was popping up over the horizon (and at that hour not many folk were up and about) the quiet of the early morning was suddenly broken by the most ear-splitting, continuous hooting of a car horn.

Somewhere in the dim and distant past, Jessie had heard of the Last Day, when the Trumpet of the Lord shall sound, and all those who have loved and served Him faithfully, "Shall be caught up to meet Him in the air, and be forever with the Lord," leaving just the wicked here on earth, to rule the world.

She had never given it very much thought, one way or another, since the fact of just the wicked left on earth to run things, sort of made her shudder. So when she did think of it, she tried to shove off the memory, still giving the impression that religion of any type was just a myth. She still never attended a church service at any time.

Naturally that been testing awakened Jessie as well as most of the other villagers. She rushed to the door, and seeing nothing unusual, grabbed her coat, and throwing it on over her night clothes, she ran over to a neighbor's place (she knew this neighbor was a good living) but not would be one of the lucky ones (if as Jessie was sure) that terrific noise WAS the Trumpet of the Lord, one way to make sure was to see if this neighbor was still in her house, or if she had been caught up. Poor Jessie felt in her heart that she was one person who would be left when the Lord came to claim His own.

So just imagine Jessie's relief when she found her neighbor still there, although she too was mystified as to what was causing all the noise, which continued, diminishing a bit in volume, only to sound just as loud as ever again. By this time there were people in their doorsteps all over that end of town, wondering what in the world all the noise was about. However the mystery was soon solved when Tony, grinning from ear to ear, rounded the corner in a shining new car, and eased his most controversial, hard-won car into his new garage.

Tony had his car, but at what a price. What an atmosphere there must have been in that home during the days and weeks that followed.

Jessie never put a foot inside that car, but that didn't bother Tony at all. He'd take his pals for drives and occasionally explored his city by day to the fullest, but we often wondered if, in his heart, he thought it was worth the price of peace and happiness.

(Next Week: Tony Really Pics His Kite).

Young Sedgewick Man Buried At Bethania

ELMER CHRISTENSON

SEDGEWICK — The community was shocked and saddened by the sudden death of Elmer Christenson in the Killam Hospital on March 25, at the age of 30 years, suffering from Flu resulting in Bronchial Pneumonia. Elmer was born May 30 1933 and spent his entire life in the district, except for a couple years at various jobs. He graduated from Central High School in 1953. He was an outstanding athlete and a star on the Sedgewick Cougar ball team.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his loving mother and three brothers: George at home, Erling of Edmonton and Gary of Calgary. He is also mourned by aunts and uncles, cousins, and a wide circle of friends. His father predeceased him in 1956.

Funeral services were conducted at Bethania Lutheran Church Monday, March 30th, with Pastor Newman of Forestburg officiating, and interment was made in the church cemetery.

The Bethania Male Quartet rendered the beautiful "Beyond The Sunset" by special request of the family. Honorary pall bearers were all close friends of the family, Jens Peterson, Ole Lundin, John Snethen, Ross Donaldson, Alfred Olsen, Lloyd Olsen.

The large crowd attested to the esteem in which the deceased was held. Food and gifts of Kleen Kut were in charge of arrangements.

4-H PUBLIC SPEAKING ELIMINATIONS!

The 4H Clubs in Flagstaff have been holding public speaking nights the last few weeks picking the top speaker from their club. The winners will be competing against one another at the District 4H Public Speaking elimination in the Commune Hall at Strome, Friday evening, at 8.00 p.m. on April 17th. Ten 4-H Clubs, beef, clothing and garden will be competing.

This evening should be very interesting. Anyone and everyone is invited to attend. The 4H members & their parents throughout the area are particularly extended an invitation to attend.

HOG CARCASS GRADING!

The University and Federal Government research people are looking into the possibility of finding a more accurate method of evaluating hog carcasses.

Under the present system, commercial hogs are assessed and placed in the various grades according to four criteria. These are carcass length as measured from the first rib to the aitch bone, maximum shoulder and loin fat, carcass type, and weight. Many Canadian swine producers have expressed dissatisfaction with the system, stating that it puts too much emphasis on length and body type with not enough consideration being given to a total yield of meat cuts.

A. Hodden, Livestock Supervisor for Alberta, reports that current research is exploring the relationship between average backfat depth, rather than maximum depth at specific sites, and carcass yield within specific weight ranges. He feels a method which demands a breakdown into cuts is unlikely because grading procedures must be rapid and simple under routine slaughter conditions at the packing plants.

More consideration will probably be given, however, to total yield of meat cuts in Record of Performance animals. In the past, these hogs have been scored according to quality of loin and bacon-side in conjunction with length and backfat.

BEEF CATTLE PERFORMANCE TESTING!

The potential of station performance tested cattle is being explored for the first time in Alberta at the Master Beef Research Feedlot at Bassano. Forty-eight bulls from 12 purebred breeders are taking part in the program.

According to Sid Lore, Supervisor of Beef Cattle Performance Testing with the Alberta Dept. of Agriculture, the Bassano test will continue into the first part of May. It started in November 26th after the animals had had a short adjustment period in the feedlot.

Most of the 48 bulls, comprising 16 Aberdeen Angus, 16 horned Herefords and 16 Polled Herefords, will be offered for sale at the conclusion of the testing period. They are all being fed a growing ration with the idea of having well grown animals which are capable of limited service in the coming breeding season. The bulls can be seen by visitors at any time.

The following are four of the breeders who have bulls under test at the Bassano Research Feedlot from the North part of the province. Gotthold Reich, Bashaw; J. Stevens and Son, Montreville; Lakeview Farm at Lloydminster; W. T. Leslie, Sedgewick.

Performance testing of beef cattle in this province is now in its fifth year. Mr. Lore reports that over 3000 head of purebred calves were weighed on test last fall which is almost three times the number weighed during the first year of the performance testing program.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Oh, How We Danced!

Have you watched teenagers dancing lately? If you haven't, and you are old-fashioned, and your blood pressure is high, take my advice. Don't.

Saturday afternoon, through sheer inertia, I found myself before a television set showing one of those teen-age dance programs. Fortunately, I am neither old-fashioned nor high-blood-pressured (it says here). But I must confess, I was wishing I were 25 years younger.

Today's kids dance delefully, but sweetly, in the slow numbers, heads knuckled together, bodies scarcely moving, intent, serious, tender yet strangely impersonal.

But when the music begins to clang and thump, they come into their own. They laugh, they lob bad humour; they wiggle and jiggle and giggle. Their faces light up. Their feet weave and shift and trace peculiar patterns. They are very young and very much alive, and can plainly caught up in that most ancient means of communication — rhythm.

Watching them, I was sad. It's a pretty bitter thing, after all, to have been too young for the Charleston, too old for the Twist.

But I couldn't stay sad. Letting my mind drift back over the years, I actually began to feel sorry for the youngsters.

"Those kids," I thought disdainfully. "How many of them have mastered a step as I did? Sure, they can do the Cha-Cha and the Twist and the Bossa Nova. But is there a single one of them who can boss a whole era of dancing on one step — the fox-trot — as I did?"

There are ample-bosomed middle-aged ladies across the land who will testify that Smiley was a rocker, if not a terror, when he tripped the light fantastically.

There are grandmothers in Canada, England, France and Belgium whose eyes still light up when they remember the way we whirled to beat the dance-halls, a symphony of smoothness, a fantasy of fox-trotting.

"How many of these kids," I wondered, "have ever danced with a Russian beauty who couldn't speak a word of English and was doing a dreamy tango while you were doing a brisk fox-trot?

"How many of them," I queried, "have ever been to a real old country square-dance, where the sign that the dance was over was not the band playing 'The Queen', but the stove-pipes coming down when the fight started?

"How many," I thought, "have ever tried to fox-trot with a brawny Land Army girl who was bored she was doing a waltz, and could lift you right off the floor in the pursuit?

"How many of them," I considered, "have walked up to a flashing-eyed young French matron in Revelois, at a nightclub, bowed to her, bowed to her husband, asked her for a dance in impeccable Grade Eleven French, and received a slap in the face from her, a kick in the groin from her husband?"

No. Let them have their fun. I have my memories. Long before these kids were running around with their diapers dangling, I was cheek-to-cheeking it on enchanted summer evenings, and breathing heavily into the ears of their Aunt Mabels.

THE Homemaker

By Mary Lee Phillip District Home Economist Cameron, Alta.

Do you have a laundry problem? Many homemakers do. With all the new fabrics on the market and all the new cleaning and laundry compounds, it's small wonder many homemakers are confused!

For good laundry results, however, the procedure is still the same. Perhaps you are relying too heavily on your washing machine, soaps or other laundry aids. Maybe you should examine your method.

Proper sorting is a must. Sort for the degree of soil, keeping lightly soiled clothes in one load, heavily soiled clothes in another. Wash non-color fast garments, or those which are questionable, separately. Sort as to fabric — cottons and linens, silks and woolens and synthetic fabrics. White synthetics should always be washed separately as they tend to pick up dye from other garments. Separate lint producers from dark loads.

Careful Preparation is important. Mend before you wash clothes, empty pockets and cuffs, close zippers. Pretreat heavily soiled areas such as collars and cuffs and knees of childrens clothes with a brush & a solution of your laundry detergent or soap. Remove stains. Write to me for the bulletin "Spot and Stain Removal" for helpful suggestions on the removal of common spots and stains.

Soft water, relatively free from iron, gives best results. Soap flies caused by hard water dulls color, causes white clothes to appear gray, makes fabrics feel harsh and stiff and may reduce the wearing qualities by stiffening the individual fibres so that they break when creased or stained. You can soften your wash water with packaged chemical softeners. In order to be effective, at least the first rinse must also be softened.

Use the correct temperature of wash water. Heavily soiled white & colorfast cottons and linens require a wash water temperature of 140 - 160 degrees F. This temperature is required to remove grease, to release all types of soil which become embedded deeply in fibres, to dissolve soap and detergent and to destroy bacteria.

Save these labels. Your best guide to the proper laundering of any article is the washing instructions on the label. Be sure to designate on the label the garment to which it belongs.

PLAYS KEELER. Actress Yvonne Buchignani has been chosen to play the part of London's political playgirl, Christine Keeler, in a movie called "Christine Keeler Scandal," now being shot at Nice, France.

A Record 151 Bills Passed At Sitting

(By John Warren)

EDMONTON — The last week of the Session, surprisingly enough, had its moments. Usually the members, through a combination of hoarseness and spring fever, don't get very excited about anything that goes on in days immediately before prorogation. This proved to be not, it was a little different

First there were the 40 planned-Wielding Trade Unionists who participated in front of the Legislature on closing day in protest against the amendments to the labor act which they said would infringe on the rights of organized labor. These amendments were given third reading and Royal Assent and the pickets went home to Calgary saying they at least got the satisfaction of putting their cause before the public.

Then there was the opposition's last minute effort to set up a Private legislative investigation of procedures for awarding Northern school construction contracts. It was soundly defeated but not before the opposition said a good deal more than the government would like to hear, and not before Premier Manning stepped in to deplore tactics that smacked of politics. Mr. Manning finally promised a thorough probe by his people in the Attorney-General's department before opposition leader Mike Maccagno gave up.

Minutes later Lt.-Gov. J. Percy Page was called in to give assent to a record 151 Bills (six don't use the order paper). The members had just set a longer-than-usual 70 sitting days and had dealt with more legislation and more dollars (a budget of $413,620,000) than ever before.

What was achieved at the 1st session of the 15th Alberta Legislature that saw Mr. Maccagno named Opposition Leader, Art Dixon become Speaker and everybody get a pay raise?

Well, members decided to permit the sale of colored Margarine (any color but that of butter. They turned down a proposal for daylight time practices in Alberta cities. They approved an increase in Education and Hospital Care taxes for Municipal property owners through revisions in the Provincial Equalized Assessment base.

The budget, third largest of Canada's 10 provinces, included estimated expenditures of $194 million by the Health Dept., $94,500,000 by Education and $61,600,000 by highways.

One of the major Bills set up an Alberta Investment Fund to provide savings and investment certificates to be used in aid to new and developing industries, municipalities, hospitals and schools.

Gordon Taylor's scheme of "Powerful Persuasion" to get drivers to buy insurance, was passed in the form of a $20 fee for uninsured drivers' license plates.

Plans for a provincially operated police force whose members would be loaned to municipalities were released in detail, and $622,000 was provided for its establishment.

And a committee was established to review procedures for collective bargaining between school boards & teachers. It will report next session.

It was a long, often dull session, but somehow quite a load of work was done.

ST. JOHN'S W. A.

SEDGEWICK — St. John's W. A. held their April meeting at home of Mrs. Chapman with 11 present.

A full report of the speech made by the Diocesan President Mrs. Neyly at the opening of the Golden Jubilee Diocesan Conference, was read by Mrs. Weber. Mrs. Bloom reported on her visit to this conference.

Members agreed that the kneelers for the new altar rails should be covered in blue material. A silver wafer box was chosen to be purchased with money sent by Mr. & Mrs. F. P. Beairsto. It was agreed to serve supper to the April Board of Trade meeting.

Mrs. Bottineau, Mrs. Richmond & Mrs. Chapman will be hostesses for the May meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Enoch.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

STROME — The Strome Hospital Auxiliary held their April meeting at the Killam Hospital with 20 members and 2 visitors present. Roll call was answered with terry towel slippers. Sisters showed the new pediatric resperator unit which will be the Auxiliary's next project.

A cheque for $200 was presented to the Sisters, and will be applied towards the resperator. A motion was made to hold a Bake Sale.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. N. Nickerson. Roll call will be answered with a wash cloth. Lunch was served.

The organizational meeting of the Board of the Killam School Division was held on March with all Trustees and Supt. Bruce present.

Motion No. 66 was amended so that Mr. Ken Weld's leave of absence is from the teaching staff of the Killam Consolidated School and not from his grade 7 position at Strome.

Mr Greene, Architect was present and gave a report on his inspection of the Alliance School. The report indicated that any remodeling as at present up the old section would not be the best answer nor the economical solution, and suggested that per haps the Dept of Education should be requested to send an Education-ut to the sale and assess the build ngs on their educational outlines.

School Division Holds '64 Organizational Meet

A motion was passed favoring 'the Alliance institute.

Mr. Bruce was requested to take the chair for election of chairman. Mr. Nicholas was nominated & Russell Grant as chairman. There being no further nominations Mr. Grant was declared chairman.

Mr Nicholas was nominated as vice chairman, and elected.

It was moved that Mr. Cheatine be the courier-ing authority for all cheques drawn on general and capital accounts, and that he receive $25 for the year for this duty

Mr. Nicholas was appointed representative of the Board to attend meetings when necessary of Municipal Councils within the Division.

The firm of Deloitte, Per-der, Haskins and Sells was re-appointed the auditors for 1964.

The chairman, Sec.-Treas. & Supt were appointed the committee for salary interpretations.

It was passed that the Board, the Sec.-Treas. and the Supt. and two Adult School Principals be a committee to study the Provincial Vocational training program from all angles and evolve a policy for the enrollment of qualified divisional pupils in vocational schools.

It was passed that the application of Fred Lass for the position of janitor and caretaker of the Hesler School be accepted and that a probationary period of three months shall be in force with the stipulation that his suitability for the yearly contract.

Payment of the supplementary list of cheques attached to the minutes on bills numbered Feb. 22 to 133 & March 1 to 109 inclusive were confirmed and & approval given for payment of bills numbered March 1@0 to 130 carried.

Effective in Sept. 1964 bursaries of $300 per year, tenable for two years will be offered to selected graduates of the Division and adjoining areas, with the stipulation that required teaching for the division after 2 years of training.

To Board went on record as being sympathetic towards the organizations promoting the formation of a Regional Library comprising local governments along highway 13.

The budget estimates of revenue and expenditures for 1964 were approved.

The local taxi collecting authorities of the Killam School Division 22 are to requisitioned for additional sums as listed hereunder:

of Killam $27-9, Town of Daysland $3286, Village of Sedgewick $3@09 Town of Hardisty $2783, Village of Alliance $2225; Village of Strome, $1485; Village of Lougheed $1273; Village of Hesler $1071. Total, $@8, 81@.00. The above requisitions are approximately 4 1 2 mills on the new equalized assessment.

Teachers met the Board March 25 and presented a request for increases on the present salary schedule, & to remain in force for two years. A counter proposal on the grid is to be issued.

It was passed that Dale Erickson be engaged as a temporary teacher, teaching grade 6 at Strome, May 4 to June 30th.

An On-The-Scene Report On The Alaska Quake

(Editor's Note — The following is an on-the-scene report of the recent Alaska Earthquake, brought to the office by B. Engel, Killam, sent by a relative in Alaska.)

All is well here. Please let your bench know too as he wrote us a letter at the shop and John just left a letter writer. We are all extremely grateful that there were no few casualties, as when you see where the Quake struck it is a miracle that the residents were unhurt. The Quake devastated a great amount of the downtown area — residents along the Inlet bluffs, Gov. Hill, and of course beautiful Turnagain was the hardest hit residential areas. A Dr. but two here is a service and of course that was a heart-breaking thing to hear. It opened and closed on them. You just don't believe how some homes were torn in two, sunken and crushed. As you drive out L street you see the majority of the homes slightly planted, but then you see one home up to 20 feet below the road, as it is rather odd. Not every home is damaged, but to travel between and homes and business is a sort of random thing. The Seismologists said the area in the downtown section would be one of the worst hit residential areas. A Dr. but two here in a service and of course that was a heart-breaking thing to hear. It opened and closed on them. You just don't believe how some homes were torn in two, sunken and crushed. As you drive out L street you see the majority of

All the dirt-movers are busy, and it is a big job to do.

Our sister cities were mostly demolished. They will really need help! This whole experience was like a bad dream. John said he thought the old shop fell down four or five times — but it didn't. The cement in between the logs came loose, but it still is standing. Our home stood beautifully. Only the chimney fell, and we'll have to repair our central chimney. John fixed the chimney at the shop as it fell too. They were working with two customers when the Quake hit. They all got outside.

I was at the grocery store, and I told them to get out as quickly as they could. I kept falling down, and found myself crawling over broken jars. When I got to the door 2 men pulled me out. My legs were cut badly, but I rushed right home. We found our children safe and sound, and were even more grateful I was so glad to find them safe. Rick was in his play pen when the house shook and he thought someone was shaking him. The floor lamp fell over but was caught. Don't worry as things are "status quo" here.

SOCIAL INSURANCE NUMBERS!

A great deal has been written and said about the business of Social Security and the Federal Government's numbering system. A good deal of this has been said without much thought to present day social trends and accompanying difficulties.

Commencing April 1st, a nine digit number (Social Insurance Number) will be issued to all employed Canadians with the exception of those engaged in agriculture, private domestic service where only one is employed, and members of armed forces. This issuance of numbers is being carried out for a number of reasons, chief among which is it being a means to better government record keeping. The Glassco Commission suggested a single numbering system be established to do away with multiplicity of numbering systems in government departments.

The Unemployment Insurance numbers have become obsolete due to the growth of the labor force and the use of electronic data processing. Therefore a good place to start the new system is in the operations of the U. I. C., which department has been given the job of carrying out the numbering project. It will be carried out in conjunction with the annual renewal of unemployment insurance books which will take place this spring.

The Social Insurance Number will be issued to all employed persons whether covered by U. I. or not, and it will be broad enough and flexible enough to be adapted to the record-keeping required for the proposed pension plan, as well as other social security measures.

Labor Minister MacEachen dispelled rumors that Canadians are in danger of losing their identity and that the Social Insurance Number is synonymous with regimentation, and that its real purpose is an inventory of manpower. He said that these observations are not founded on fact. Individual identity will not be lost and regimentation will not be the end result. In fact, he said, the Social Insurance Number preserves identity for the useful and valid purpose of providing numerous benefits to the registrant. Considerable of the information asked for has already been asked for in the application for unemployment insurance numbers for the past twenty some years.

The need for positive identification is exemplified by the fact that there are now 50,000 Smiths in the U. I. C. master index. Of all the 10,000 Smiths have the initial "J". So it is purely as a matter of identification that the Mother's last name at her birth is asked for. There has also been much talk about there being a link with the project and the extension of coverage under unemployment insurance. This has also been denied in a statement that there is no consideration being given to broadening the group who will pay unemployment insurance.

The project is already under way, and employers are being sent a supply of application forms. The employee receives a form, fills it out, signs it and returns it to the employer, who sends it in to the nearest office of the U. I. C. The number is then sent back to the employer in the form of a three-part card. The first section of the card will have the Social Insurance number, surname and first name plus employee's signature. This will then become useful if kept on the person ,even though there is no compulsion to carry it. It will be handy for those who are seeking employment from time to time. The second section is a duplicate and should be put in safe-keeping in case of loss of the original. The third section is retained by the employer. It bears the S. I. number, old U.I.C. number, applicant's names, the day and month of birth — but not the year of birth. The employer retains this portion until such time as the new account number has been recorded on all employee payroll records, after which time it may be destroyed.

If an employee has never had an unemployment insurance number, he will register for a Social Insurance number, and one who has the former will re-register, and the new number will replace the old.

Applications will be available for all employed persons through their employers. If a person is unemployed and in receipt of U. I. benefits the application is provided directly by the U.I.C. However if a person is unemployed and not in receipt of U. I. he will apply at the nearest office of the U. I. C. for an application.

There are between 6,000,000 and 6,500, 000 persons to be covered in this mammoth project which will be a cross-Canada operation. Five Regional Processing Centres are planned across Canada where applications forms will be channelled from the local offices. These will be at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Moncton and Vancouver.

Officials of the U.I.C. stress accuracy in filling out the Social Insurance Number application form. This is of prime importance when it is considered that this number will be used by the registrant in the provision of benefits for years.

WHAT'S ALL THE HURRY?

It seems almost incomprehensible to the average layman that our Provincial Legislature sits for several weeks without really accomplishing very much, and then in a hurry to get finished and get home, members drone out their monotonous "agreed" and rush through dozens of bills without consideration or concern.

From the time the Legislature opened in February, those interested watched with some concern while matters of minor or importance were "chewed" over with little regard to time; with hours and days wasted over trivial bickering, answers to which were not satisfactory or revealing. But as time grew short ,apparently, the things of far more importance were rushed through without proper study, and without time for proper debate.

The net result, as always, will be a flood of amendments next session to bills found inadequate and lacking in proper phraseology and intent. This seems to be a tradition in our Legislature and it does not make for good government. The opposition is dismissed as unimportant, the government fails to give itself proper protection, and forbids the taxpayers from the proper study of legislation and the time to protest to local members.

What is all the hurry? Some time ago this corner went out to endorse the increase in pay for members. In return we expected more sincere interest, more attention to legislation, better attendance, and more information to the electors. All we got was the same thing as in the past, only more of it. How any member expects to give clear thought and balanced judgement to some thirty bills rushed through the house in two days, is beyond comprehension. How the opposition, elected for that very purpose, can do justice to their positions, is inconceivable. Back-benchers should have some explaining to do to the constituents when they sit in the house without challenging a single bill. Actions of this kind indicate a lack of concern, or a priority given to getting home.

We do not ask for longer sessions, but we do ask for more attention to matters of importance early in the session, with less time given to praise heaped upon parties and individual constituencies' Let's start the session by getting down to the business in hand, and then there will be no need to rush to a conclusion.

Worth The Risks

OTTAWA — Federal-Provincial relations, a subject of almost interminable discussion over the past several months, refuses to go away. And the more often it pushes its way to the forefront, the more it begins to take on nightmarish qualities.

To go back a bit, it will be recalled that last summer there were some preliminary skirmishes between the two levels of Government when Ottawa sought to move ahead with its pension plan and Municipal Loan and Development Fund without consulting the provinces.

What was heralded as the real confrontation, a confrontation primarily between the Federal Government and Quebec, took place in Ottawa last November. It was the beginning of a series of conferences that, in the words of some influential voices in French-Canada represented Confederation's last chance.

Out of that first conference sprang ed a decision to give the provinces an additional share of revenue for the fiscal year beginning in April of some $87,500,000. Out of this sum, Quebec was to get nearly half, about $42 million. While it fell far short of the $150 million being demanded by the Quebec Government, all seemed well when Premier Jean Lesage went away all smiles, pronouncing the conference an undeniable success. The danger to Confederation presented by the nationalist forces in Quebec seemed to have past and on all sides there was a sigh of relief.

When the second conference was convened in Quebec City at the end of March, it was expected that the atmosphere would be relatively calm and as a result few were prepared for the shocks to come.

The first was provided during the course of the conference by Premier John Roberts of Ontario, when he provided a strong indication that his Government would join Quebec in spurning the proposed Federal contributory pension plan in favour of establishing its own public pension plan.

For Ottawa's dreams of a national pension scheme, it was a serious blow, since it raised the possibility that the two largest provinces, with well over half the population of Canada, would not form a part of the Federal program.

The second shock came following the conclusion of the Federal-Provincial talks when Premier Lesage, who had spoke with a study of flexibility in the conference chamber, lashed out at the Federal Government with a vicinousness that was quite unexpected. He condemned the Federal authorities for failing to of revenue which he was demanding, come up with the additional share making it quite clear that he intended to raise provincial taxes & lay the blame on Ottawa's shoulders. Not content with that, he threatened to challenge the Federal Government in the courts on grounds of violating provincial jurisdiction over education if it pressed ahead with plans to provide family allowances for children 16 and 17 still in school and interest-free loans for university students.

Returning home dispirited from Quebec City, Federal authorities faced an attack of another sort from Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker in the House of Commons. The latter, pointing to the proposal to allow Quebec to opt out of shared-cost programs with financial compensation, accused the Government of seeking to dismember Confederation.

Trouble piled on trouble when a short time later Premier Roberts made it all but certain that Ontario was going to thumb its nose at the Canada Pension Plan and go for one similar to Quebec's instead.

In many ways, that for Ottawa was the unkindest cut of all. From the beginning, Premier Roberts had been every effort to smile down the Federal scheme to more modest proportions. Bending to this pressure, the Pearson Government agreed to make some substantial modifications, thereby gone a considerable distance to meet Mr. Robert's position, Ottawa now faced the Ontario Premier completely shifting his ground, forcing a pension plan that was more expensive in practically every way than that ever contemplated by the Federal Government.

Faced with impending disaster on both the Quebec and Ontario fronts, the Federal Ministry resolved within the past few weeks to undertake a drastic shift of its own position in an effort to escape from the sinking sand all around to firmer ground.

Highly secret, highly sensitive negotiations were launched between Ottawa and Quebec City in an effort to reach agreement on a package deal that could just conceivably provide the basis for a new measure of understanding between the two levels of government. For the Federal Ministry the move was fraught with danger.

If it failed to pull it off, relations between the Pearson and Lesage Governments could go from bad to worse. And even if the Federal Ministry did succeed in appeasing Quebec, it faced the risk of further aggravating the strong reaction to French Canada that was building up in other parts of the country.

But the main cause of friction between Ottawa and Quebec is over money. The Federal Government indicated it was prepared to provide for an increase in provincial revenue for the next and succeeding years.

"The second front on which it was prepared to move was on pensions. The pension plan unveiled by the Quebec Government, which Mr. Roberts favored so strongly, was in many respects considerably larger in scale than the proposed national plan.

Despite the substantial gap between the two, Ottawa offered to sit down and negotiate a compromise that would provide for at least a common pension system and just possibly pave the way for Quebec membership in a revised national contributory pension plan. Should that latter possibility develop, Ontario would be left with little recourse but to follow suit.

For the Federal Government, the risks were very great, but the price may yet prove them to have been worth taking.

By Bill Smiley

Last Sunday was one of those days. Filthy outside, with mud and rain and wind. Dismal inside, with everybody bored and crabby.

I mooched around the house gloomily, wishing the golf course was dry, or the trout season open. Then I started thinking about what Sunday really meant, was ashamed of myself and cheered up considerably.

As some will remember, to our ancestors, it was the Holy Sabbath; to our great-grandfathers, The Lord's Day; to our fathers, Sunday. We call it The Week End.

The Sabbath is not of Christian holy day, as the last day of the week. Like most of the laws of the ancient Hebrews, observance of the Sabbath was a combination of religion and common sense. Man needs a day of rest in every seven. He demands penetration marks in the life sentence he is serving.

However, there's a vast difference between the Sabbath of the ancient Hebrew and the Sunday of modern man.

The former lived a pastoral life. When the Sabbath came along, all he had to do was lie around and count his sheep. He didn't have to go to church. Nor did he have a late Saturday night, scramble around trying to get his family off to church, wash the car or catch fish or play golf, drive 50 miles to visit some relatives of his wife, and tear home to watch the hockey game.

If it were not for Sunday, the Saturday night bath would become obsolete. If it were not for Sunday, many men would go through life without shining their shoes. If it were not for Sunday, many women would never get a hat.

Sunday is a great comfort to all those intent on getting to heaven. They don sober garb and pious mien on Sunday morning. On Monday, they go back to the normal pastimes of trying to scramble to political, social and financial eminence over the crushed and bleeding bodies of souls of their fellow Christians, secure in the knowledge that if there is a rush for seats on the judgement day, they will have some pull with the management.

Sunday means church. Church, too, is a good thing. First of all, it provides employment for ministers, and employment, or lack of it, is pretty important these days. Secondly, it provides probably the only place in modern society where people who like to sing, but sound like hyenas, can vent their frustration without someone telling them to shut up.

After church, what? There's nothing particularly Christian about gorging oneself with food and lolling in a stupor looking at television.

What about a nice Christian game of golf, with no swearing when one shoves? What about a little walk in the woods, worshipping the wonderful world of nature that was created for one? And if one happened to look down and see a fishing rod in one's hand, one shouldn't worry too much about it.

Remember the old adage:

Ecclesiastes may rave and shout, But only God can make a trout.

Keep Rear Lights In Good Working Order

STRONG LEGS. The aging Toronto Maple Leafs battled their way into the Stanley Cup finals for the third successive year, and it was the strong legs and clever net-minding of goaltender Johnny Bower that was much of the credit for Maple Leaf success. After dispatching Montreal Canadiens in seventh game of finals, Toronto went after Detroit Red Wings with all the odds in their favor.-

Tail lights and turn signals are the rear of an automobile can be of inestimable value to the safety of the occupants, according to A. A. Ennis, of the Canadian Highway Safety Council's vehicle safety committee "But if they are out of order or not working properly," he added, "they are not only of no use but can lead to accidents."

Manager of mechanical training with General Motors of Canada Ltd. Mr. Ennis issued an urgent plea to all motorists to make regular checks of their vehicle's rear lights. "They are just there as warning lights. If they don't issue their warnings, the other traffic will be confused and a dangerous condition can be created." Mr. Ennis referred to the Council's April-May car-check program, and asked motorists everywhere to give their cars' rear lights constant attention to keep them in first-class working condition at all times.

● During April, two Ontario hog farmers visited the Province of Alberta. Lance Dickerson of Arnes, and Bert Martin of Lindsay, chairman and vice-chairman respectively of the Ontario Hog Producers Market Board, spoke at a series of meetings arranged by the Alberta Hog Marketing Committee. Purpose of their visit was to give Alberta hog producers a chance to hear firsthand about the operations of the Ontario Board.

The two Ontario hog men addressed a total of 18 meetings, and met more than 1,000 producers. They were questioned closely on various parts of the Ontario operation. Alberta producers wanted to know whether or not production is controlled in Ontario; whether or not the packing plants are getting into the business of hog production; and whether or not Ontario producers were dissatisfied with their board. The visit was to give Alberta hog producers a chance to hear firsthand about the operations of the Ontario Board.

Mr. Dickerson travelled through Northern Alberta. Large turnouts at his meetings impressed him with the interest there is in the subject of Hok Marketing Boards.

Both men agreed that the same principle involved in the setting up of the Ontario Board was paramount here in Alberta. "And that" Mr. Curtin said, "is keeping for the ordinary producer his God-given right to a market for his product".

"This is the reason a market board came into being in Ontario," he said. "Before the farmer's available market was being diluted and eroded. Now, regardless of whether he produces 10 or 1000 hogs, the market is there for him".

MAGNETISM AND PLANT GROWTH!

Within the memory of most of us, farming was a relatively uncomplicated business governed largely by the weather and a bit of luck. Not so today. Recent advances in cultural practices, plant breeding, pest control, fertilization, and mechanization have brought about changes to the point where farming is a science that is becoming more exacting each year. Consider the following:

In earlier tests at the Lethbridge Research Station it was found that germination and growth of some cereals are affected by the positioning of the kernel with respect to the north, magnetic pole of the earth. More recent tests show that growth of some crops can be accelerated by exposing the dry seed to an introduced magnetic field before planting. Winter wheat seeds that were exposed with their embryo ends toward the north pole of a magnet for 48 hours or 144 hours just before planting grew about 14 times as much in the first 2 days as seed exposed elsewise. Corn and Red Mexican beans that were exposed for 48 hours with their embryo ends toward the north pole of a magnet grew about twice as much in the first 3 days as unexposed seed. A greater growth response occurs if these seeds are exposed to the magnet for 48, 144, or 336 hours than if exposed for intermediate periods.

Similar but less complicated was the discovery that green beans that were planted with their embryo ends pointing toward the north geomagnetic pole matured more uniformly than those planted in a random fashion. At a single harvest date the "orientated" beans produced about 15 percent more usable-sized table beans than the uncorientated or randomly planted ones.

Results such as these strongly indicate that many factors other than luck and weather enter into the business or successful farming. Truly, farming is a very real science today.

GIVE THE RED BOBS TOMATO A TRY!

Get your order in now for a free sample of Red Bobs tomato seed from the Alberta Horticultural Station at Brooks. A dozen plants will keep the average family in tomatoes from early in August until the first hard frost.

According to Thor. Kilduff, Asst. Supt. at the Brooks Station, Red Bobs is an excellent heavy yielding garden tomato which has been developed at the Station after several years of trial. They can be grown in the province where weather conditions permit transplanting by the first week in June.

JUST MARBLE-OUS: When youngsters across Canada bring out their marbles, can spring be far away? At this time of year, every schoolyard becomes a competitive arena for bare-eyed marble hunters, and the winner is he who returns home with pockets bulging with the most marble booty.

Mr. Kilduff says the seed should be down between the 15th and 20th of April and the plants pricked out into plant bands or flats when the third leaf shows. Good light is essential to prevent the young plant from becoming spindly. Providing weather is warm, the tomato plants may be transplanted to the garden under hotcaps by May 24th or even earlier. Any gardening trick which improves on the ordinary heat unit will be repaid by this heat-loving plant.

Although Red Bobs was originally chosen for the supermarket tube trade, wholesalers say that its quick ripening properties give it a short shelf life and that its tender skin makes it unsuitable for long transportation because of the handling involved. However, neither of these facts, says Mr. Kilduff, lessens its value for local sales or home use.

SILAGE HAULING WAGON!

The side-opening forage wagon for hauling silage from the field to the pit has been rated superior and much cheaper than a hydraulic dump bed truck by a group of farmers who participated in a silage handling tour o fthe County of Paintha.

According to Jack Kerns, District Ag. at Penoka, the wagon is made out of a standard 8x14 hay rack plat form. The sides are seven feet high and it has a false triangular bottom. The sides of the wagon open from the bottom so that the silage can slide out. For optimum use of the wagon the silage pit should be 20x25 feet wide. It has been suggested that the tires should be 7.00x16 because 3 tons loads will blow smaller tires. Any blower type forage harvester can be used to fill the box.

Plans for this side-opening forage wagon, which was designed in the Penoka area, are now available from D. Ag's. and from the Extension Service of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, Alta.

Wedding Bells

Baskets of white and pink carnations decorated Knox Presbyterian Church for a double-ring wedding ceremony which united in marriage Miss Amy Cattle Smith and Douglas Henry Hardie. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Smith of Red Deer and the groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Hardie of Grande Prairie.

The late afternoon ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Howell. The wedding music was played by Miss L. Crandell and the soloist, Mrs. L. Gilmour sang "The Lord's Prayer" before the ceremony and "The Wedding Prayer" while the register was being signed.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a full-skirted floor-length gown of white organza over taffeta. The bodice was designed with long lilypoint sleeves and the sweetheart neckline was overlaid with scalloped lace decorated with sequins.

Her headpiece was a pearl crown which held a bouffant tiered fingertip veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of red sweetheart roses.

Attending the bride were her sisters Mrs. Warner Davidson, Regina; Mrs. Ron Maclan, Calgary; & Miss Betty-Lou Smith, Red Deer. The attendants were identically gowned in street-length dresses of pink peau de soie styled with bell skirts, fitted bodices and long sleeves. They wore matching fabric flower headpieces with veils and carried bouquets of white baby chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony, a reception for 85 guests was held at the Holiday Inn. The bridal table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake baked by Mrs. Lloyd Free and decorated by Mr. Free.

The toast to the bride was proposed by her uncle, C. E. Collier of Calgary. Guests from out of town were from Regina, Port Arthur and Edmonton, Olds, Calgary, Lougheed and Grande Prairie.

For travelling the bride wore a powder blue two-piece Italian knit suit. A black straw Breton & black accessories complemented her ensemble. Her corsage was pink roses.

Bridal Shower Honors Miss Doreen Cotton

KILLAM - A bridal shower was held in the Killam Baptist Church auditorium on Tuesday night in honor of Miss Doreen Cotton. The hall was beautifully decorated in yellow and white with bells dressed as the bride and her attendants. Dorothy Heartberg acted as M. C. and presented Doreen with a corsage. Two interesting contests were enjoyed as well as a solo by Shirley Heartberg, and a duet by Laurine Sesemink and Jeanne White. Scriptures and prayer were given by Mrs. Grynnstoski.

Pamela Hartusek, dressed as a nurse, and Perry Lewis as a farmer, delivered the gifts on a decorated wheelbarrow. Doreen was assisted in opening gifts by her attendants, Margaret Lewis and Donna Reinhart, after which she graciously thanked everyone present for the many lovely gifts.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Several young couples attended the Interdenominational Young Couples meeting at home of Mr. & Mrs. Rabe, Pulaps Monday night. A very large attendance was reported.

A capacity crowd viewed the film "In His Steps" shown at the Killam Baptist Church Y. P. meeting. Few films shown here have had a message more suited to our needs. What Would Jesus Do? is the question in the film recurring again and again, and as true to life lessons are faced and settled in that light, the result is peace of heart, though not necessarily plenty in material gain. Special music for the evening consisted of a choir number and violin trio.

A surprise birthday gathering in honor of Rev. Grynnstoski followed in the auditorium at which time a purse of money was presented and lunch served.

A new record was set at Sunday School on Sunday with 105 present. A letter was read by Supt. W. Bartusek from Park Ou Chai, the Korean orphan we support. A new light house birthday bank has been purchased by the S.S. to replace the former bank, and birthday offerings were received. This money is designated for Mission to Lepers.

PLASTIC FLOOR FINISHES!

Numerous enquiries have been made pertaining to the use of the new plastic floor finishes. Generally the question is whether these may be applied on tiles and sheet floors.

Information which I have received recommends these finishes be applied only on hardwood. Even though a hard finish is obtained wear will eventually occur in traffic areas On hardwood, refinishing may be done However, on other types of hard surface flooring, difficulty may arise in patching worn areas. How will this hard, tough finish be removed from the uneven areas? It is almost impossible.

The nature of plastic finishes is much like varnish, but is much tougher, harder and more expensive. Varnishes have been applied to tiles and sheet floorings and proved to be unsatisfactory.

4-H AWARDS PRESENTED!

Rifton Auditorium was bussing with busyness of 100 young girls of 4-H Homemaking Clubs and 6 Garden Club boys on Saturday, April 11. It was Belly time in Camrose.

How Long Did It Take To Court Your Wife?

Did you just happen to see her, walk up to her, ask her to marry you and call in the minister . . . right on the spot —

PERHAPS NOT . . . it probably took a lot of calls, and trips, movies, flowers, candies, and a lot of putting-your-best-foot forward tactics. You had to "sell" yourself. She had to know all about you!

IT'S THE SAME WITH ADVERTISING of time . . . you've got to win their confidence . . . you can't "woo" customers with one Ad . . . you've got to "Call on Them" over a period and be convincing.

CONSISTANT ADVERTISING wins the customers if it's truthful, if it gives helpful information, if it saves shopping steps, if it is backed up with intelligent, courteous and honest values.

Fossilized Pollen Helps Oil Search

Fossilized grains of pollen that fell from plants 100 to 400 million years ago are helping scientists in searching for oil, says the April issue of Imperial Oil Review.

The ancient plants grew in tropical rain forests in parts of what are now British Columbia, Alberta, the Gaspe, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

To the naked eye the grains look like yellow dust, so fine that ten pieces would fit on the end of a human hair. But magnified 500 to 1000 times, they take on intricate shapes that vary according to the age of pre-historic time in which they were produced. In this way scientists can determine the approximate age of rock in which the pollen is found. Knowing the age of various rock layers gives drillers a few more clues on where to probe for oil.

For years scientists have determined the approximate age of various rock strata by studying fossilized remnants of plant and marine life. Only recently have they looked to pollen for similar information the Review says.

Palynologists at Imperial Oil's Calgary Research laboratories prepare and dissolve the rock holding the pollen, leaving the grains free to study.

Down Memory's Lane

MILLIE INHERITS JESSIE'S FORTUNE!

As time slipped by, other incidents took place in that little village and the doings of Tony and Jessie sort of faded from the limelight.

Jessie was reaching the age now where she didn't even go up to the stores very often. Tony made the remark to his pals one day that "The old gal is pretty well crippled up with rheumatis these days. I always have to get my own meals". Then one morning he said, sort of casually, "The old gal hasn't been up out of bed for a week. I suppose that I should send for the doctor, but if I did, boy would she raise cain".

A few days later he rushed up to the doctor's house, saying that he thought Jessie was a "goner for sure". The doctor, and coroner, rushed over to the house, and found poor old Jessie in bed, dead. He said she passed away quietly in the night.

Knowing her religious principles or lack of them, Jessie was given the same funeral service which Jim had fifteen years before. An Anglican minister performed the last rites at the house, then the few mourners followed the hearse out to the cemetery where she was laid to rest beside the body of Jim.

Jessie had lived a hard life by our present-day standards. A busy, self-centered existence, from day to day, making no friends (not wanting any for that matter) her one and only interest being making and saving that all-important dollar. Just for what? For whom? She knew she couldn't take it with her. She was no philanthropist and likely didn't know the meaning of the word, and she definitely never intended Tony to get one cent more than the law [illegible]

However, she did have a niece Bet Jessie never gave Millie any idea that she cared for her. Even so Millie would often run in to see our Aunt Jessie, and maybe do a chore or two. When a neighbor asked Millie one day why she bothered "with that old woman" adding "she probably doesn't appreciate it anyway." Millie answered, "Oh well I might be old some day myself, and it does not hurt me to do a few things for her once in a while. You know that Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you" Millie was the type of a person who was always doing something for a needy person. If she heard of anyone who needed help, and she could do it, she was there to assist.

Incidentally, isn't the world full of people like Millie? If we could only set our sights a bit higher & try to see the good in our fellowmen, life would be much more pleasant.

But back to our story.

Millie was shocked, but not too surprised when she heard of Jessie passing on. She went over to the house to see if she could clean it up a bit as she knew it really needed it. Jessie had not been able to do much cleaning for some months.

The day of Jessie's funeral was a cold, windy, miserable day in November with sleet and rain — a typical finale to her uninteresting and gloomy and friendless life. Poor old Jessie. Of course Millie attended the funeral and had Tony and a couple of the neighbors over to her place for coffee after the funeral.

Tony was anxious to have Jessie's will read. He didn't give it a second thought but what he as Jessie's husband would inherit the whole estate including what money she had in the bank. Although there never was love in that union (it being a matter of money and an easy life for Tony and the convenience of having a man about the house to do for Jessie) even the neighbors thought Tony would be the lucky one when the estate was settled.

Eventually the will was duly agreed and read. Tony and the nephew to whom Jim had willed his fortune, & his wife, and Millie were the only ones present in the lawyer's office on that day, when the town's only lawyer read Jessie's last will and testament.

Can you feature the surprise of not only Tony and the nephew, and his wife, but of Millie, when it was known that Millie's Aunt Jessie had willed all of her worldly possessions, namely, half the house and contents, and all the money which was in the bank (except the $1.00 which the law said must go to Tony) all to Millie. It was later learned there was approximately $10,000 in cash in the bank, as well as $5000 in government [illegible]

Poor Tony presented a most crestfallen appearance when he left the lawyer's office. He soon made arrangements with Millie to sell her his half of the home place, and taking his third-rate car, left town one day for parts unknown, shaking the dust of that little town from his feet. He never returned.

And Millie? She had lived in the same town all her life. Her mother had died just when Millie had finished high school, and as she was an only child, she felt it her duty to give up any future ambition which she may have had for herself, and stay home and look after her father. She had a few suitors, who gradually lost interest. Why, no one knows, as Millie wasn't unattractive at all, and was considered a real nice girl. Thus in time Millie was termed as "A typical old maid".

SEDGEWICK — A regular meeting of the Sedgewick and District Board of Trade was held in the Anglican Church hall.

A discussion took place regarding the moving of the North Log Hall to town. After discussing the financial cost and work involved, the matter was tabled to the next meeting.

A membership committee was instituted, with L. Knoeland as head, and with A. Gellan to canvas town, E. Koehli the north and Tom Hyne the south area.

It was decided to add two farm members to the Agricultural Committee for the year.

Mr Hedley Bailey reported on a Chamber of Commerce meeting held at Viking recently, and noted that Mr. C. Bourasto had been elected to the committee. The meeting decided to go along with the slow of an East Central organization.

Under general business it was mentioned that too much garbage is being dumped along the roadway to the dump grounds. Also mentioned was the speeding, and glass and bottles scattered on the street after public functions in town. Out of this came a motion that better policing be sought in the situation.

The Board of Trade will sponsor a Clean-up Campaign for the first week in May in the town, and note for the co-operation of all citizens.

Brian Bourasto and Hedley Bailey offered to head a committee for the campaign.

An endeavour will be made by the Board of Trade to protect the rights of foreign tradesmen and peddlers who come into town. Information as to restrictive laws will be sought.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mr Thomas Clemens, who spoke on the Educational Fundation Program, and Credit Assessments, etc. This was followed by a question period.

Mr. A. Falls thanked the speaker and moved a vote of thanks.

Killam Girl Wins New York Trip

Miss Wendy Saunders of Killam won the trip to the United Nations in New York, when she was declared the winner in the final speaking contest held in Killam. This contest, known as the U. N. Pilgrimage For Youth, is sponsored by the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of Alberta.

Wendy was announced by the Killam Lodge, and followed in the footsteps of her sister Charlene, who won the contest in 1956. This must constitute some kind of a record, to have two winners in one family win a public speaking contest.

Wendy will represent the district from Rocky Mountain House to Vermilion, all of Central and Northeastern Alberta, and along with the other successful candidates from the Province, will leave Calgary in July on an all-expense-paid trip to the U. N. in New York. Congratulations to Wendy on her achievement.

PRIME MINISTER WRITES YOUNG FLAG DESIGNER

SEDGEWICK — A few weeks ago Parker Wong Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs P Wong of Sedgewick, got a little bit tired of listening to all the talk about the style for a distinctive Canadian flag, and decided to settle the matter once and for all.

Parker, who attends the Sedgewick Public School, got busy and came up with a design he said just couldn't miss. After his completion he sent it to Prime Minister Pearson.

This week Parker got a letter from the Prime Minister's office, reading as follows:

Office of the Prime Minister

Dear Mr. Wong:

The Prime Minister has asked me to thank you for presenting to him your design for a distinctive Canadian flag.

Mr. Pearson appreciates your interest in the matter, and as his direction your enthusiasm has been forwarded to his colleage, the Secretary of State, to be recorded.

Yours sincerely,
D. MacKenzie, Secretary

NATIONAL PENSION SCHEME. Prime Minister Lester Pearson and Quebec Premier Jean Lesage have compromised on a new pension plan which will be uniform across the country, giving maximum $104 monthly payments to retired Canadians at age 70. ALBERTA'S REPRESENTATIVE at the U. S. National 4-H Conference being held this week in Washington, D. C., is Lloyd Hamilton of Penhold. Before his departure Lloyd visited Premier E. C. Daysland Council Hears Delegations

(Dolores Dolenz)

DAYSLAND — The regular monthly meeting of the Town Council was held recently with 6 councillors and Mayor Pryor present. As several delegations requested the Council decided to hear them before going into regular business.

Fire Chief R. Hanrahan gave his report on the Fire Protection Convention held at Red Deer.

Mr. Teeling represented the Canadian Legion, requesting a portion of the Centennial Grant in order to build a Cenotaph. Mr. Teeling was asked to send in a written application for this grant.

A group of business men attended the meeting as a delegation, and requested the Council to look into the possibilities of a water system, paved main street and a revised business tax structure.

Mr. Polehoke, the local trustee for Killam School Division, was asked why the school taxes had taken such a steep increase this year. He explained that it was due to the extensive building costs for which it was not budgeted this year.

A bill from Associated Engineering Services in Edmonton, which had been returned to them, was again submitted. Council decided to hold this bill in abeyance as they did not feel obliged to the firm in regards to the drawing of the proposed Community Centre.

A letter was received from the Dept. of Agriculture requesting that we appoint a Weed Inspector for 1964 and notify the Dept. of the appointment. Mr. Joe Longhe was appointed to this position.

Letter was received from Killam School Division that Mr. L. Neuman had been named to represent the S. D. at Municipal or Town meetings. The Assessment Division advised that Mr. J. D. Irwin had been appointed Assessor for 1964.

Building permits were applied for by Bernard and Lydia Lotzkin, Mr. Joe Stoet, Mr. A. Sereda and Revoistoke Building Materials.

Councillor Weld, E.M.O Co-ordinator, reminded council that there is to be a Civil Defence meeting here on April 13, and also one in Sedgewick for the towns within the M. D. of Flagstaff.

Secretary was instructed to write the five business places still in arrears with their business tax.

Councillor Weld was appointed as Deputy Mayor for three months.

Literature from the Provincial Secretary's Dept. in regards to the Dom.-Prov. Centennial Grant, was read. As one organization had requested a part of Daysland's share, council decided to table this as once further requests were made. The Secretary is to write Mr. A. Blair, requesting him to discuss the Centennial Grant at the next meeting of M. D. Flagstaff, and if the M. D. had no specific plans in regards to the grant, then the town of Daysland would like to requisition the M. D. for that portion considered the rural trading area of Daysland.

FENCE MENDING

THE PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE!

Did it ever occur to you that a man's life is full of crosses and temptations? Did you ever stop to ponder as to why some people see disaster in every move the human race makes? There are many people today who read calamity into all things. Biculturalism, language barriers, intigration, social welfare — they're all disasters to some minds, who, it seems, fail to reason that the social order must change and that all things brought to the proper conclusion will aid mankind in his sometimes bitter struggle for existence.

Of course the opposite also holds true. The majority of people ,we believe, see life as something beautiful, a span of years to be lived to its best. Such people see something good deriving from human adventures into all areas of existence.

But it is the constant worrier, the man who sees evil in everything, the man who fights progress, the man who sees disaster continually staring him in the face, who is the menace to advancement, that society must seriously contend with.

He comes into the world without his consent and goes out against his will, and the trip in between is exceedingly rocky. The rule of contraries is one of the features of this trip. When he is little the big girls kiss him; when he is big the little girls kiss him. If he is poor, he is a bad manager; if he is rich, he is dishonest. If he needs credit, he can't get it; if he is prosperous, every one wants to do him a favor. If he is in politics, it is for graft; if he is out of politics, he is no good to the country. If he doesn't give to charity, he is a stingy cuss; if he does it's for show. If he is natively religious, he is a hypocrite; if he takes no interest in religion he is a hardened sinner. If he gives affection, he is a soft specimen; if he cares for no one, he is cold blooded. If he dies young there was a great future for him; if he lives to an old age, he missed his calling. If you save money, you're a grouch If you spend it, you're a loafer If you get it, you're a grafter If you don't get it, you're a bum So, what the hell's the use.

THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH!

A great number of people have passed through the turnstiles since the days of some time ago when many of us battled our way up and down the ice lanes of the old-fashioned open-air rinks along this line. Yes, and a lot of talk has kept some of the old games alive even to this day.

There are still many old players about who will recall the open air rink at Killam, equipped with private lighting plant that failed to function when you needed it most, the dressing rooms with coal and wood stoves with burnt-out grates, giving off a feeble heat that made it more comfortable to out on the ice. It was with just a bit of nostalgia that some of us saw the old order change and these facilities replaced by a modern covered-in arena, with up-to-date lighting and real heating systems, and we wondered if the new system would produce the same results. We stood there, leaning on what was left of the old board fence and recalled the days of the Albert Erickson cup when teams fought for its possession, and each game followed by an oyster supper upstairs in the old hall on the east side of the street. Back came such names as Gillanders, Knill, York, Murray, Carmichael, Rose "Stonewall" Busse, Grant, Dagnell, Lang, McMillan, Garbe, Boggs, and many others, who played hard, for the sheer fun of the game.

Then a few years later we watched the same thing happen at Hardisty; the old giving way to the new, and we remembered the days of travelling to games via the bob-sleight and four horses, or sometimes in the caboose of the freight train where we matched our hockey ability with such old stalwarts as Ruttan, Martin, Stott,, and catching the midnight train home.

This past week we saw the last boards and relics of the old Sedgewick rink disappear in the same way, giving way to bigger and better things.

That, we suppose is progress, at least in some areas. Ice palaces have changed, playing rules have been adjusted, even referees have changed. But there is one things we will never have again. The dyed-in-the-wool player who was willing to freeze to play the game, and the spectator, bundled in buffalo coat who would withstand the rigors of 20-below weather to cheer his team on to victory. But then the human race was a more rugged lot in those days.

MORE FOR THE MIND!

The problems of the mentally ill in Canada have no more avid students than the 100,000 lay people who comprise the 40-year-old Canadian Mental Health Assn. This society is found in every part of the country, striving to raise funds for necessary research into the cause and cure of mental illness, rehabilitation of those who have been ill, and the teaching of good mental health practices.

A few years ago the association put into the hands of the most experienced people in the mental health field, the job of blue printing the plan that should be taken to provide the best possible service for the mentally ill in this country. Out of what became a five-year study has come a survey of the psyantatric services in Canada and a blueprint for action. Its central theme is "Mental illness should be dealt with in the same organizational, administrative and professional framework as physical illness and with the same excellence of care." The report places much emphasis on the need to provide opportunities for the local community of citizens to become involved in and accept responsibility for psychiatric care.

Although improved services mean the spending of more money, it is pointed out that increased spending has been raised in connection with the need for improved health services of all kinds. Less is spent on mental health and in treating mental illness than on other medical services and because this situation exists, the point for increased spending is well taken.

"More for the Mind" also makes the point that it is possible that a relatively modest increase in overall direct cost of psychiatric treatment, along with an evolution into new patterns of administration, organization and clinical direction, could actually reduce the total cost to the nation. The CMHA seeks broad support in its campaign for More for the Mind for Canadians. It should be forthcoming.

The Wetaskiwin Times says editorially that "It is patently ridiculous that a government of a million and a half people (in Alberta) with an income of more than $,800,000,000 a year should be seeking new tax revenues. If the budget cannot be balanced on that sort of income, we are getting bad government.

The White Paper

OTTAWA— A bold imaginative white paper on defence was introduced into the House of Commons just before Easter by the Hon. Paul Hellyer, Minister of National Defence. He has brought logic and clarity of thought to a tough assignment that may his predecessors shudder & shy away from the task. Canadians generally will want the young Defence Minister to succeed in the difficult job he has taken on because it could mean both savings of millions of tax dollars and better value for the defence dollars that are spent.

Under the plan as outlined in the White Paper this country will become the first major world nation to merge her three military services into a unified defence force. The unification will start at the top with the appointment of a single defence chief and move down through the chain of command. It is expected to be completed in three or four years.

Mr. Hellyer estimates the move will save $1,000,000,000 during the next decade. He believes that it would result in savings at the end of three years of about $100,000,00 a year and bring about a cut in the armed forces of about 10,000 personnel. A large number of the cuts in staff will be in the Ottawa area. Normal attrition will account for many of them. But there will be also some "compulsory" retirements.

The savings expected to accrue from the revolutionary changes will in large part be plowed back into the purchase of new equipment. It is estimated that sufficient savings should be made to permit a goal of 25 per cent of the budget to be devoted to capital equipment.

Canadian defence industries are greatly interested. They see an opportunity to turn out new pieces of equipment for Canada's forces. They are expected to be called into discussions shortly. The Defence Minister has promised to brief Canadian industry on the rule it can play in the new program. He in turn would like to hear from the defence industries as to the types of production programs they think can be undertaken in Canada.

Modern weapon systems are so costly and complicated that only the larger powers appear able to undertake and develop the equipment. Canada had a and experience with its CF-105, the super-sonic interceptor that was better than anything else in existence at the time. It might today have played an important role in this country's defence setup had it been continued and sales made to allied countries.

The lesson from the CF-105 was that there must be inter-allied cooperation and co-ordinated defence production. Canada should be able to be assigned a role in the manufacture of some parts or sections of specialized equipment for its own defence forces as well as for the forces of allied countries.

For years, ever since the Second World War, there has been a steadily mounting realization on the part of senior officers of the armed forces in Canada that integration was the only answer. The confusion and overlapping that has grown up going along a waste of money and duplication of services has made it abundantly clear that unification of the Navy, Army and Air Force was sensible and logical. But there has also been a hard core of resistence to such a move.

Two objections were always given as reasons why integration should not be undertaken.

First, the morale or "esprit de corps" would be weakened, and 2nd, that competition would be diminished.

Neither of these objections in the opinion of the Minister stand against careful scrutiny. "Esprit de corps" by nature is associated with ship, or corps, or regiment or squadron as well as with the service. There is no thought of eliminating worthwhile traditions and there is no reason why morale should not be high — a direct result of effectiveness. Similarly there will be no leak of competition. The sailors will press for more ships, soldiers for more tanks and airmen for planes.

Mr. Hellyer rather than barking away from the difficult job has apparently tackled it with relish. This should not be a surprise for Mr. Hellyer has made it apparent from other decisions he has taken that he is prepared to take the bold approach. For example he boarded 14 ships of the Royal Canadian Navy, closed two of the five interceptor bases in Canada and one of the RCAF's four bases in Europe. This Minister is one who is not afraid to take action even in the area of sacred cows.

Legislation has been drafted amending the National Defence act. It will be placed before Parliament , to abolish the chiefs of staff and other senior commands of the three armed forces, putting the services, under the direction of a single chief of defence staff. Civilian control will be also increased by extending the authority of the Depot, Minister of National Defence.

Mr. Hellyer said he planned to recommend that the present chairman of the chiefs of staff, 56- year-old Air Chief Marshal Frank Miller, be named the first chief of the defence staff.

The success of the Minister of Defence in maintaining an effective civilian control raises — in the words of the Glassco Royal Commission on Government Organization — a "need for a strong staff group which is essentially civilian in character, outside the framework of of the armed forces." The Government has accepted and will implement the recommendations of the commission "that the Deputy Minister be given greater responsibility for keeping under review the organization and administrative methods of the Canadian defence establishment, and assisting the Minister in the discharge of his responsibility for the control and management of the armed forces."

LEAVE TRASH ON TOP!

It's been a windy spring. Let's hope we get rain soon, and a minimum of wind in May. The fields with considerable trash on them have held but those that were black and prepared for a good seed bed this spring have been moving.

The finer particles of the soil and organic matter are removed from the soil during the process of wind erosion. Tests have shown that the soil lost contains 16 times as much organic matter, 9 times as much nitrogen and 19 times as much phosphorus as the soil left behind. Hence it is imperative that we do all we can to save our soil.

Trash cover left on the surface of the field is effective in preventing wind erosion. Trash cover farming can be practiced without any major change in the existing farming program and without any additional cost. The choice of farming machinery is important. Today the deep tillage machinery is in wide use. It is excellent for conserving trash cover if operated at moderate speeds, at moderate to shallow depths and not used too frequently.

Now is the time to think about next year's Wind Erosion Problem. Proper management of your summer fallow fields for this year can go a long way to save the fall next spring.

PLAN BEFORE NOT AFTER!

This past week I called at several farms to help them with various problems. One farmer had ordered trees and wanted to know where to plant them, what spacing to use and if they had the right trees.

One of the important parts of any business or venture is the planning. Miss Heimmer, Home Design Specialist, at the Home Building and Remodeling School in Sedgewick this winter, said that one should start gathering the details of plans for building a house at least three years before the actual date of building. This is quite a long time, but planning is necessary. I question the practice of ordering trees and leaving the planning of where, how many & what to plant to the day before the planter arrives. Trees take years to grow and so should be planted in the right places.

As other farmer had planted trees seven years ago. He had cultivated these he could and left the others. His trees looked more like shrubs than trees. My knife was sharp and so we went to work pruning the shrubs. We cut off all the branches and shoots leaving one stem, clean to a height of one to three feet depending on the size of the plant. What a difference! They began to look like trees.

One farmer wanted help with a farm stead design. He had built his new house and was trying to plan for the arrangement of the rest of the farmstead now. In this case he was okay, but in too many cases the problems of planning are multiplied because the planning stage had been left too late. Don't be afraid of a pencil and paper. Take a little time and plan the farmstead for five to ten years, future building, acreage system, driveways, etc. You will have a better farm for it.

Meteor owners use their garages for storing tools, ladders, baby buggies, bicycles, toboggans, etc.

Beautiful—yet every inch is practical. For instance, push that button on the dash. Look in the rear view mirror. Meteor's Breezeway rear window is gliding down. Lower it just a little to counteract misting. Lower it the whole way for lots of fresh air—without that wind-tunnel effect. And because the rear window slants inward, weather can't get at it . . . can't obscure your rear vision, summer or winter.

Meteor's size is beautifully right, too. It's a full 216.5 inches long (take six giant steps.) It's wide (two giant steps). You enjoy a smoother, more stable ride, and far easier handling. And the interior is as big as the feeling you get when you drive a Meteor.

Think of this long, beautiful car in your driveway. (And think of all the stuff you'll be able to store in your garage!) Now go and see your Mercury dealer.

MILLIE TAKES OVER

At first Millie's father was hesitant at giving up his own little home where as a newly married couple, he and his wife had come. It was where Millie was born and had spent her life. He didn't want to give up his flowers and garden, either, although he knew Jessie's place was beautiful also. But as Millie pointed out, Aunt Jessie's house was newer and much better built, as well to more modern lookings. Also Aunt Jessie had spent hours and hours of hard work on her flowers, yard and garden, with the result she has the most beautiful place in town. They were offered a fair price for their old house, and as Millie ajily suggested, maybe they could purchase a car with the proceeds, a thing Mr. McKinnon (Millie's father) had wanted for a long time. She finally were him down, the buyer paid cash for the house, and Mr. McKinnon had his new car, bought with his own money.

The day came when the McKinnons had to move, to be near ever one wanted to take possession. But believe it or not, once they were all settled in their newer homes, visiting she would like to adopt either a girl or boy around 10 to 12 years of age. She didn't have much hopes of getting one that age but thought it was at least worth the price of a stamp to find out. One woman she wanted an older child was for companionship for herself. If they sent a boy he could help her father with the weeding, etc. She felt she was getting too far up in years to cope with a baby or young child, even if they sent one out. She knew in her heart that none she would ever marry & have children of her own. Adoption wheels turn slowly, but in time a lad of about 11 years of age was sent out. A big, fine looking lad, healthy and fairly intelligent looking, and seemed quite quiet-mannered. An unusual case to be sent out of the city, as a lad of that type is picked up by the Child Protective parents almost immediately.

Millie took him on probation, but before the allotted six months time was up she knew if he was willing to stay, that both she and her father would like to keep him.

One would expect a lad that age would find life with an old maid and an elderly man dull. However Brodie was only too agreeable, happy sort of lad he soon became acquainted with some of the town boys his age, and was soon taking part, not only in sports but in school plays, concerts, etc., as well. So it wasn't long until Brodie belonged to the gang of fun-loving and ever-free lads of the town.

Five years sped by all too quickly. Brodie graduated from the high school at the age of 17. He had become a fine looking, big strapping lad, and naturally the favorite with all the girls. Although some of the town lads were a bit envious of his popularity Brodie still had no enemies.

Just about that time World War Two broke out, and as so many of his pals of 18 and over were joining up one after the other, coming home in uniform on leave, Brodie became restless and as dissatisfied that Millie finally gave her consent for him to go into Winnipeg to the recruiting office and sign up with the R. C. A. F. Of course, not being quite 18 he had to have the written consent of parent or guardian. At first both Millie and her father refused, both to give it, but when they saw how unhappy Brodie was, they gave in, consoling themselves (like thousands of others) that this war would soon be over, maybe even before Brodie was shipped over. Of course we know that was just wishful thinking, and the pity came, all too soon, when Brodie came home on Embarkation Leave.

Poor Millie. Brodie, aside from her father, was the only one she had in this world on which to lavish her love & adoration. Folks would remark, re Brodie, "She thinks the sun rises on him." Millie was failing. All that was impossible to her now were his letters.

One day the United Church minister went over, and it was he who broke Millie sump out of her lethargy. He asked her, bluntly, if she thought she were the only one who had lost a loved one in this war. As so, he added, the wire did NOT say Brodie was DEAD, it said "MISSING".

"Further more", stated the Minister, "Many a missing man has been taken prisoner after being shot down and was found, later, to be alive and well".

Slowly Millie made herself believe that there was a slight hope that this COULD be the case with Brodie.

Three months dragged by. Then, as the Minister had predicted, word came from the R.A.F. headquarters at London, England, that Brodie had been taken prisoner, and was now in "Stalag Luft 7", in Germany. Next week - "Word From Brodie"

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

RIGHT IN THE EYE!

If ever you decide to do some research on the lower forms of wit, I can tell you how to go about it. Just get yourself a black eye.

I had a doozer recently. My wife gave it to me. All right. Not that way. She was sitting in the car, waiting for me to carry the groceries into the house, through the rain. Just as I bent and reached for the car door to open it and ask her if this was all, she opened it smartly from the inside to ask me why I hadn't brought out an umbrella.

When the door nailed me in the eye, I thought I was a goner. My wife shrieked and ran straight into the house to see whether my "item of birth or eye" accident policy was paid up.

Within a few minutes, the eye was the size and color of a barrendorfer's beaver. But by the time we'd finished arguing about whose fault it had been, it was obvious that I'd live.

We didn't have a piece of steak, and if we'd had, I doubt that it would have been sacrificed. But the Old Girl, bless her, dug out some hamburg that was going a bit blue, and made me lie down with a big hamburg poultice on the injured optic.

Right off the ice, it felt pretty good at that, and I dropped off to sleep, steaming but brave. During the night, the hamburg worked loose, and when I woke in the dark, I thought the eye had fallen out. But it was only hamburg, all over the pillow.

Next morning, the orb looked like a purple golf ball. We patched it up as best we could, and I set off to face the wife.

The comments were hilarious. They ranged from the simple, dry brilliance of "How blicha?" and "I've got to dash, eh?" to the coy, lascivious, "I know she'd catch up with ya some day." They ran the satisfying gamut from the inevitable, "I suppose ya ran into a door" to the ineffably humorous sally, "Meet the former welterweight champ of the Smiley household."

I came back with some real funnies myself. "My wife," I replied. "Footwork isn't what it used to be." I admitted. "Gets me on the other guy," I quipped. I can go along with a joke as well as the next bird.

But after a while, in fact if I remember rightly, it was just after the fourteenth "How blicha?", I began getting a little sore. I mean, fun's fun, you know, but, after all.

So when the next joker made his move, I told him, dolefully, that a maiden lady who didn't like my cuisine had thrown acid in my face, and that I'd never have the sight of it again. He turned green.

My next customer was a woman, who tittered, "That'll teach you to write things about your wife in that column of yours." I gave her a gentle, sad look from my good eye, and suggested that she not let the divorce scientist her from my wife. I left her with her mouth open.

I quickly diagnosed of an elderly lady, strange in the temperature movement, by informing her the injury had been received from my young daughter, when she clubbed me on the eye with a half-empty whiskey bottle. It's good apart. Next time the old trendalt-and-stride hangs one on you, dark, you'll know what to do.

One 8 1/2-Ft No 509 Massey Harris Tillers

SHE CAN'T WAIT TO WADE. Like most Canadian tots, there's nothing 2-year-old Riki Vlahakos would like better than to go splashing about in a pool in her bare feet. But when she arrived at a neighborhood fountain she found no water. Riki, like most of us, found herself wishing that the warm days of summer would hurry!—

Regional Library Report Given

HARDISTY — Some 25 members and guests attended the April meeting of the Hardisty and District Home and School.

The treasurer reported that $46.70 was realized from the baking auction. Many thanks to all who contributed to this sale.

It was reported that Mr. Cavanagh had removed the fence from in front of the school in preparation for having Doug Bell remove the hedge. Levelling has also been done and some dirt hauled in.

A $10 donation toward the grader fund was gratefully received from the Corset Lodge.

A nominating committee, consisting of Mr. Les Anderson and Paul Masure has been selected. Anyone wishing to file nominations for the 1964-65 executive may contact one of these men. The election will take place at the May meeting.

Mr. Marvin Pyten, vice-principal, led a spirited discussion on the necessity of four report cards a year. The teachers feel that perhaps this could be cut down some. Quite a number of parents were very much in favor of retaining the present report card frequency. No decision was reached, but it will probably be discussed at a later meeting.

Following adjournment of business, Fr. Hefferman, chairman of the interim Library Committee, gave a report on their findings so far, regarding the formation of Regional Libraries along Highway 13. The meeting with the Divisional Board was favorable, and investigation into the operations of the Parkland Regional Library showed it was very efficient, and people in that area were well pleased. If this project can be put into operation it would bring library facilities to some 70,000 people in the Wetaskiwin, Bentley, Leduc, Camrose, Flagstaff, Provost and Wainwright areas.

This board has several other meetings scheduled which will give them more information on the feasibility of furthering this project.

Mrs. Stuart and Mrs. Gibson gave a very interesting and informative demonstration of the new Math courses in grades 4 and 5. These talks help parents a great deal in understanding what our children are learning at school, and how to give a little help when homework time comes.

Baptist Church Weekly Activities

KILLAM — Last Monday was Youth For Christ night at the Killam Baptist Church, with a male quartette from the Hillcrest Bible College of Medicine Hat. The sing was good, and the message given by Rev. Sherman of Hillcrest, was well chosen. A good representation was in attendance.

The April meeting of the WMS was held at the church on Thursday with 21 ladies present. Mrs. Heartberg, president, was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. W. Bartnett gave the devotional "Continuing With Christ in Time of Crisis". A special offering was taken for Vancouver Bible Institute. The business included plans for a bridal shower for Ruth Smolak. Lunch was served by Mrs. Richard Sather and Mrs. J. Kvill.

It is reported that the Junior Y. P. had a very enjoyable party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sather on Friday evening. Double-header games and other games were played. The evening ended with a wiener and marshmallow roast.

The Sunday morning service was conducted by the Alberta Conference Youth Fellowship Executive. The message as well as special instrumental and vocal numbers were a powerful challenge to Christian living. Thanks was expressed for all young people The Sunday School attendance reached a new high.

Rev. Grynnoloski brought the evening message. A vocal duet by Emelee Grynnoloski and Vera Peterson was enjoyed.

Two thermometers which indicate the mission offerings have been placed by our treasurer at the entrance to the main auditorium. The total from all departments for the first quarter registered $[illegible]

Dr. Graham Speaks In United Churches

KILLAM — Recently Dr. L. Graham, a United Church Missionary to Japan, occupied the pulpits of Killam-Strome United Churches, and spoke of his work as a teacher in Christian University in Japan. He traced the history of the Christian Church in Japan down to the present day, revealing that out of a population of 94 millions people, only 750,000 are Christians.

The congregations were impressed with the project the University is undertaking to help the Japanese farmer improve his living standard. The farmers are being encouraged to a mixed type of farming instead of their traditional rice growing enterprises. There is a desperate need in Japan for more protein in the average diet. Only 1 1/2lb of a cup of milk is consumed on the average per day per person in Japan. Thus the university is training men in Animal Husbandry and has set up a project whereby a farmer may secure a cow from the University on the conditions he returns to the University the first heifer born. The original animal then becomes his. Because of the acute shortage of good dairy cattle in Japan, Dr Graham is attempting to raise sufficient funds to take back 20 holstein heifers when he returns to Japan in the fall.

[Editors Resume]

DAYSLAND — The Ladies Missionary Prayer Band of Dayslnd Alliance Church met Thursday at the church for their monthly work night. Eight ladies were present.

Mrs. Young brought a devotional "Meeting Time Count For Christ," the 1964 Vacation Bible School theme. This was followed by preparing handwork for the nursery and beginner classes of Vacation School Mrs. A. Eklund provided lunch.

Projects completed by the ladies thus far this year have been: Purchasing a brass communion set and linens for the communion table; purchasing paint for the sanctuary of the church; providing paint for basement classrooms, and cleaning the church.

The next regular meeting will be on May 14th at 8:00 p. m.

Provincial Museum & Archives First Staff Appointment

The first appointment to the staff of the Provincial Museum and Archives has been announced by Hon. Ambrose Holowach, Provincial Secretary.

Michael Hampson of Edmonton has been named Zoological Preparator. His duties will include travelling throughout the province to obtain specimens of native birds and animals, and preparing them for exhibit in the Museum.

Mr. Hampson has had a number of years' experience in taxidermy and, as a native Albertan, is well acquainted with the wildlife of the province. An important part of his work will involve the imaginative use of modern display techniques & materials to show the natural habitats and characteristics of Alberta wildlife.

The Provincial Museum and Archives is being designed to relate the natural and human histories of Alberta from prehistoric times through to the present day. Location of the site for the Museum is expected to be announced shortly.

CADET INSPECTION THURSDAY, MAY 7TH

SEDGEWICK — The annual inspection of the Sedgewick Army Cadet Corps has been set this year for Thursday, May 7th at the local school parade grounds. The time is 3:00 p. m.

The public is cordially invited to be present and watch as the members of the Corps perform their various stints before the inspecting Officers of Army Command.

A. P. CROP REPORT

LOCAL — Moisture conditions are generally unsatisfactory and are particularly poor in the area surrounding Edmonton. Some cultivation is reported, but rain and warm weather are needed to provide a satisfactory seed-bed.

GENERAL — Cold and unseasonable weather has prevailed over Alberta up to the present, and spring farming operations have been delayed in all parts of the province. Moisture conditions are satisfactory in the south half of the province and in the Peace River District, but rain is needed in northern areas. First reports indicate that fall crops of rye and wheat have wintered well.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

by John Warren

EDMONTON — Saskatchewan stole the political spotlight from the rest of the country last week with one of the most surprising and confusing provincial elections in the last decade.

It will be weeks yet before the detailed outcome is confirmed — because of recounts and the deferred counting of an estimated 25,000 absentee, declared and advance ballots.

And it will be much longer than that before the politicians and historians figure out just why one of the country's apparently secure provincial governments suffered such a startling setback.

In recent elections in each of the other nine provinces the government was returned with little difficulty. The lopsided victory of Premier Manning's Social Credit party in its last test was an extreme example of what appeared to be happening all across the country.

Not so in Saskatchewan, however, where Premier Woodrow Lloyd's government held 34 of 55 seats in the last house and the Liberals occupied the rest. Pundits felt the CCF would gain in the new house with a redistributed 59 seats. Mr. Lloyd felt the same way.

Ross Thatcher and his Liberals weren't given any more than a 50-50 chance to win seats, and no odds were very long indeed on his overthrowing the government.

But the preliminary ballot count showed a startling 53 Liberals elected, 25 CCFers and one Progressive Conservative. Mr. Thatcher's crew had amassed more than a dozen CCF members, including four cabinet ministers.

And something went quite a bit haywire with the redistribution. CCF candidates polled more total votes than the Liberals but votes were so well spread for the latter they took six of 10 seats which were won by less than 100 votes.

What accounts for it?

Mr. Manning, who speaks as a politician in such cases, said the people of Saskatchewan were obviously getting tired of socialism.

Mr. Thatcher, a CCFer who defected to the Liberals a few years back, figured it must be something like that. He appeared too startled on election night to assess the upset [illegible]

Mr. Lloyd said it was a combination of complacency on the part of his party's candidates and supporters, and highpressure Liberal salesmanship in the form of huge television expenditures and a circus-type atmosphere at public rallies. (The Liberal campaign was designed by a Toronto advertising and public relations firm).

The complacency argument would appear to be a sound one. Remember how Mr. Manning repeatedly warned his people against just such a mistake although his position would appear to have been as secure as any politician's can be?

Another argument is now being advanced that also gives Alberta's premier the decided edge in politics. It is simply that Mr. Lloyd campaigned on the government's record, without promising a vast new program and then a detailed extension to it.

Medicare hardly entered the campaign in Saskatchewan and when it did the government appeared to have an advantage in sympathy.

Say what you will, promises win elections. Mr. Thatcher made them bigger, better, louder, and longer than did Mr. Lloyd.

Young Socreds Hit Election Trail

coyne home for their regular monthly meeting.

Plans were discussed for the June meeting, there being none in May. It was proposed that the group invite the President of the Alberta Young So. Credit, Lee Anderson, of Medicine Hat, as guest speaker for this annual meeting.

The young people are introducing a new policy for the election of group president this year. All candidates must be nominated by two persons and are given an equal sum of money to conduct a campaign. Campaign managers are chosen by the nominees. Candidates this year are Daniel Lewis and Arlene Gascoyne. Members are anticipating a hot campaign as they delve the mysteries of political competition.

After the business meeting the young people undertook to remodel the distinctive Young Social Credit "beanies". A lunch was served and enjoyed by all.

A PULL AT THE HEART STRINGS!

Modern society has contrived so many "special" days and "special" weeks, that one is hard put to keep track of them, let alone do anything to assist in any small way with the ones particularly dear to their own thinking. We might even go so far as to say that the saturation point has been reached, so let's not clutter up the pursuit of livelihood and happiness with any more of these special periods. If we must have any more of it, it might be a good idea to set aside a 'special' week for men and women to concentrate on themselves, evaluate their station in life and housecleau their minds of social and economic superfluities of life that are detrimental to basic pursuits, and which deprave the minds of some.

One of the basic concerns of man is the struggle for self-preservation. But there in many cases, his struggle ceases. Many are not too concerned with human preservation beyond himself and those near and dear to him. Sometimes, we are informed this struggle even ceases with "self" and concern for others is absent. That, probably, is the reason for learned psychogists to blame human re-action on past experiences. That is why some parents, for instance, couldn't care less what happens to their children; why children have a "hate" complex for a mother or a father. It may shock some to learn of these facts, but they are nevertheless true in fact, and it would seem that the result is due to the basic selfishness that besets the lives of all, and remains there through life, unless sincere attempts are made to elevate the mind to the true concept of life that you shall love your neighbor as well as yourself. The determining factor then is to discover who your neighbor is. From there on the path is clear.

But to get back to the subject in mind when this article was started.

It can well be imagined what public reaction would be, say an outbreak of some disease such as smallpox should break out across Canada, taking the lives of 2000 or more children every year. People would become so aroused that some definite action would be taken to put a stop to the death toll and consequent anguish. Yet, we have such a situation on our hands today, and little seems to be done about it.

More than 2200 Canadian children under the age of 15, die each year as a result of accidents, the majority of which are just as preventable as smallpox.

It will be recalled that not long ago a Canadian child returning from South America was found to be suffering from a mild attack of smallpox. All contacts were examined, trains stopped for a fast check for possible infested persons, and daily papers were full of the case.

But in the same year more than 2200 children died accidentally in Canada, and an estimated 600,000 more were seriously injured — without much publicity, nation wide preventive measures or too much public concern.

National Child Safety Day was observed on May 3rd, and was intended as a day to focus attention on the ignored tragedy and to stimulate preventive measures.

It is a problem that governments cannot solve alone. There is no vaccine which health departments can give as in smallpox. The immunization measures are in the hands of parents who can become better aware of the hazards to children, and deal with them. Children have to be taught to live safely in a dangerous and hazardous world, and the most effective education is good adult example in safe, responsible living.

A little girl was displeased with her father because he had refused her an expected pleasure. In ther prayers that nite she ended with: "Please don't give Dad any more kids. He don't know how to treat the ones he's got now.

OUR SENSES CREATE PRIVATE WORLDS!

It is impossible to prove that two people see any one color in exactly the same way. The sight impression that is a pleasing shade of blue to one person, may be unpleasant to another. The eyes may not be exactly alike in any two people. Also it may be that one person unconsciously associates this particular shade of blue with an unpleasant experience and dislikes anything reminding him of the experience.

The same applies to the vibrations we call music. To some ears, certain notes & overtones are actually painful—others cannot hear them at all. Some people can hear musical notes, but simply cannot detect a beat in music.

Scientists now are pretty well agreed that when we hear, see, taste or smell something, our minds re-act to it in terms of whether past experiences with such stimuli have been pleasant or otherwise.

The more complex an idea, the greater are the variations of meanings it will have for different people. Take the word "government". To a highly able, brilliant and dynamic industrialist, "government" means a great mass of fumbling civil servants and a collection of bumbling politicians whose hemming and hawing are hold ing back the development of the nation and increased prosperity for everyone.

To a poorly educated labourer "government" means a lot of big shots away up in the stratosphere who are hand-in-glove with big business to beat him, the poor labourer, out of higher wages.

To idealistic socialists "government" is the tool that can lift us all into something like an Utopia, a better, happier life for everyone.

To people living under a form of dictatorship "government" means secret police agents, ruthless punishment and commands that must be obeyed without question.

These are only a very few of countless thousands of different ideas that are conjured up in human minds by the word "government". The same can be said, to some degree, for just about any word more complex in meaning than "come" or "go". This basic problem in human communication of ideas is not one that can be solved by the establishment of a single world language, a universal dictionary, or a universal standard of education. In the final analysis, every man will re-act to a word in terms of his own knowledge, experience and emotions triggered in his mind by that word. To many it may seem strange that the word "mother" conjures up in some people the idea of tyranny, cruelty, selfishness, sloth or drunkeness, yet this is a fact. Even 'love' may mean anything from highest inspiration to lowest and most despicable depravity.

There is no solution to this problem of conveying understanding from one person to another. From time to time you meet people who come very close to seeing things as you do, and you are of course attracted to them as friends. But don't be disappointed or angry with the many others who can't see things as you do. It is neither their fault nor yours. — Ponoka Herald.

SOME ARE LOSERS!

Among more sobering statistics to come out of Ottawa lately are those relating to business failures. A total of 3,678 businesses are shown to have gone bankrupt in Canada last year, 15 p.c. increase over 1962 and a new record. Aggregate liabilities, at $194 million, were 30 p.c. greater than in the previous year. Inexperience, lack of capital, managerial weakness and plain bad luck are the perennial ingredients of business failure. All may be presumed to have been factors in last year's toll of casualties. — Vermilion Standard.

Canada Gets A Plan

OTTAWA— Time will decide whether Prime Minister Pearson and his Government have performed an act of superb statesmanship or have beat en a frightened and ignominious retreat.

At Quebec City two things were made plain to the provinces including Quebec. Ottawa had gone as far as it could in tax abatements except as compensation to provinces ready to take on the full cost of shared welfare and other programmes. Not only was the Canada Pension plan final except in small detail but provinces opting out could do so only if they offered a plan of which the Federal Government approved.

There is no doubt that fear was responsible for the subsequent negotiations with Quebec but it was more politicals fear of losing Quebec votes. It was not really a fear of Quebec as all. It was the fear that the rest of Canada might write off the French speaking province.

The right to "opt" or "contract out" of joint projects which fell within Provincial jurisdiction under the British North America Act is not unreasonable in principle, whatever one may think of the results. But to English speaking Canada the Quebec attitude was being interpreted more and more as a gradual "opting out" of Confederation.

This was the basis of reasoning in Ottawa that, Quebec must be kept in the family, that a Canada Pension plan if it had not proven, as expected, to be a unifying force at least must not divide. It may well also have been part of the reasoning in Quebec City.

Meanwhile Canadians have a pension plan which they may like a great deal better. It will cost more for the next 15 years at least. It will be later in starting. The Government will be doing well if it can bet contributions started in 1966 & the first pensions paid in 1967. In addition, substantial savings by Canadians are involved which may be very important if Canada is to meet more of its capital needs out of its own rather than foreign savings.

The new plan has wiped out the last excuse for not treating the pension contribution as a tax. With the possible exception of the Armed Forces and RCMP where early retirements make it almost impossible to integrate with service plans, everyone earning more than $600 a year pays.

This compulsory feature for the self-employed will bring some grumbling. The farmer will have to contribute but only for himself but 1.8 percent of anything over $600 paid to his hired man. There will be one small compensation. For the first time a Federal Tax will be deductible from taxable income.

It is more difficult to justify other features of the retreat from Quebec. The family allowance deal by which the province will continue its own payments to families of 16 and 17 year old students and be compensated by Ottawa has no financial implications. It is merely a concession to what seems to many a unfair silly rigidity by the Quebec Government over provincial rights. The same can be said of the student loans that can now be administered by any province if it so desires. There may even be some advantage to this.

But, for the principle purpose of gaining a National Pension Plan, as well as helping Premier Lesage with his budget, the Federal Government has agreed to further abatement of 2 percent of personal income tax for the years 1965-66 and 1966-67, the last years of the present tax sharing agreements. Cost to the Federal Treasury will be about $60 million.

The Canadian taxpayer is, of course, in dividable. He has one pocketbook from which to pay taxes to Ottawa and the province. It matters little to him if, by paying higher Federal taxes, he avoids higher provincial taxes.

What does matter is the degree of essentiality in the expenditure. This is the primary reason behind the new Federal-Provincial tax structure committee. It is to study priorities in expenditure both on Federal and Provincial levels.

Ottawa's first answer to Quebec's demand for more tax revenue at the expense of the Federal Treasury was obviously "wait and see". An interim report of the Committee is timed for the end of the year and a definitive report as early as possible in 1965. At that stage further tax abatements might be justified and there would have been no loss to Quebec or any other province.

But Mr. Lesage had a budget speech to make and demanded that he be put in the position where he could give assurance of more revenue from Ottawa. For all this he has modified his own pension plan and promised that if he "opts out" of a shared cost program and receives compensation in new tax abatements he will carry on that program in the province for the time being.

But Lesage has done one thing more, which as importance could exceed both that of a National Pension Plan and more tax monies for the provinces. He has said that this compromise displays the true spirit of Confederation and he has shown himself willing to risk assuming in the Province of Quebec the mantel of Confederation against the extreme Quebec nationalists within & without his own party. If the compromise for tifies Lesage for this task, the benefit of the compromise will far exceed even the material benefits of a uniform national pension plan and the first steps towards bringing Federal and Provincial tax ing resources in line with their spending responsibilities.

While the Lesage demand for more revenues is nascrious in the public mind with the aspirations of the new Quebec, it is not fully realized that whereas in 1946, Federal spending was almost three times that of the provinces and municipalities together, today the share of spending of the provinces and municipalities slightly exceeds that of the Federal Government, although the combined expenditures of all three levels of Government represent approximately the same share of the gross national product today as they did in 1946, namely about 22½. Further, this trend to more Provincial and Municipal spending in relation to Federal spending is almost certain to continue.

Immigration to Canada totalled 92,000 in 1963, and emigration from Canada is estimated at 60,000 persons in the year.

Permican, a very high quality concentrated food made by Indians from dried buffalo meat mixed with fat, was used extensively by European explorers, particularly in the Arctic where it could be kept indefinitely.

THE DUSTY DAYS. Serious drought is threatening many farmlands in Alberta. Little snow during the past winter left fields bone dry in the spring. Soil drifting and dust storms have sprung up the province from southern border regions to the Peace country. Down Memory's Lane

(By Mrs. F. M. Cantlon, Hardisty, Alberta)

JIM AND JESSIE BLYTHE

THE BOYS RETURN!

Millie was beside herself with joy although her main worry now was whether or not the guards would be good to Brodie. She had heard and read so much about how the Allied prisoners were tortured and starved, that, although she realized some of these reports were mostly propaganda, still her fears ached continually for Brodie. She didn't enjoy meals, thinking perhaps Brodie might be hungry. During the cold weather, she wondered if Brodie had warm clothes.

So she contacted the Red Cross at Winnipeg, asking for instructions in sending food and clothing parcels to him. From then on Millie faithfully sent a food parcel one month and a clothing parcel every alternate one. Brodie did receive a few of these parcels, but it was discovered afterwards that he did not get all. Toward the last of the war all supplies were cut, and no parcels for any o fthe lads, nor even for prisoners guards were getting through).

However the head office or headquarters of the Red Cross at Geneva managed to get food parcels to the Allied prisoners every week. How they did it God only knows. This was indeed fortunate, as some of the lads who returned home after the war said they certainly could have starved to death had it not been for these God-sends. Even the prison guards were starving.

Incidentally the lads told us after they were home, that these food parcels from the Red Cross at Geneva which arrived every week regardless of cut lines, contained, among other items, a package of strawberry jam and a package of powdered cream. The lads stumbled onto the idea of mixing these two foods together and eating the whole lot at once. Withtheir stomachs in such a shrunken, starved condition, naturally the made them desperately sick, to the extent that food of any sort was so repulsive to them for a couple of days, then they could stand it until the next food parcel from the Red Cross arrived.

Food lads. We have an ingd of plenty (even during the war) save not the slightest conception of what those poor lads went through.

Brodie's first letter to Millie (after he was reported in prison) was so welcome she carried it in her bosom, next to her heart for weeks. Of course all letters were so heavily censored there was very little news in them, at least it told Millie that Brodie was alive and well, and that alone meant the world to her.

During these anxious weeks before Brodie was reported safe, another woman (from a rural district) had received word that her son had also been shot down in the same plane as Brodie had, and later this son was also reported in prison camp. So of course Millie and Mrs. Kirk (and (Lynton's mother) kept in touch constantly, comparing letters.

The days and weeks dragged on, with leaden feet. All that was important now to Millie and to Mrs. Kirkland were the too-far spaced letters from the two lads.

Then the wonderful news of the end of the war came. That earthquake. What celebrations all across the country from the big cities to the little hamlets and even in the isolated settlements.

The lads were arrying home by

BANQUETS, DINNERS & SUCH

Come Spring, the usual whirl of weddings, graduation and other banquets are upon us. Usually local ladies' groups are the hard workers behind these important occasions.

Most groups plan carefully — the food, the table set-ups, the kitchen help — but they must never forget the most important of all. At community dinners people are plating their health, and perhaps their lives, in your hands. Too often we hear of large numbers of people who become very ill with food poisoning after such an event.

Food poisoning of all boils down to lack of refrigeration or careless food handling. How can you avoid it?

Check these points

—Have you sufficient hand washing facilities with plenty of hot water and soap? and I don't mean the dishpan! Do the workers wash their hands often?

—Do all your workers wear hair nets and clean aprons?

Have you avoided cream foods, potato salad, cream pies and whip ped cream? Without proper refrigeration these foods are dynamite.

Don't stuff that turkey until just before you put it in the oven. Stuffing in a turkey that is allowed to sit overnight can cause food poisoning.

Don't add dressing to a salad until you are ready to serve it. Keep the dressing refrigerated, or use an oil and vinegar dressing.

—serve foods as soon as they are cooked. Holding foods for periods of time at warm temperatures invites bacterial growth — as well as harming the flavours.

—Don't allow foods to stand on tables uncovered.

—Don't allow anyone with a cold infection or cuts to handle food. This is a good way to pass on germs.

For Success in community meals follow these rules for healthy eating:

—Plan a menu that is colourful and will look well on a plate.

Imagine how the meal will taste and try to vary flavours and texture crunchy and smooth, bland and tart.

—Plan the menu so that all the food doesn't have to be handled at once — and too many last minute procedures (such as mashing potatoes, slicing meat, making gravy, setting up salads).

FARMER DAY AT U. OF A.:

While there is still space on your calendar of activities in coming months be sure and mark the first Saturday in June (June 6th) for attending the University Feeders Day program. Outline of the programme should be reaching us soon. If you wish one let us know and we will be sent a program when they arrive.

SIX STEPS TO HIGHER YIELDS AND BIGGER PROFITS!

The following six steps are recommended by W. Lobay, Supervisor of Soils and Weed Control, to reduce the heavy toll taken in cereal crops every year by annual and winter annual weeds. Mr. Lobay reports that in one test, conducted by the Dept. of Ag., an infestation of 100 broadleaved weeds per square yard reduced the yield of wheat by 50 percent compared to the control plot.

Faithful adherence to recommended good husbandry practices will give crops the best chance to compete successfully with weeds. It will also ensure that the crops are in good condition for spraying if this is necessary later in the season.

1. Use only sound, well-cleaned and treated seed. This seed has the best chance of early and even germination as well as the best chance of survival.

2. Place the seed in a firm moist seed bed. Pre-seeding tillage should be just deep enough to kill the first crop of weeds. Too deep tillage results in uneven seed germination & emergence which, of course, makes the crop less capable of competing with the weeds.

3. Use recommended fertilizer practices. Fertilizers help to stimulate crop growth which again means better weed competition.

4. It may be profitable to increase the seeding rate by as much as 25 percent on land which is heavily infested with annual and winter annual weeds.

5. Delayed seeding until 2 weeks crops have been removed by tillage has proved effective in reducing wild barley host & other annual weeds.

6. Be prepared to spray when the crop is in the safe and resistant stage and the weeds are young and susceptible to selective herbicides

The House of Commons at Ottawa has adopted a "children's hour" on a trial basis. It occurs after the regular 10 o'clock adjournment on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights. At that time any opposition member who feels aggrieved because the speaker has ignored him during the question period can put a Minister has not properly answered his question, has seven minutes to state that grievance. The Minister or his Parliamentary Secretary has three minutes to reply. Only three grievances will be heard each night. The idea is excellent and the performance may improve. Up to now it has been something less than adult.

MEMORY LANE

the hundreds. One day Millie and the Kirklands received word that a prisoner-of-war train, with their lads aboard, would arrive in the Winnipeg C.P.R. station on a certain day (in July) at 10 A. M.

Mr and Mrs. Kirkland, their 14-year-old daughter, and another son (who had been overseas 4 years) and had returned home just a week before, picked up Millie and her father, and were in Winnipeg by 8:30 a. m. The CPR station was literally packed with folks who came to meet loved ones. A voice came over the loud speaker announcing that the train had just pulled in and that all must stand back, leaving the railroads clear through which the lads would march double file, alphabetically. To Millie, her father and the Kirklands the suspense was almost unbearable as the lads filed past, so thin & pale — it was pitiful. Then one would spy their folks, or the folks would spy them, and they would rush into each others arms. Millie and Mrs. Kirkland became so upset and nervous waiting for their lads, they didn't realize that they were nearly sobbing out loud.

Then suddenly, there was Lynton in his mother's arms. In a moment or so, there too was Brodie.

Can you imagine the joy, the relief, at seeing their lads again? The excitment, the noise and hubbub in that station, with everyone talking, laughing and crying, bands playing, car horns tooting, train whistles blowing. It was surely a great and glorious homecoming for those lads who had gone through so much, that we here at home, might enjoy freedom.

POST OFFICE RELEASES DETAILS OF NEW MAPLE LEAF STAMP ISSUE

The Postmaster General, Hon. J. R. Nicholson, announced today that the special stamp issue planned by the Post Office Department for the 14th of May will carry the theme of Canada's Unity.

The stamp which is the third new issue on this year's program portrays three red maple leaves on a blue background to provide colour contrast. It will introduce a series of floral emblem stamps that will continue through the pre-Centennial years of 1965-66 and will include the official floral emblems of all the 10 provinces and the northern territories.

Mr. Nicholson pointed out that the design of three maple leaves on the stamp forms part of the heraldic device of the Arms of Canada, and appears as well in some provincial armorial bearings. The three red maple leaves were approved by Order-in-Council in 1870 as the official insignia of Canada. The maple leaf insignia is indicative of Canadian unity since it symbolizes all the groups which comprise our country and which are joined together in a common destiny.

The stamp, in the five cent denomination, will be in the large horizontal size. It is to remain on sale for several months after the date of issue.

'64 Comet – for people who have more fun than money

Model illustrated 2-door Cadenza Hardtop, one of the Ford Family of Fine Cars made in Canada.

Fun is admiring the sleek lines of a taut, trim craft. (The crisp, clean styling of the rakish Comet presents an ever-present invitation to adventure. Just cast off and cruise.)
Fun is sitting in quiet contemplation, with the surf swishing in and out on the sands. (And Comet doesn't interrupt your reverie when you leave. You're carried away smoothly, silently in genie Comet comfort.)
Fun is a visit to your Mercury dealer (to discover how economical all this fun can be.)

By Bill Smiley

IT WOULD BE HEAVENLY!

What would you like to find, most, when you go to heaven? Let's assume, for one wild, exhilarated moment, that we're all going to get there.

Some people would plump for a meeting with loved ones. This I can never understand. It's like a fellow who has served a life sentence waiting to be greeted by the warden when he hits the pearly gates.

Others, and souls, would be overjoyed if they could "just be happy." Not me. Being happy all the time would be a real drag. I thoroughly enjoy being miserable on this orb, so that when something good happens, my pleasure is enhanced.

Quite a few, who suffer from physical ailments, would be satisfied with peace and comfort. The insomniac imagines days and nights of solid slumber. The arthritic dreams of being able to scratch his opposite ear without feeling as though his arm was being severed at the shoulder by a red-hot iron.

Flat-chested girls would settle for a mammoth bosom. They forget that none of the rest of us would be interested.

Some shape I know would be perfectly happy to leave anytime if they could count on a golf course with emerald fairways and velvet greens, 18 holes a day in which they alleed not, nor did they hook, and a good game of poker at the 19th, with the bar handy.

Many sober citizens I know would be happy in heaven for ever afterwards, if they could be guaranteed (and get it in writing) that their wives (or husbands) would be in the other place, permanently.

Alcoholics would not only be in heaven, but the seventh of the same name, if their crock ranneth over, perpetually, and somebody else was looking after things.

A few millionaires, once they had admitted they couldn't take it with them, would be serene in a place where there were no taxes, no labor movements, no wages to pay, and no body asking them to donate to something every 12 minutes.

My personal fantasy is a simple one. I'd go like a shot if someone would promise me, unconditionally, a dark, swirling trout stream, impregnable to invasion by women, telephones and other nuisances.

I can see it now. Swift, deep, crooked, curling in a vast, silent, mysterious beaver pond, loaded with lunkers. I can hear it: the exciting mutter of a small dun just around the bend; the splash of a startled frog; the sudden, heart-stopping takeoff of a disturbed partridge, the whack of a beaver tail.

However, since my chances of getting to heaven are just about as slim as my chances of a personal trout stream if I did get there, I guess I'll settle, on Opening Day, for my old haunt, the Secret Place Where The Big Ones Are. Not a soul knows about it, except me. And the 900 noisy characters who have heard about it since last year.

Heaven, thou art distant,
Yet,
I would work like heck to get
There, if thou could condone
A stream for me—and me alone.

Capacity Crowd Sees Drama Club

KILLAM — On Friday, May 8th, the Drama Class of Killam Separate School staged a three act play entitle "Mystery in the Library."

DAYSLAND C. W. L.

(Delores Dolan)

DAYSLAND — Twenty-nine members and the director were present at the monthly CWL meeting.

New officers for the year took over at the meeting. The secretary read the minutes, followed by the report of the treasurer. Attendance card was received from Mr. & Mrs. F. Burkart for the February meet on their 50th anniversary. An invitation was received from the Lloydminster CWL to attend the convention to be held there this year. It was passed to send a donation to the National scholarship fund. The mass intention for the month of June will be for the parents of the district women.

Four circles are to be drawn up, with the four councillors as leaders and each directing a circle. Circles one and two are to convene the wedding dinner of Pearl Blatz June 6th. Mrs. G. Heinig and Mrs. D. Dolan are the two delegates to go to the convention at Lloydminster.

The president thanked the ladies who helped make the tea and bake sale a success. She also thanked the ladies who served at the John Bolt [illegible].

The business for next month are Mrs. R. Knudsen, Mrs. S. Lapins & Mrs. E. Lensing. Mrs. R. Knudsen won the attendance prize. A lunch was served by Mrs. F. Janssen and T. Gartner and Mrs. W. Gartner.

An old fashioned library formed the setting for mystery, intrigue and some first class detective work. Much interest was aroused by the unusual character Heinrich, coupled with a dumb-such policeman whose only sum in life seemed to be to eat. A brewing storm, maniacal laughter, the knocking out of a college president and the untimely disappearance of the heroine through a secret panel, all kept the audience in suspense until the final scene when a snoopy amateur lady detective unravelled the police force and solved the dark mystery.

Between scenes, Sister Marina directed gordon 1 and 2 in three choral selections which were highly applauded.

At the close of the play, Rev. M. McCarthy chose the Mother of the Evening, Mrs. C. Lewis. She was escorted to the stage by Gerry Fee and Paul Froehler, and presented with a bouquet of sweetheart roses and white carnations. The boys then ranged themselves around her chair and sang "Mother Machree" after which a group of girls from grades 1 and 2 recited a poem in honor of mother.

Mrs. Helen Kinzer was pianist for the evening. The play was directed by Mr. D. J. Remillard, drama teacher, and Miss Virginia Froehler, student. Fred Kuober was M. C.

Sincere thanks to Mr. K. Robson, photographer, Mr. Kellington & his staff, public school, Mr. S. Clough, Strome, A. Schaffler, D. Kinzer, A. Schnittler, Reg Fee, Don Terrenti, Mrs. Gerry Froehler for loaning their evening a huge success.

Central High Rams Hold Spring Training Camp

SEDGEWICK — The Central High Rams football team has been holding a two week spring training camp for the men who will be on the team this fall.

The training camp started on Sunday May 3rd and runs for 2 weeks ending on May 17th, with an interview at 4:30 p.m. in [illegible] charge. The game will be played at the Rec Centre in Sedgewick.

Coaching staff this year is headed by Ken Yates, who played with the Edmonton Huskies, and is now Recreation Manager at Sedgewick. Clyde Clark, who has worked with the team for several years, will act as backfield coach, and old stand-by Trever Chapman will be manager. Bob Rosendahl, a newcomer, will be in charge of equipment.

We've been watching the Rams as they slugged their way through five workouts a week, and the coaches are tough taskmasters. The boys deserve a lot of credit for the enthusiasm and desire they are showing. Out there rain or sun working at plays (and a lot of conditioning exercises too) and getting the odd tongue-lashing for their mistakes, but always coming right back out and trying again.

There are 35 boys out for the team this year, coming from Hardisty, Lougheed, Sedgewick, Killam, Mercna, and one from Galahad.

From what we have seen this is going to be the best Ram team ever and we'll be mighty surprised if they don't make the rest of the local league sit up and take notice. The only problem the boys haven't been able to link is that of obtaining enough equipment to go around.

The Recreation Centre Manager would like to thank all the bowlers for their excellent attendance and courteous gestures.

A Banquet for the league is being planned for late May or early June.

Casual bowling will continue until further notice. Reservations should be made by phoning number 75, Sedgewick.

The Auxiliary will serve lunch and help conduct tours at the annual Hospital Day. The Auxiliary will also serve lunch at the Senator Day exercises to be in Killam on June 1st. Mr. A. Schnittler volunteered to see to repairs for the school grounds backstops and [illegible] pile. The convention delegate report was tabled to the June meeting. Reports of the Regional Library committee is that while such a set-up would be an unconscionable asset to a large area, further meetings are continuing to determine whether such a scheme could be realistically financed.

Following annual reports the slate of officers brought in by the nominating committee was unanimously elected. [illegible] Mr. P. Kinzer; Vice-Pres., E. Knudsen; Sec., Mrs. R. C. Kinzer; Treas., R. C. Kinzer.

SERVICE IS ESSENTIAL!

As growing pains threaten to burst the barriers and force our towns and villages to expand beyond the old established corporate limits, it may be a time for considered reflection on possible future requirements and the best possible way to go about acquiring them. Little doubt now remains in the minds of most of us that expansion is inevitable for the progressive community possessing the basic incentives to attract new businesses and increased population. Enquiries must be answered with positive and concrete answers,along with courteous and inviting acknowledgement. The day is gone when people will hesitate to go elsewhere. The average home-builder or business man is going where he is invited to go, if a reasonable chance of success is visualized.

Village Councils and Boards of Trade must be constantly on the alert to attract new enterprises. This in turn attracts new people and families, and a steady growth is thereby maintained.

There are basic requirements in this day and age which are absolutely necessary. These include good schools, active churches, recreational facilities, modern facilities such as sewer and water, paved streets, inviting business premises. Along with these we might well list, livewire and aggressive people, friendly and courteous, who are not afraid to greet a stranger in town with a smile and greeting. It's a little thing, but is long remembered by a stranger in your midst. It is good to be known as the friendly town.

All the above relates mostly to the business of attracting people and industry to your community, but what do you do with them after you get them?

You must continue to let them know they are welcome. You must continue to give them the public services which first attracted them to you. These are necessary for continued contentment. But there is another element just as important and just as essential to continued growth and progress. It is the item of service.

So often today we hear complaints of lack of essential service. It is not good for a small community's economy if people have to journey to larger centres to get essential services which might well be rendered at home. It may sound queer to some, but when a person wants a repair, a facility installed in the home, a fixture replaced, or anything else for that matter, he wants it now, otherwise he would not have asked for it. When he becomes impatient and goes "out of town" a business suffers and the community gets an unfavorable reputation.

This newspaper is constantly admonishing people to trade at home. We think they should do this for their own sakes, and for the sake of the community where they make their living. But if they are to do this, then those offering services must be constantly on their toes, not only to render quick, economical and and satisfactory service, but seek means of improving the services to keep constantly in tune with the times.

LOCATION FOR A TELESCOPE!

The federal mines department is studying possible sites for a ten million dollar telescope, with the search being concentrated in the southern parts of B. C. and Alberta. The Dominion Obesvatory has proposed a large optical telescope of at least 150 inches in diameter be built in Canada. Because of the necessity for high altitude, the search has been centered in the mountainous regions of the two western provinces. It is fervently hoped that the Cypress Hills area in southeast Alberta will be considered favorably, as that region meets with most of the requirements — its altitude is the same as Banff at over 5000 feet, it is a region free of fast-moving weather fronts, is away from industrial areas and large population centres and, most of all, the Cypress Hills are in a region of low rainfall and clear skies, which are declared essential. It will be remembered that the Commonwealth Air Training program concentrated in south Alberta because of favorable weather and visability. The Cpyress Hills location has a great deal to recommend it. — Brooks Bulletin.

CO-OPERATION—NOT DISCORD!

It has been one of Canada's greatest misfortunes that periodically in its history, campaigns have been inaugurated having for their object the division of the people into rival camps divided by lines of racial and creed difference. Probably no one thing has in the past operated so disastrously to retard the growth and national development of Canada. Time and time again when a great national question was up for decision, the issue turned, not on the merits of the question and the national policy involved, but upon some petty race and creed cry.

Throughout his long career, both in private and public life, Sir Wilfred Laurier pleaded and strove for unity and concord among all classes of the Canadian people. Mackenzie King worthily upheld the same cause. Vicount Bennett once said, "He who sows seeds of discord and distrust in racial and religious matters, is a greater enemy to Canada than one who came with an armed force. You cannot develop a country by ill-will, hatred and contempt." The application of the golden rule in the life of a nation is quite as important as it is in the life of an individual.

Here in western Canada it is absolutely vital to the welfare of the country that such words be heeded. To an ever increasing degree the people of the west are looking to and relying upon co-operation and enterprise to solve the economic and social problems of the country.

The unfortunate fact remains that if the people of a province or community are stirred up and divided upon racial or religious lines, for any reason, the inevitable result is to create suspicions and animosities which make it extremely difficult to get all classes together in a true spirit of co-operation. These racial and religious campaigns have never got their prepponents anywhere, have never accomplished good, but have always resulted in harm. They are in no sense constructive, but are always destructive. Despite any and all claims that may be made for them they are the reverse of good sense & are open denial of that liberty and freedom which, it is our proud boast, is to be found and is guaranteed to all under the British flag.

Not only are these campaigns destructive of a real national spirit; not only do they retard national growth, development and prosperity; they render the task of government both federal and provincial, municipal council and school board, difficult and sometimes almost impossible, and in all cases more expensive and less efficient.

Western Canadians, intrested in the growth of their country, loyal to its interests, and committed to the policy of cooperation for the common good of all, should most emphatically set their heel upon the ugly head of the serpent of racial and religious ill-will whenever and wherever it may raise itself.

FIFTY YEARS OF PROGRESS!

Killam and District Co-operative Association is the oldest co-operative still operating in Alberta. It was granted charter No. 16 on December 8th, 1914. It was known as the Willow Hollow Co-operative and went under this name until 1921, when the name was changed to the one presently used. — Co-op Bulletin.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

BANK CHANGES COMING!

OTTAWA — Word here is that the Federal Government will accept several of the recommendations of the Porter Commission on Banking and Finance, incorporate them in a draft bill to amend the Bank Act & present it to parliament next fall. Initial reaction in Government circles was one of surprise bordering on shock at the sweeping changes proposed which if adopted in complete form would require a wholesale rewriting of the country's financial legislation.

Procedure to be followed by the Government will be to prepare the draft bill for amending the Bank Act. It will then be introduced into Parliament with the clear understanding that it will be referred to the Banking Committee for detailed study. This will provide the opportunity for interested parties to make their views known before final action.

The Royal Commission proposed the shedding reforms in the organization of the banks, trust and finance companies, insurance companies and stock exchanges. It came out strongly in favor of injecting real competition into Canada's system of lending and borrowing coupled with more protection and information for the public. The Commission found that some of the laws now in operation needlessly restrict the financial institutions, serve no purpose in protecting the public and in fact reduce the availability of credit to some borrowers thereby driving them into the arms of high cost lenders.

One of its main recommendations was to scrap the six percent ceiling that Parliament has so long imposed on the lending rate of the chartered banks. It was imposed first in 1907. First it was seven percent but then it was reduced to six percent in 1944.

The main recommendations were in keeping with the position taken by the Canadian Bankers' Association when it appeared before the Royal Commission early in 1963. What the government now has to decide is whether now is the time to go all out for competition, not control, in the field of the chartered banks.

One big bone of political contention will be the freedom for the banks to enter mortgage lending. The Royal Commission said this could open up new sources of credit for homeowners. It may make it easier and cheaper to buy new and old homes. That remains to be seen. It could also mean that the big banks will get larger at the expense of other institutions. The Commission contended that the size of the banks did not necessarily give them an advantage. The banks had lost ground in recent years to trust and loan companies and credit unions. Their profits were lower than some other private financial firms. The concentration of power in the banks will lead to heated debates in the Commons as members consider applications for new bank charters and the communal revision of the Bank Act.

The bill amending the Bank Act will probably be introduced late this fall session, receive first and second reading and then be referred to the Banking Committee for detailed study. That Committee would sit in the fall and winter and the same bill would likely be re-introduced at the next session in 1965.

The recommendations of the Royal Commission regarding National Housing Act mortgages will be studied by the government with a view to considering their adoption when the House of Commons studies the resolution now before Parliament respecting amendments to the National Housing Act. The report proposed the NHA interest rate be freed, not pegged by the government. This would mean the rate would go up which is contrary to present government policy to have NHA mortgages available at low interest cost.

The Royal Commission had some caustic criticism to make of funded pension plans and warned the government to go slowly and count the cost before embarking on its controversial Canada Pension Plan.

It suggested that an unfunded, pay-as-you-go pension scheme may be cheaper and more effective in the long run for the average Canadian. The Commission urged that the proposed Federal pension legislation take account of the price that will have to be paid in the terms of the financing of Canada's national development and that care be exercised to ensure that the country's economic resources not be strained.

The Royal Commission stressed that it was not arguing against establishment of a Canada Pension plan but it was emphasing the need of considering such a step along the way with the greatest care, particularly where the vital savings and investment process is involved. It suggested that under a contributory pension plan of the scale being advocated Canadians might be inclined to save less and spend more.

There are certain to be political repercussions over the sections of the Royal Commission Report questioning the proposed funded pension schemes. The Federal Government will be asked to answer the points advanced by the Commission when the Pension Plan goes before the Joint Senate-Commons Committee this summer.

Recommendations of the Commission will also be very much to the fore when the Joint Senate-Commons Committee on Credit holds its meetings in May. The Report advocated an expansion of Federal control over consumer lending to control interest charges and to relieve the consumer of the rate he's paying in interest.

The Report proposed stiff penalties for excessive charges and for failure to disclose effective interest rates. Its recommendations were aimed at opening up competition and giving the borrower a better break in the field of consumer credit. These recommendations are expected to meet with favorable response in Parliament, as are many of the others which a decade ago would have aroused strong and vigorous protests.

IMMIGRATION. Rene Lemoyne, Quebec minister of resources, announced his province wants more say on Canada's immigration policies, presently under federal jurisdiction exclusively. He added that Quebec wants more immigrants from France and French-speaking refugees.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

THE LATE ALBERTUS LEE

There are some people in life whom I just naturally admire. And among those are generous, beautiful women who are modest, old men who don't give a damn, and little kids who are shy.

Another species I always felt that I should admire was the Early Riser. "Surely," I thought, "there is something clean and fine and wholesome in a man who gets up early, winter or summer, and fares life with a decent taste in his mouth and a good appetite."

For years, accustomed to wishing with sheer horror, shrinking from the moment of truth, and finally wrenching my bed leg to the floor with both hands, groaning as I lurched to the bathroom, I felt inferior in the presence of the Early Riser.

Now, when it's too late to do much about it except publicly admit that I have always secretly hated the Early Riser, I learn that he's a big phony, that it's all a matter of metabolism, that my own species, the Late Starter, is just as normal, decent and wholesome. If not more so, bless us.

Some people, they tell me, are at their lowest ebb in the morning. They can scarcely climb out of the sack, and don't get warmed up until noon. By midnight, there's no holding them, and at 3 a.m. they are just getting into their stride. These are the Late Starters. Us.

They bustle about, gargling, rattling pots, and generally being sickening. They've done a full day's work by noon. By 6 p.m. they're getting a bit gray around the gills. After dinner, they drowse over the paper, yawn until the tears spurt from their eyes in rivulets, and totter off to bed at 10, full of hot milk & virtue.

No marriage is quite as grotesque as one between an Early Riser and a Late Starter. Sad part of it is that it doesn't show up until it's too late, because when people are courting, they're keen.

Thus, before the ceremony, the Early Riser, desperate to win his girl, will fight off sleep until well past midnight, even though his eyes get starry, his grin a bit fixed. And his girl, who normally shuns the sun until it is over the yardarm, drags herself out of the pad, with a supreme effort, to meet E.R. for lunch.

But when they've had a couple of years of that holy old wedlock, it's a horse of a different hue.

He wouldn't trade the arms of Morpheus for those of Elizabeth Taylor. She snarls that he's getting old, wails, "You don't love me any more!" when he starts to fade right after the dishes are done.

It's just as bad when the roles are reversed. After using everything but dynamite to get him out of the pit and off to work, she resorts to, "Come on Prince Charming. Let's see a little of that gay vivacity we saw at 2 a.m., when you were dancing with all the women at the party. Let's hear a little of that brilliant conversation you were promoting at three, when everybody with any manners had gone home, so that our hosts could go to bed."

No be busy and vivatiously loathsome way is the backwoods, and when he finds it, converses brilliantly with the Thing which faces him in the mirror. Then: "I'zgzhsh!"

It's not metabolic. It's diabolic.

Many Canadians first got telephone service when country doctors built small systems so local people could summon medical help. Many of the small systems still exist, somewhat known by the names of the doctors who installed them.

LIFE IS LIKE A PIECE OF DRIFT WOOD HEADING ASHORE

Reservations had been made previously at one of the leading Restaurants for a big chicken dinner for the boys and their folks. But who could eat? Even the lovely, golden-brown fried chicken and the strawberry shortcake with mounds of whipped cream had no appeal. Food seemed to be the least of their thoughts as they all talked at once.

So, very soon, they decided to start for home. Each of these young boys, neither one yet 21 years old, had gone through so much, had suffered pain and hunger, that now that they were safely home they wanted to forget it all, as no much as possible, wanting the old life of peace and plenty, with no worries, enough to eat, and rest and quietness.

The trip while after coming home they would not talk of all they had gone through, wanting more than anything else to forget it all. However occasionally when the two got together they would re-call some outstanding incident. They wanted no audience and wouldn't speak of their experiences if they sensed that someone was within earshot. But they loved to lounge around on Millie's comfortable couch-a couch there was a sofa and easy chairs, & all the time on the world to enjoy themselves.

One of these days when Lynten & Brodie were in the reminiscent mood the door from the porch into the living room was open. The lads were recalling some of their almost unbelievable experiences of their escape from the prison guards at the end of the war. Millie was lying on the chesterfield half asleep. If anyone had suggested that Millie was an eavesdropper she would have been shocked and hurt, but when she realized what the boys were talking about she felt she just couldn't move so she remained where she was and heard them as they recalled the following events:

The war was drawing to a close. Ward had come to the prison guards to vacate the camps immediately as the Russians were on their way. Stalag Luft III held the biggest number of air force prisoners of any camp in Germany,estimated at some 2000. The guards were told to divide the prisoners in three groups, 1000 to go west, 1000 south and 1000 to the north. Each prisoner was given a tin of powdered milk among a meagre bit of other rations, to eat while on the march. As they entered the Black Forest, several of the men decided to try to escape. Lynten and Brodie were among these, and they decided to stick together come what may. The other food rations were soon eaten, leaving only the powdered milk. They would lay low during daylight hours taking the cover of darkness in which to travel. Incidentally, built in the bottom of every Allied Air Force man's tunic, was a very minute compass. Thus, they knew in which direction to go. Too soon all the food they had were two tins of powdered skim-milk. They would wet their finger on their tongue then lick the bit of powdered milk off, trying not to use too much at once, as they had no idea when they would reach safety, if ever.

The only source of drinking water was some found in shell holes. The drinking of too much of this was dangerous, so Lynn and Brodie had the willpower to resist swallowing it, just wetting their lips. But now by one their fellow travellers fell sick and had to be left behind. Even though Lynten and Brodie were fortunate along the line, they soon became so weak they could no longer walk, but had to crawl along the ditches, yard by yard, towards the Allied lines and safety. Then the day came when they decided if anyone came along, be it friend or foe, they would surrender as they just could not go say further. Suddenly they heard a truck roaring down the road. When it drew up close to them it was a German truck. The driver sighted them and he and his helper tossed the two into the back of the truck and were just driving away when there was another roar, and about a dozen U. S. planes were over head flying extremely low. With their last ounce of strength the two lads stood up and waved. The driver and his companion, jumped from the still running truck, which slithered to the side of the road, hit a pole, and stopped.

One of the pilots had seen the two boys signalling so he landed in the field close by, came over, and, with the help of his men, our lads were rescued, eventually sent out to the hospital in Birmingham, England.

They were kept there for three months, fed, at first only on the whites of eggs every two hours until the muscles of their stomachs strengthened to take solid food.

This is the gist of what Millie heard. She wept as she thought of the suffering and privation through which all the boys went that we at home might have freedom.

After they had been home for 3 or 4 months, Lynten and Brodie became restless. The inactivity was becoming boring to them both. Neither one had had more than a high school education, so were ill-equipped to step into a position of any importance. Thus, the government was offering courses to the returned men, but as for Lynten, who was born and raised on a farm, farming was in his blood, so he thought he would like nothing better than to buy a farm through the V.L.A., marry, and settle down. However, he soon found that the injury to his back couldn't stand the hard work, so after three years, he re-joined the R. C.A.F. where he soon climbed to the distinction of not only being Radar Instructor, but is now a Flying Officer as well.

Brodie decided he would like to study law. So after passing his Bar exams he eventually opened up an office in Winnipeg, married, & has three bonny children.

And Millie? She is an old lady now. She still lives in the house her aunt Jessie willed to her, and loves to have her "family" come out and spend a few days with her now and again. She is so proud of Brodie's children when they start to talk and are taught to call her Grannie.

Subsoil moisture is good in the south; good to fair in the central area and Peace River area, but still only fair to poor across the northern area. Very little field work has been done, but operations will become general as weather permits.

HARDISTY TEEN TOWN TALKS

HARDISTY Friday, May 1 was the scene of a swinging dance in the Hardisty School Gym, with the music being supplied by the XTATIX of Camrose. A good time was reported by all who attended.

On Saturday, May 2, the Hardisty Teen Town held an Executive Conference. Executive members of Lloydminster, Wainwright, Hay Lak es and Hardisty attended. The group started the day off with a pancake breakfast at the campsite. Following this Mrs. Chevraux of Killam gave a very interesting and informative talk on "Parental Control Of Teens". After lunch Rev. Zwicker of Hardisty gave a talk on "Teen Influence Over Parental Decisions". The next speaker was Father Heffernan of Hardisty who spoke on the theme "What Place Do Teens Have in Today's Society". Following these talks a round table discussion, presided over by Mrs. Ed Stang, took place. The topic of the discussion was E. C. T. It was decided to form an E.T.C. with Hardisty as the central point for this year.

Following the conference a banquet was held, at which a few words of welcome were given by Hardisty president, Allen Nelson, and Vice-Mayor Ken Drever. The banquet marked the conclusion of a very enjoyable and informative day.

WHAT'S ON THE LABEL?

Almost everything you need to know about a herbicide can be found on the label, and the label and contents of the container should never be separated. The label gives information as to the weeds that can be controlled, the crops in or on which the herbicides can be used safely, and the amount of material to use & how it should be applied.

To a greater or lesser degree, all herbicides should be considered as poisons and should be handled with care to protect the operator, the crops and the ultimate users of the treated crops. Label approval implies that use in conformance with label directions will be safe to all concerned. The treatment of crops or the use of rates other than those listed on the label can lead to difficulties either in the form of serious crop injury or as a hazard to those who may use the crops.

It should be remembered that produce of all kinds is subject to inspection and sampling by the Food & Drug directorate. If any residues in excess of the allowable limits are discovered the produce can be condemned and destroyed, the loss being to the producer, the one who did not follow label directions.

The information on the herbicide labels has been obtained at considerable expense and effort. The label is not there to cover the can or to decorate the bag, but to provide useful and needed information.

If you use a herbicide you should make certain that you read and understand the label information before opening the container. Only then can you expect to obtain the maximum benefit from use of the herbicide, with the knowledge that you will not be likely to harm yourself, your crops or the consumer of your produce.

DON'T TURN LIVESTOCK ON PASTURES TOO EARLY!

Farmers are urged by O. Hrutvold, Supervisor of Alberta's Crop Improvement Service, to resist the temptation to turn their livestock on pasture early in the spring. Grazing cultivated pastures before their growth reaches four to six inches, can result in permanent injury to the plants and reduce production for the entire season.

The first top growth in the spring is achieved by the plants drawing on food stored in their root systems. A plant cannot manufacture plant tissue until leaf growth has been established. Therefore if livestock graze the pasture when the first shoots appear the plants must continue to draw on the reserves in their roots. This seriously weakens the plants & the pasture's ability to produce becomes less and less reduced if increasing as it would under normal growing conditions.

The avoidance of grazing pastures until they have established at least four inches of growth is one of the most crucial factors in pasture management. It will affect the potential production of the pasture for the balance of the season.

AS THE SEASON DRAGS. There was many a hockey thrill during the Memorial Cup hockey finals between the Marlboros and Edmonton Oil Kings, as above scene in Toronto shows. But many fans are criticizing the games because they are held so late in the season. Some feel there would be more interest if the games were over in April.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Ralph Roy Hobson who passed away May 14th 1963.

Instead of side by side,
But to all there comes the moment
When the ways of life divide.
The good companion of my heart
No longer here with me;
And yet in some mysterious way,
To me he's company.
Your name is often spoken,
My thoughts in silence fly,
To the time when you were with us,
Ere memories never die.

Ever remembered and sadly missed by his: Loving Wife and Son Lennie. 4 1 p

Gwendolyn Wilson Wed At Red Deer

SEIP — WILSON

A pretty afternoon wedding was solemnized in the Gaetz United Church, Red Deer, on April 4th at 2:30 p. m. when Margaret Gwendolyn, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Wilson of Sedgewick became the bride of Ray Henry, youngest son of Mrs. Helen Seip of Clifford, Ontario, and the late Mr. Wm. Seip.

Rev. D. C. Wilson performed the double-ring ceremony at which the bride was given in marriage by her father.

NEW CASE 4-WHEEL DRIVE TRACTOR DEMONSTRATION

KILLAM Killam Farm Equipment has scheduled a public field demonstration of the new 4-wheel drive Case 1200 Traction King tractor. The date has been set for May 15th at Spiller's farm on the south edge of Killam.

Designed to trim production costs on large-acreage tillage operations, the new Case 1200 with an 8-bottom plow will handle 60 to 80 acres per day, chisel plow 160 acres a day, according to Jens Lindseth of Killam Farm Equipment.

Killam Farm Equipment states that the new Case 1200 gets big 8-plow power to full use with 4-wheel drive, 4-wheel flotation and uniform weight distribution. Says Mr Lindseth, "All the power in the world won't do much good if you can't hold your footing. With all 4 wheels of equal size and all pulling an equal share of the load, wheel slippage is kept at a minimum. The advantage is particularly noticeable in loose soil, mud or slick soils."

To provide maximum maneuverability and precision control of implements ,the new Case 1200 features "4-wheel steer" with independent hydrostatic power steering of both front and rear wheels. The engine is the same heavy-duty 451 cu. in. Case diesel that has been used for five years in the company's big industrial wheel loaders. Operator comfort and control is "next door to luxurious" according to the manufacturer.

Killam Farm Equipment extends a cordial invitation to all interested farmers to attend the field demonstration on May 15th.

Palmer-Winter Nuptial at Greisbach Chapel

The Edmonton Greisbach Chapel was beautifully decorated with vases of pink gladiolas and white mums for the double-ring wedding ceremony of Miss Shirley Ann Palmer and John Geoffrey Winter. Bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Palmer of Killam, and the groom is the eldest son of Mrs. A. J. Knight of Edmonton. The ceremony was performed on Saturday, April 25th, 1964 at 1:00 p. m. by Father St. Armand. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Dorothy Sherwood, and the bride's four sisters, Jean, Donna, Becky and Sheila, sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a bell-shaped, waltz-length gown of white lace over taffeta. The bodice was designed with 3/4 length sleeves and round neckline with a v-shaped back. She wore short gloves of matching lace, and her only jewellery was a single strand of pearls with earrings, a gift of the groom. Tea pearl of flowers attached to a three-tiered bouffant veil made up her headpiece. Her bouquet was pink orchids and streamers on a white Bible.

The groom wore his official navy blue dress suit of the army.

Maid-of-honor was Miss Naomi McGowan of Edmonton, in a blue sheath dress with a net flared overskirt. She wore a matching fabric flower headpiece with a fly-away veil, and carried a colonial bouquet of pink gladiolas.

Guests from out of town were from Edmonton, Camrose, Galahad, Oyen, Viking, Seigerwah, Sirome and Forestburg.

BUSY SPRING FOR KINSMEN CLUB

SEDGEWICK — The Sedgewick Kinsmen are having one of the busiest springs in the history of the Club, says president John Pattison. In the past few months the Kinsmen Playground has been completely erected and is now finished, even to having a garbage can for the convenience of the children. This well-formed and equipped playground can be seen at the back of the lot at the Anglican Church.

The Sedgewick Lake is an annual project with the Kinsmen, and so far this year they have planted some 600 trees, done considerable more work on the dam and are planning to build new cement block bathing houses.

In partnership with the Carling Club, the Kinsmen sponsored their second Bachelor's Blago which went over successfully, and the Kinsmen share of the proceeds are already being spent at the Recreation Centre where they are building a Little League Baseball Diamond. The diamonds expected to be ready for us within a week or so.

We had our election of officers as they are as follows; Mrs. Olive Low, president; Mrs. Alvina Meindler, Vice Pres; Mrs. Pearl Hinkey, Secretary Treas.; Mrs. Violet Metz and Mrs. Alvina Parsons are in the sick committee and Mrs. Orma Thorpe is sewing convenor, with Mrs. Josephine McClements taking charge until Mrs. Thorpe is again able to do so.

We would like to thank everyone for their help, as without it we could not have such a successful Good Deed Club. We will look forward to seeing everyone at our annual Fashion Day Strawberry Tea, where we will also have our bake and sewing sale.

FUNAMBULISM!

Even in the comparatively short career of middle-aged people, it becomes evident that the world around has changed considerable in nearly every phase of human activity. An illustration of this change became clearly apparent the other day when a brand new edition of a dictionary came into our hands. A casual glance at its pages brought to light many words unheard of twenty years ago. It seems that man invents new words as scientists and the forces of technology progress, adapting them to the various fields of activity. There are many men, and women too, who are adept at coining words and phrases, which, after constant use, are adopted and incorporated into the official language of the day.

One such of these men is Herbert Lank, president of Du Pont of Canada, who, it seems is not afraid to venture into new fields of words and praises to suit the situation. If he cannot find a word to suit the occasion, he coins one, to make a point of speech more effective.

The story is told that in 1952 when Mr. Lank was chairman of the Executive Council of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, he delivered an address in which he said, "If ever a generation needed a disease instead of a cure it's Santaclaustrophobia!" He was making the point that more and more people seem to be buying the idea that if they turn their problems, their pay cheques and their independence over to the government, every thing will be provided. The validity of Mr. Lank's position at that time has been supported by subsequent events. It is quite obvious that there has been no epidemic of Santaclaustrophobia. The lack of understanding noted by Mr. Lank in 1952, that the government can only give what it has taken away, less the amount necessary to cover its overhead the efficiency of which may be open to question, is just as evident today. Indeed the present pension discussion leads one to the inevitable conclusion that the concept of government as a benevolent and beloved Santa Claus is more prevalent than ever.

In his address to the 53rd annual general meeting of Du Pont in April, 1964, Mr. Lank did not find it necessary to coin a new word, but he did reach out and come up with one which most people have never heard of. The word is funambulist, which means "a rope walker". Mr. Lank points out that this word seems to describe the chronic Canadian condition. "Circumstances" he said, "dictate that we be funambulists in walking the tightrope between what is desirable and what is possible. For example, although the American standard of living attracts us, we know that with one-tenth the population and one-fifteenth the national income we cannot match itimmediately — certainly not without sacrifices. In other words we can never expect to win at the numbers game, but I believe we can both survive and prosper, if as a nation we are cohesive and resourceful. Unfortunately, we often find it difficult to be so."

Earlier in his speech Mr. Lank suggested that the future of all Canadians is tied up in the crucial question, "How do we best keep theeconomy running in high gear?" He suggested that many fundamental problems demand solutions, and the basic one is the thorny question as to how we as a nation will resolve the debate now in progress between the federal government and the provinces, and among the provincesthemselves. The question as to the point at which provincial autonomy turns into national fragmentation, is a serious one and cannot be ignored. It must inevitably affect the plans of businessmen everywhere in Canada, and the economic consequences may become very real. Canadian industry's historic difficulty has been the limited size of the domestic market. Those who espouse regionalism are in effect saying that our already too small economic base should be split into several smaller ones. Could the smaller units support the modern technology on which high employment levels, opportunities for the young, and improved living standards rely? I doubt it.

I have sufficient confidence, said Mr. Lank, in the vast majority of our people who believe that if the thoughtful moderates in all groups will get up on their hind legs and speak their minds, we will be able to achieve an equitable adjustment of our relationships. If all Canadians are honestly prepared to work in understanding one another, whether in another language or in another province, I am hopeful that we will be able to work things out, not just to the liking of one part of the country, but for the benefit of the nation.

We may not appreciate the fact that circumstances have cast us in the roles of funambulists but this at least is sure: if we are funambulists we had better be good ones because poor funambulists are very bad insurance risks.

MAN'S HUMANITY TO MAN!

We have heard so much down through the years about man's inhumanity to man making things troublesome for friends and neighbors alike, that whenever the reverse is demonstrated it fills you with the realization that after all, in spite of repeated warnings by saddists, man is not altogether inhuman and still remains at least one step obove the animal kingdom. We were fortunate enough to be able to witness a practical demonstration of this fact last Saturday when we went out to the Max Klinger farm in the Bellshill district. Mr. Klinger has been ailing for several weeks and was unable to perform his normal farming operations. It was time for the field work to begin, with hundreds of acres to be cultivated and seeded. To the rescue came the Strong F.U.A. Local, a farmer organization, which group organized one of those old-fashioned farm "bees". All the neighbors and friends turned out with tractors, discs, cultivators & other assorted farm implements, and with some 25 outfits working in co-operation, went about the task of cultivating and seeding some 300 acres of land in one day. Of course the ladies were on hand with pounds and pounds of hot foot, and gallons of coffee to keep the inner man satisfied and contented. Such display as this, performed solely out of man's humanity to man, gladdens the heart of everyone and renews in mankind enduring faith in their fellowmen. The Community Press, while in no position to actually assist in the undertaking due to a lack of knowledge, did journey out to the scene to catch a picture of the action. These will appear in the next edition. The Klinger farm is situated about 15 miles south of Lougheed, 16 south-west of Hardisty and 20 north-east of Alliance, and farmers of a large portion of this area were on hand to assist in the operation.

For many years now, pessimists, labor organizers and socialists have been proclaiming that machines are making man redundant. Well, the matter of fact is they will find little comfort, or support in the Canadian Labor Force Historical Tables, published recently, which shows, that despite the advance of mechanization in industry the volume of employment has not declined over the past decade, or the past half century. Of course there has been a big change in the kind of jobs Canadians work at. Machines have increased the output of wealth ,which has been responsible for the vast improvement in living standards , while having little effect on employment.

Rally Round The Flag

OTTAWA— A flag, says the diction ary, is "a light cloth bearing a device or devices to indicate nationality, party, etc. . . . . .

It does seem a simple enough thing to define a flag, at least for dictionary makers. It's not so easy for Prime Ministers.

During the last two election campaigns, the Liberals pledged themselves to produce a distinctive nation al flag within two years of taking office. They are in office now, and have been for more than a year.

Prime Minister Pearson therefore has less than a year to run something up the flagpole which all Canadians will salute. If his time in office has seemed long to him until now, Mr. Pearson may well find the next year all too short.

As his self - imposed deadline approaches Mr. Pearson may find the flag - symbol of unity in most lands - will become a symbol of disunity in Canada.

His dilemma is that to do nothing about a new flag would very likely endanger national unity to an even greater extent.

Any man must cringe when caught in a vise like that, and Mr. Pearson hasn't exactly been rushing into a decision. A soft head is essential in a leader when on the surface at least touches the varied forms of Canadian patriotism at several level or points.

But Mr. Pearson has pledged himself to make a decision, a decision he plainly regards as momentous. In a sense his other problems pale by comparison. Cyprus, separatism, unemployment, balance of payments - all are complex and difficult problems which can only be solved by the action of a great many people and a great many different levels of authority.

But the flag problem is agonizingly simple. The Government must decide. It must produce a flag. It must stand on the issue's edge of public opinion when it does.

Mr. Pearson has been moving towards a decision, slowly, reluctantly, like a man advancing into the lion's den and peering into the shadows for a first sight of the beast.

At Kapuskasing, Ontario, in his own riding recently, Mr. Pearson told a Royal Canadian Legion meeting that he hoped soon to be able to introduce symbols of national unity.

He wasn't all that brave, of course. He didn't come right out & say that symbols of national unity meant a distinctive Canadian flag. But his statement was a big step without courage, considering that the Canadian Legion, or its leaders at least, is fear - square in favour of the Red Ensign as the national flag.

In his quest for a national flag, Mr. Pearson can not complain of lack of help. Canadians have been busy designing flags and sending them to the Government for years. Mr. Pearson now has at least 2,500 to choose from.

The suggestions have not always been helpful. Some design calls for a plain white cloth with the word "flag" on one side and "drapeau" on the other. Another, obviously commenting rather bitterly on the relations of Canada's two cultures, has a beaver sitting on a frog on a white field.

Those who value the Red Ensign highly, of course, tend to consider any move for a new flag as insulting and disloyal. It is not that. There is a deep yearning among many Canadians right across the land for a distinctive flag of their own.

Most of them, even those who resent the Union Jack flying over Ontario schools, do not resent the Red Ensign. But they do not consider it as the kind of national flag under which Canada should grow and prosper in the years to come.

The Red Ensign, true enough, has a semi-official status. It was designated in an order in council passed in 1945 as the appropriate flag to fly over Government establishments on appropriate occasions.

But it is not the official flag of Canada and probably never will be. It may be retained however for special occasions when the Queen, the Governor-General, or Lieutenant Governors are present.

The distinctive national flag of Canada will be something quite different. Prime Minister Pearson is known to favour the Maple Leaf.

It may be he has already decided on the design. A new five-cent stamp bears three maple leaves on a single stem. There has been a great deal of speculation that this is the design the Government favours for a flag.

It is probably no accident that the design is part of the armorial bearings of Canada already, and has been for more than 46 years.

This flag-stamp has already received considerable enthusiastic approval. There is a strong feeling that if it were chosen, it would quickly be accepted by most Canadians. As Creditiste Gilles Gregoire said, "Select it, insist it on the Peace Tower, and we'll salute it."

With the final decision will come a kind of relief and unquestionably a new sense of pride in nation. Admittedly it may be a bit like getting married for the first time at the age of 97. Nations usually choose their flags at the time they are born. We didn't, and it therefore becomes more difficult with each passing year.

Report From Parliament Hill

I believe it's important that a government try to have broad precepts underlying its approaches to specific problems. With this in mind, I think the basic goal of all agricultural policies should be to maintain and improve the position of Canadian farmers in the national economy and to promote efficiency of production.

As I said recently in the House of Commons, this is the principle on which we are building our policy on all stabilization prices for farm products, including the latest levels for dairy products covering the dairy year that opened May 1.

I believe that efficient stabilization levels should:

keep Canadian farm products competitive, both in price and quality, on the home market as well as

As Minister of Agriculture in Prime Minister Pearson's government, I have been pursuing this general goal for farm stabilization prices ever since we took office just over a year ago. We started in this direction at the beginning of the previous dairy year, on May 1, 1963.

At that time we made certain changes in the dairy support policy designed to bring production and consumption into a better balance. We also moved to encourage diversion of milk from butter production into the production of cheddar cheese, for which there was a stronger market than for butter.

I was pleased to be able to report to the Commons that this program was successful. Butter consumption rose during 1963 to 19 1/2 pounds per person, the highest since 1957 when it was 19.4 pounds per person. In total figures, domestic consumption for the last dairy year was about five million pounds above production.

Meantime, we have been steadily making export sales of surplus in the form of butter oil. It looks like it won't be too long before our butter situation is in almost complete balance, a marked improvement from the more than 200 million lbs we had on hand a year ago. This means, among other things, a sharp cut in storage costs, which at one point recently amounted to some $320,000 a month.

Meanwhile, milk production remains strong, returns to producers of milk for manufacturing were higher in the last dairy year than the previous one, and production of cheddar cheese rose to 134.1 million pounds.

This is 16 per cent above the output for the previous year. While cheddar consumption at home remained strong at about the 100-million - pound level, our export rose by 14 percent to 31.2 million pounds.

It was against this background of at least a moderate success for our first steps toward a solution of the persistent dairy problem, that we announced changes for the current year aimed at further rationalization of the program.

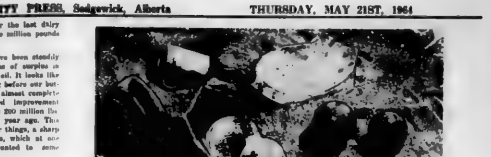
To narrow the gap between the support level for butter producers - which we left at 64 cents a pound - and the wholesale price at which the Agricultural Stabilization Board sells butter we reduced the consumer subsidy by one cent a pound.

This meant the Board's price rose from 52 to 53 cents a pound. We felt justified in taking this step to transfer that slight proportion of the dairy subsidy from taxpayers as a whole to actual users of butter because it's our assessment it will have no significant effect on butter consumption. Meantime, it will save the taxpayers an estimated $2.5 million a year while not depriving producers of anything they will just get that portion from a different source.

In an attempt to put the emphasis on quality production, while maintaining basic support levels currently protecting producers, we continued the cheddar cheese support price at the existing rate, but we changed the basis for paying it.

Instead of paying 30 cents per hundredweight on milk for cheddar production, we're now paying 3.6 cents per pound on Canada First Grade Cheddar. Since you get an average of nine pounds of cheese or a little better from a hundred lbs. of good-quality milk, this permits cheese manufacturers to pay at least the equivalent of the 30 cents per hundredweight for the previous year.

We don't had ourselves that we're out of the woods on this dairy problem yet. But we do think we're making some yards with a problem that has been one of the toughest in all agriculture, not only for Canada but for many other countries.



SHIPWRECK CLUES. These wine bottles, bits of pottery, cannon balls, slipper and long-stemmed pipe are all relics of a shipwreck off the south coast of New Brunswick. The articles per the date somewhere around 1775. But it's not known what ship they're from, or why she floundered. They're part of summer exhibit of salvage from the sea at New Brunswick Museum in Saint John.—

Dayland H & S Elects Officers

(By Dolores Dolana)

DAYLAND — On May 11th the Dayland Home & School held their annual meeting. A slate of officers was ready for the approval of the meeting. The following changes will be of interest to all. Mrs. Paula McNeil will assist in programing. Mrs. Joyce Malmo will undertake the publicity. Mrs. Dorothy Spilker is in charge of the social hour. Mrs. Elsie Coward, Mrs. Ethel Graham, Mrs. Betty Hill and Mrs. Betty Painter will remain in office. Mr. F. Schnell and Mr. N. Nickerson will continue in the offices of president and secretary until September. We hope that the parents and teachers will give these two capable officers their support in September.

Mr. Howard Carrol gave a number of helpful suggestions re awards. In Sept. the meeting will be asked to consider an Honor Roll for the Junior High School similar to the one now hanging in the hall for the high school students.

Awards will be presented to students in Sept. The student from gr. 6 to 12 having the highest marks in the academic subjects will receive recognition in some form.

The guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Anna Hilgartner, the Regional Director from Camrose, who gave anesthmatistic review of convention highlights. The link between home and school must be strengthened if understanding is to be preserved. With a Pet changing curriculum if parents are going to speak the same language as their children they will have to make a bigger & better effort to show they really are interested. For example, Have you tried to do mathematics homework with a student in grade 1 or 2 or 3? Sounds simple! Well you have got a surprise coming, unless you have kept up to date. One way to do that is to let the teacher teach you. One evening of learning could simplify what might be a numberless sing attention when Johnny says, "Help me with my homework". Make up your mind now and become an interested parent. Don't wait until your son or daughter becomes a drop-out.

Knox United U.C.W.

KILLAM — Mrs. W. McMahon was hostess for the Knox U. C. W. May meeting. The devotional period was led by Mrs. Peterson.

During the business session it was voted to buy a bouquet of flowers for the June 7th service when Graham and Stevens will unite for their anniversaries. Fifty dollars will be sent to the Dr. Graham "Holsteen Per Japan" fund. It is hoped that 400 dollars can be raised by the Killam-Stevens Charge for this cause. Members were named to operate the film strip for the children during services for the month of June.

The used clothing left in the local church will be packed and shipped near the middle of June. Please send your clothing at once. UCW members plan to spring clean the church May 27th.

In memory of a former Knox United worker, a donation was made to the church Mem. fund. A third of the cost of the redecoration of the manse was met by the UCW.

Mrs. A Child, taking as her topic, "Agriculture In India" described the primitive quality of their crops, and how our church agriculturists are improving both quality and yields.

PASTURE BLOAT TRACED TO CATTLE!

A discovery by two Canada Dept. of Agriculture scientists may lead to the end of pasture bloat in cattle.

Drs. McArthur and Milmore of the Summerland, B.C. research station, have traced the cause of the trouble to a protein found in legumes. Long known as Fraction 1 & most recently as 18 S protein, it had never before been associated with bloat.

The scientists found that the protein forms high viscousfoams in the rumen which trap fermentation gases. The animals, unable to get rid of the gases, soon become blasted. The discovery came after extensive studies of foams made from rumen fluid and pure proteins isolated from alfalfa. The viscous foams was produced only by 18 S protein.

Although other factors, acidity of rumen contents and the amount of pellets, influence the formation of foams, they are important only when there is sufficient 18S protein present to cause a strong foam.

The amount of the protein in various plants varies with species, Maturity, weather and other factors. "These are being studied to determine how they are related to the occurence of bloat," says the report.

Their findings should clear the way to development of an alfalfa variety that is non-blasting but which has all the desirable qualities of present varieties.

ONION MAGGOT CONTROL!

The adult onion maggot is a fly that closely resembles the house fly. It emerges from the soil during the latter par of May and lays eggs in the soil at the base of the onion plant. The young maggot borns into the stem or bulb of the onion. Small plants are often killed. Large plants are attacked again in late summer by a second generation of flies, and cause deformed or rotted bulbs that are unfit for use.

Control of the onion maggot has been attempted with everything from oil spray mixtures, arsenic baits, trap crops, to modern pesticides. even now the new insecticides are impractical in some areas because of resistance of the insect to the poison. Further research on the use of insecticides for those areas where resistance is common, is being carried on in B. C. and Quebec.

Two methods of treatment that give satisfactory control in southern Alberta on table onions are suggested for the home gardener:

1. Seed Treatment: Seed may be treated with two ounces of dieldrin (50percent wettable powder) for one pound of seed. The dieldrin is applied to the seed as follows: Wet the seeds in water, remove the excess moisture by shaking the seed in a cotton bag, place the moist seed in a container, add the required amount of insecticide and stir until the seed is covered evenly. Allow the seed to dry before seeding.

2. Furrow Treatment: Separate seed hoppers are used in large plants so that the insecticide and the seed are placed together in the soil. The home gardener will just a few rows needs simply to dust the insecticide in the trench along with the seed. Five percent granular dieldrin is used at 30 pounds per acre with five rows 16 inches apart (or 18 ounces per 1000 feet of row.

DAYSLAND COUNCIL PREPARES BY-LAW FOR NATURAL GAS

(Dolores Dolana)

DAYLAND — The regular meeting of the Town Council was held in the town office with all councillors and Mayor Pryor present.

Two men from the Assessment Department were present to see if the town is interested in a general assessment this year.

Ambrose Wojciechowski presented a petition for the extension of sewer on Sutherland St., north of Mitchell Ave. Council is to consider this.

R. A. Doyle of Battle River Gas Lines and Mr. Doyle of Commonwealth Engineering submitted a brief on a proposed Natural Gas Line from Hardisty to Dayland. In attendance also in this matter were Dr. Reist and J. Polehoyke of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Malcolm Robson and Mr. Stan Gould of the Hospital Board asked for a sidewalk from town to the hospital. Council had not designed for this but would consider the matter.

After discussing sewer extensions on Sutherland St. it was moved to go ahead with it.

Building permits were applied for by Ambrose Wojciechowski, John A. Shatti, Oscar Olson and Reg Petkerson, a plumbing permit was applied for by Ike. Urzinzar. The permits were all accepted.

As Council felt there was an increase in population in Dayland since last year, and as Municipal Assistance Grants are paid on a per capita basis, council appointed Mrs. Jean Ginter to take the census of Dayland. She will also bring in the supplementary voters list to date.

Councillor Wold, who is also coordinator of Civil Defence in Dayland, reported that the Soc. and se were at a civil defence meeting held in Sedgewick on April 18th. They was called to try and form a Civil Defence unit in the towns in the M. D. of Flagstaff. The M. D. would also be a part. Mr. D. Lee of Sedgewick had already been named as Coordinator for Flagstaff. It was received that a letter into a Civil Defence Unit with the M. D. and the other towns.

May 18th to 22nd was declared as Clean-up Week.

The proposed natural gas line was again discussed, and it was decided to give the By-law first reading and submit it to Mr. Doyle and Associates. By-law G126, to secure a supply of natural gas for Dayland.

It was moved that Council advertise certain parcels of land for tax sale. Date of sale July 8th.

Pony racing enthusiasts approached council in regards to a race track at the sports grounds. It was decided that the Parks committee interview Messrs Zerbeck, Robinson and McCarroll to see what could be done.

It was decided to have a general assessment in 1964 after some discussion. The sidewalk to the hospital was tabled.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

WISE WORDS FROM WILL

Everybody is writing about Shake speare these days. The only sour note in the fanfare of acclaim mark ing his 400th anniversary is a deep, rumbling sound that has many people baffled.

A few romantics claim it is the ghostly applause of ninety four centuries of playgoers, echoing down the years. A few realists assert that it is the ominous mumbling of 20 generations of students who had to memorize chunks from his works.

Personally, I think the discordant note is caused by the rapid rotation in his grave of the bones of The Bard, a shrewd businessman, as he agonizes over all those royalties he is not collecting.

Otherwise, things are going swim mingly as the critics and professors of English over and peek and poke among the magnificent debris, and the inane argument about who really wrote his plays wages once more with futile fury.

But I'm not concerned with that. There are enough people piddling about through his works, trampling poetry underfoot as they search for clues to prove that he was really Bacon or Marlowe or the Earl of Something.

We find him in the hundreds of of brief quotes that have come ringing down the years with their universal truths. He had to put them in the mouths of others, of course, but the man himself is there, warm, alive, grinning, scowling, scolding, soulful.

What could be more human, for example, than his pride in his own success? When the opening night performance of Hamlet showed that the play was a smash, he deftly inserted in the last scene, and on the spur of the moment, the joyful line, "A hit, a very palpable hit!"

We can see his amused tolerance of his wife's lack of muscle in another famous line. She'd been spring cleaning and had slipped a disc while trying to move an old trunk full of memoirs. "Frailty, thy name is woman," quipped Will.

We can sympathize with his hon rest rage (this was before dry-clean ing) as he scrubbed the gravy-stain on his new silk breeches and bel lowed, "Out, damned spot! Out, I say!"

What man's heart does not warm to The Bard's forthright suggestion, in Henry VI, Part 2, "The first thing we do, let's kill all the law yers."

Is there a housewife living who has not echoed, at some time, Shake speare's immortal comment when his wife came home from the brick-or with a stringy roast, "This is the most unkindest cut of all,"?

Many a man has wished he had the gift, and the nerve, then Will dissipated the night he got home from the pub, tiddly and tardy, and was confronted by his wife, her sis ter, and his mother-in-law. Did he say he was sorry and would never do it again? Not he. He roared, "How now, you secret, black and midnight hags!"

He knew men, as witness, " 'Tis ever common that men are merriest when they are from home." He knew women, too. "There was never yet a fair woman but she made mouths in a glass."

As this piece of research ends, I can hear a multitude of English teachers saying, in unison, "Pur this relief much thanks."

How Long Did It Take To Court Your Wife?

Did you just happen to see her, walk up to her, ask her to marry you and call in the minister . . . right on the spot —

PERHAPS NOT . . . it probably took a lot of calls, and trips, movies, flowers, candies, and a lot of putting-your-best-foot forward tactics. You had to "sell" yourself. She had to know all about you!

IT'S THE SAME WITH ADVERTISING of time . . . you've got to win their confidence . . . you can't "woo" customers with one Ad . . . you've got to "Call on Them" over a period and be convincing.

CONSISTANT ADVERTISING wins the customers if it's truthful, if it gives helpful information, if it saves shopping steps, if it is backed up with intelligent, courteous and honest values.

A. P. Crop Report

Moisture conditions have been fur ther improved by additional rain & showers. Surface moisture is good throughout the area and subsoil moisture is good at most stations. The cool, damp weather has prevent ed any appreciable progress with the seeding operations.

Alberta General: Intermittent rain over the past two weeks has provided good moisture conditions through Alberta. A small amount of seeding has been done in various parts of the province but progress has been negligible due to the wet fields. Warm dry weather is needed to allow operations to proceed. Most crops of winter wheat and rye are in good condition but some stations report that Streak Mosaic is show ing up in winter wheat, resulting in some fields being plowed under.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Draper, who passed away May 17th, 1963.

In tears we saw you sinking,
We watched you fade away;
Our hearts were almost broken,
You fought so hard to stay.
But when we saw you sleeping
So peaceful, free from pain,
We could not wish you back
To suffer that again.

Always remembered and sadly missed by her daughters — Nora, Vic and Family; Mable and Earl Bowden. 5 1 p

In Memoriam

In loving memory of my husband Robert Edward Kelly, who passed away on May 23rd, 1962.

Deep in my heart is a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest;
In memory's frame I will keep it
Because he was one of the best.
When I'm sad and lonely
And everything goes wrong,
Yet I seem to hear you whisper,
Cheer up, and carry on.

Ever remembered by his Loving Wife and Families, John, Leona, Les lie, Virginia, Norman, Roy and Families. 5 1 p

Down Memory's Lane

(By Mrs. F. M. Cantlon, Hardisty, Alberta)

SUCH IS LIFE!

Would you kind readers return with me back to the old Homestead District, where, after all, most of our memories are centered?

In those days, most of the Ranchers were large. There were 14 youngsters in one family in our district, in another 10, and in several there were 7 or 8 children. Mothers of the big families felt sorry for the mothers of less than 7. Now,as we all know, things are reversed. If there are more than, say 4 children in a family, folks are apt to remark sarcastically, "What dothey think they're doing? Trying to put into practice "The Re-birth of a Nation"? or some thing in that effect.

However the family of whom I shall tell you would well fit into today's standards of Quality.

There were two boys, one 12, and the other 14 years of age, and a girl of about 9, and of course the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson. (I shall refer to the parents throughout my story, as Stella and Bert.

Both Stella and Bert's parents had immigrated from England in 1906. (As always I am using fictitious names).

When Stella was growing up, she was the eldest of six, she just automatically was Boss of the other children, and it became the most natural thing in the world for her sisters and brothers to obey Stella's orders without question. A habit if this sort grows as a person, stays with them right on into adult life, even, as in Stella's case, after marriage. Thus Stella and Bert were not married for very long until Bert realized he had married a chronic nagger. But he thought, and hoped, the coming of children into the home would help to soften up Stella and her disposition. But just the opposite was the case. If possible, she became worse, harping and nagging, finding fault with everything and everyone. It was impossible to ever please her.

One evening after Bert had finished milking the four cows, turning them out to pasture, he was just in the act of taking the milk up to the house to be separated, when a car drove into the yard. After the usual exclamations, Bert said, "Well, I guess I had better get this milk seperated before it gets too cold. Sure wish the job was done and I was outside once again. Seems no matter what I do or how I do it, Stella finds fault. She isn't satisfied with anything any more".

The neighbor just stood and stared at Bert, really feeling sorry for him, as Stella's reputation as the "Nagger" was well known throughout the neighborhood. But for Bert to complain about it to an out-sider, ever though that outsider was a close friend! Well, the neighbor could hardly believe his ears, Every one knew that Bert had an awful life with Stella, but never before had anyone heard him complain. The neighbor figured things must be in a pretty grim state that would cause this outburst from Bert.

When they were first married and came to the district, Bert had worked hard at building up a real "short place". His house, made of brick, was lovely inside and out, with every convenience of that time to make work easy for Stella. He drove to the sand-hills North of Brandon with a team and wagon (200 miles round) and brought home a load of evergreens to help beautify the grounds.

Each year the crops were good, so Bert put up a huge barn to house his cattle and beautiful Percheron horses, of which he was justly very proud. His herd of horses at that time, numbered 18, all dappled grey. As he continued to prosper, he purchased the first new car in that district. But with all of this, added to a whole section of land, clear and fenced ,and not owning a cent, Bert was, of all men, most miserable.

He acquired the habit of slipping over to his brother-in-law's place across the road, just about every evening,after the chores were done. Lily, his brother-in-law's wife, was such a contrast to Stellhat it was like a drink of cold water to a very thirsty man, just to be with her. Poor Bert. Being sue a peace-loving fellow, he did enjoy those evenings spent with Lily and Jim.

Bert worried about Joe's careless business ways, and sensed their almost always financial straights. Joe simply was no manager, and a far worse business head. Joe was always a potential prospect for all the big swindlers who came along, even tho' he invariably had to borrow money to carry through a worthless deal. Lily never complained to Bert, nor to anyone else. She felt sorry for Bert, and figured he had enough troubles without listening to their problems. So Lily tried to be extra cheerful to make up for Stella's grouchings.

One evening Bert went over to Joe and Lily's place a bit earlier than usual. Lily was in the kitchen alone and crying is if her heart was broken. This was something unheard of before. Lily, who was always so cheerful. But when she told Bert the reason she was "saving so foolish" well, Bert was simply dumb-founded.

Next Week: Why Lily Was Crying.

43rd. Annual Feeders' Day On June 6th

The University of Alberta's 43rd Annual Feeders' Day will be held June 6th at Edmonton. Members of the Department of Animal Science will present progress or final reports on thirteen experiments conducted during the 1963-64 session.

Of special interest to swinemen will be the experiments on measuring backfat thickness in the live hog, the use of wet versus dry feeding for market hogs and floor feeding of market hogs. Besides these there will be reports on four other experiments on feeding, breeding and swine management.

Everyone will be interested in the experiments on the early weaning of lambs and on the control of the reproductive cycle in ewes. Using hormones, and restrictive daylight to stimulate fall conditions, attempts have continued to bring ewes to breeding out of season.

Reports on methods of beef carcase appraisal, feedlot performance of bulls versus steers and the breeding project at Kinsella will be of interest to beef cattlemen. In addition there will be a report on the response of feedlot steers to injected vitamin A, stilbesterol implantation and supplementation with protein, zinc and choline.

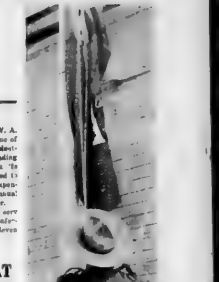
75% OF WHEAT HAS BEEN SOWN

Several weeks of almost perfect farming weather has resulted in an estimated 75 percent of the wheat crop being seeded in this area of the province. Except for a few rain showers in various sections that held up the work for short periods, the past two or three weeks have seen local farmers working furiously to get the 1964 crop in the ground. Anyone who frequents the coffee shops are aware that something is going on, for farmers are an averse to the proverbial bean teeth.

While the foregoing about describes the general picture, there are a few small areas in the local district that have had heavy rains and the work has been delayed several days. Also, while the average estimate is 75 percent completed, there are some who have completed wheat seeding while others are just slowly under way.

There was very little moisture during the past winter and early spring and it looked like a dry season. Almost all areas of Flagstaff reported that the land was blowing, even in areas of heavy soil. But in late April and early May there were good rains in all areas and sub-soil moisture levels are very good at present.

With the good wheat sales of the past and government 12th right now of more sales shortly, farmers need have no fear of growing all the wheat they can produce. Official talk now is that more attention must be given to increasing the yield per acre so even more can be produced.



R. C. M. P. Constable Neil Stanley is shown above, raising the Flag during the singing of O Canada, at the official opening of the new Federal Post Office at Sedgewick. Const. Stanley is stationed with the R. C. M. P. Detachment at Killam. — C.P. Photo.

E. M. O. Exercise At Providence Hospital

BAYSLAND — A Disaster Plan Exercise is scheduled for the Providence Hospital in Baysland on Wednesday, June 3rd, 1964

The Civil Defence Organization of Baysland, the Elks Lodge, Canadian Legion, Women's Auxiliary to the Hospital and R. N.'s in the district not working on the staff, will co-operate with the hospital and the "E. M. O. of the Province in putting on the Exercise. Mr. Carroll, provincial civil of the high school has generously co-operated in supplying twenty of the students to act as "casualties, as well as lending the auditorium of the school for the simulation of the casualties. The public may visit the auditorium during the simulation, but are asked to use the entrances to the auditorium and not enter the stage itself, so that the classes will not be disturbed. This part of the program will begin about 10 a. m., and so the "Casualties" will be simulated by 12 noon.

Representatives of several hospitals in the district are invited to attend this Exercise, and registration of these visitors will take place in the basement of the church of Our Lady of the Prairies at 10 a.m. This registration will be followed by talks by the Director of Emergency Health Measures for Alberta, Dr. R. A. Duncan and members of his staff. Films relating to Disasters & their management will be shown during the course of the day.

The Disaster planned for this Exercise will be an explosion at the school, and the "casualties" will be transported to the hospital by members of the Elks Lodge and their assistants. The Veterans of the Legion will act as traffic control & guards for hospital entrances. The Nurses will report to the hospital under the leadership of Mrs. L. Kapler. The Women's Auxiliary will be charged with the care of the relatives and friends of casualties, and will carry out this function in the basement of the Church of Our Lady of the Prairies. They will also act as runners between the hospital and the basement of the church, keeping the relatives informed.

The Disaster Exercise itself is timed to begin at 1:00 p.m. The relatives of the casualties are asked to exercise their ingenuity in trying to gain entrance to the hospital as this would be normal reaction in case of a real disaster. The general public and news men are also asked to take part in this so that the "pulsemen" may have plenty of work to do in the exercise of their duties.

Once the Exercise is officially announced as being over, the public may view the "casualties" in the hospital before they are taken back to the school to have their make-up removed. The members of the First Aid Class of 1963 are invited to attend and use these casualties as a review of their course.

Stanley of Killam, Mr. Jim Brown, Supt. of Postal Facilities, Mr. Hon McFarland and Mr. K McGregor of the Federal Dept. of Public Works, Mr. C. Smallwood, M. Yesteryear

30 YEARS AGO

(From the Press of May 31, 1934)

The Killam Sports on June 13th will feature the King of Sports, Harness Racing, once again.

The farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Gish, two miles west of Killam, was completely destroyed by fire last Friday noon.

A real day of Sport was provided to a large crowd of spectators at Daysland on May 24. The Legion provided the booth and children were given free tickets at the gate by the baseball club.

A baseball game between Sedgewick and Sunlight was terminated by a rain storm on Saturday evening. St. Luke and Sparrow were the Sedgewick battery and Ets and Chris tensen for Sunlight.

The 1934 Sports at Lougheed will go down as local history as one of the biggest and best ever held in the Village of Lougheed. The long list of sports was carried out without a hitch and the weather was ideal.

20 YEARS AGO

(From the Press of May 25, 1944)

The Sedgewick Y.P.S. after a long session of drill, staged their much talked of "Harvey Konnert' in the Hall last Saturday night. The show, directed by Miss Carol Tomin was filled everyminute from laugh-provoking foolishness to the more war time seriousness.

Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Watkins of Strome that their son Edgar has arrived in England.

The Northern Alberta Division of the Navy League of Canada is once more appealing to the public for gifts, of furs, or old fur coats, to be made into vests for Canada's Merchant Marine and the Canadian Naval Forces.

10 YEARS AGO

(From the Press of May 27, 1954)

An added feature at this years Hardisty Stampede will be trick and slack rope acts by Roy Seward.

The Lougheed weather report consists of two words: Rain and Mud. Sports called off.

Mumps has no respect for age, as a number of our older citizens are confined to their homes.

We hear Ross Grant has a new hobby, dodging big cement blocks which caved in on his barn.

The Strome Butcher Shop has been remodelled and is now all finished. It certainly has made a different looking building out of it.

JACK— In beloved memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather, James Jack Br., who passed away May 30th, 1962.

Nobody misses you more than we.

Here, in this home where he came evening after evening, to get away from an unhappy atmosphere, where he never imagined there was any discontent or contention, well, Bert just could not believe it, at first.

Lily told him that evening that the fact of Joe using all their spare cash for so many useless purposes had simply reached the climax that day when he sold most of his used cars to buy an old second-hand car that was such a wreck, it would not even start. And, further-more, it needed all new tires.

Bert knew that Joe was getting deeper into debt all the time, but never thought for a minute that things had reached the stage where Joe would sell his used wheels to satisfy some silly buying urge.

Joe was out behind the house tinkering with this old car, so what would be more natural than that Bert would try to comfort poor L. y?

From then on, (Now that the "Cat was out of the bag", and Lily knew that Bert was aware of her's and Joe's troubles,) Bert lost no opportunity to see Lily to offer her comfort and consolation.

This sort of clandestine arrangement could not last forever, and the inevitable results followed. It was in the Fall of the year, that Bert, as always, took off a bumper crop. Poor Joe's crop, (What there was of it,) was good, too, but he had sold so much of his seed he had very little left to sow that Spring. But most of the proceeds from what he did harvest had to be used to pay the Bank Loans.

Bert and Lily had laid their plans carefully, as they met evening after evening. If either Elella or Joe suspected any sort of order, they never mentioned it.

Then suddenly, one evening in late October, Bert announced to his family that he thought he would take a trip to India where he had relatives living. The Uncle had written, a while back, asking Bert to come out and give them a visit. This was just what Bert needed as an excuse to get away. But what about Lily? What excuse could she make? She hinted a few times to her family, (She had three boys, age two and one half to twelve years), that she would just love a holiday of at least a month to go to her sister's home in Calgary. She met considerable opposition at first, especially when she made it understood she did not want to take the youngsters with her, NOT EVEN THE BABY.

However, she finally wore Joe down, and he managed to rake up the train fare, and Lily was away to Calgary.

Bert made sure everyone heard of his plan to go to India for a visit for the winter, but at the same time, his conscience bothered him for doing such an abominable thing to his family. So he had papers drawn up to the effect that he was at least, leaving his family in comfortable circumstances. He left EVERYTHING, farm, equipment, horses, cattle, everything he had worked so hard for, to his family, taking only the money he had in the bank for himself. (Even at that, he did leave around $1,000 cash for them, in case they needed it before the next year's crop could be harvested).

The neighbors wanted to hold a farewell party for Bert, but Stella put up such a fuss about it, they decided to call it off.

Bert going away didn't disrupt the Jachers household too much, for poor old Joe was having his own time trying to look after the baby, who was at the age when he was hardest to look after, send the other two lads off to school with their lunch each day, as well as doing the chores. He was sorry he had consented in letting Lily go, and was counting the days when the month was up, and she would be home again, (as he thought).

I am sure you know what followed. One month passed, and no Lily. When six weeks went by, and not even a letter from her, Joe wrote to Lily's sister in Calgary, telling her to send Lily home right away, as it was far too cold, by then, for Joe to take the baby out with him while he did chores, hauled feed, etc. And Stella, although she knew full well the difficulties her brother was having, and what he had to contend with, never once did she offer to help.

Lily's sister wrote right back, saying she had been NOTHING of Lily, and needed quite quiet about the whole matter. Joe, in his slow way, did not grasp the significance of the situation at first. However, he went over to see Stella that evening, feeling he must confide in someone. (Although, to be truthful, he didn't expect help or sympathy from that quarter, at all).

Never-the-less, Joe showed Stella the letter he had received from Lily's sister, and after reading it, Stella said, "I haven't had a scratch from Bert, either, SO WHAT?" Stella did not have the address of Bert's uncle in India, so had no way of contacting Bert, even if she had wanted to.

Winter came and went, Christmas passed, and still no word from either Bert or Lily. By this time both stella and Joe knew in their hearts what the neighbors had suspected all the time. Bert and Lily were together somewhere — but where no one had the slightest idea.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

False Security

OTTAWA— The Canadian economy has embarked on the longest upswing in the postwar period. Year by year since 1960 Canada's economy has outpaced that in the United States.

The level of Canadian unemployment in Canada, which at the turn of the present decade was the highest in the industrialized world, has fallen substantially below that south of the border. For the balance of this year, at least, the outlook is for continued growth of the economy.

Bright as the picture looks now, there is a cloud on the horizon no bigger than a man's hand that could spell trouble in the years to come.

Strange as it may seem at first glance, there are some economists in the nation's capital who are concerned because unemployment has fallen so much more substantially in Canada than in the United States despite a very much larger growth in the labour force.

What it may portend is that Canada is falling behind in the competitive race, even though the fact is still observed by the temporary advantages which it has gained from devaluation of the Canadian dollar in mid-1962.

Late in 1960, the number of Canadians without jobs rose to a postwar peak of 7.9 per cent of the total labour force when account is taken of seasonal factors. About the same time the level south of the border stood at 6.9 per cent.

In the intervening months, the seasonally adjusted figure on unemployment in relation to the labour force has fallen to 4.6 per cent in this country, while across the line it has never gone below 5.4 per cent.

This very substantial improvement in the Canadian labour picture has taken place despite the fact that the number of people entering the labour market in search of jobs in Canada has been very much higher than in the United States.

Last March, for example, the number of Canadians in the labour force rose by 3.3 per cent over the level of a year ago, while in the United States the increase amounted to only 1.6 per cent. The level of employment in Canada was up by an amazing 5.2 per cent in March over 1963, but in the United States the increase was only two per cent.

So what is all the concern about? A few more figures are necessary to tell the story.

Between 1961 and 1962, employment in manufacturing industries rose by 3.3 per cent in the United States, 4 per cent in Canada. The value of goods produced by these industries rose by 6.2 per cent in the United States, only 7.8 per cent in Canada. On the basis of output per worker, production rose by 4.7 per cent across the line, compared to 3.8 per cent here.

In 1963, employment rose very much faster in Canada than the U.S. 2.7% against 1%. Output increased by 5.6% and 4.1% respectively.

But the critical fact is that in terms of the increase in manufacturing production per employee, the United States had a rate of 4.1%, against only 2.8% in Canada. In other words, the increase in the amount of goods turned out by one worker in the U.S. last year was more than one-third greater.

While the situation is still far from clear, what these figures may indicate is that the United States has been achieving a substantially higher rate of output per man because it has gone considerably further in introducing automation.

Canadian industry has taken on more men in order to meet the rising demand for their goods at home and abroad.

If Canada's economy is booming and more men are being employed than in the United States, why then, it might be asked, shouldn't Canadians count it among their blessings?

The fear of some economists is that Canadians are lulled into a feeling of false security. The reality may be that they are falling behind in the world-wide race to increase efficiency of production and sell down south.

If Canada is falling behind, why is it that its economy is still booming, the sales of automobiles and homes and farms still rising rapidly at home and abroad?

The answer only is in the fact that Canadian producers are still enjoying the advantage that were produced by devaluation of the Canadian dollar to 92 1/2 cents in terms of U.S. currency nearly two years ago. This is an advantage, however, that can be continually eroded by increasing efficiency of production in the United States and other countries.

The day could come when the advantage of devaluation has been completely nullified by higher prices in Canada than abroad. If and when that day comes, the demand for Canadian goods will taper off, the wheels of industry will slow down and unemployment will again increase.

Three and four years ago, when the Canadian economy was still in the midst of an economic slump dating back to mid-1957, there was widespread concern voiced by many influential figures about the state of Canadian manufacturing industry.

There was a growing realization that Canadian companies in many fields were hampered by heavy costs because the limited size of the Canadian market and the excessive number of firms within many industries made it impossible to obtain the advantages of large scale production enjoyed in the United States.

Many authorities warned that steps must be taken to encourage Canadian companies to specialize so that they could obtain longer runs and greater efficiency.

With the revival of the economy over the past few years, however, most of the voices that were calling for a drastic re-organization of Canadian industry have been stilled.

But the fundamental weaknesses that were seen to exist in the economy in 1960 and 1961 may still be present today, hidden for the time being by the stimulating effect of devaluation.

By the time this peg pull has worn off it may become evident that the much faster introduction of automation in the United States has further widened the margin of advantage that results from large-scale production.

An ever-gloomy picture? Perhaps

Dianne Nordstrom Wed At Bethania Church

HUDLT — NORDSTROM

A lovely spring wedding took place on Saturday, March 28th at 2:30 p.m. in the Bethania Lutheran Church, Sedgewick, when Dianne Carol, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nordstrom of Sedgewick and Gordon Donald Hudlt, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hudlt and the late Donald Hudlt of Camrose were married, Rev. A. Herstad performed the ceremony.

To the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. Rolf Jacobsen, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, radiant in a floor length gown of white nylon tulle over bridal satin, styled with long lily point sleeves. The form fitted, lace trimmed bodice was embroidered with seed pearls and tiny stones of sirconi bornalia. The brides finger tip veil was held in place by an antern bertalia trimmed crown. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Attending as matron of honor was Evelyn Bradley with Janet Hudlt and Mary Ann Bjos as bridesmaids. The bridesmaids wore identical dresses of true blue, deep lurire satin with matching head-dress & white accessories. They carried cascade bouquets of white and yellow mums.

Mrs. Arlene Gascoyne

Attending the groom was his cousin, Fred Hudlt, with Ronald Hudlt and Wayne Nordstrom acting as ushers.

While the couple knelt at the altar, Mr. Rolf Jacobsen sang, "O Promise Me" and during the signing of the register he sang "When He Gave Me You".

The brides mother chose a pink linen dress with an over-jacket of pink and white lace with white accessories and a corsage of pink mums.

Immediately following the wedding, a reception was held in the church basement for 90 guests.

The brides table was laid with a hand woven cloth brought from Sweden by her grandfather, Mr. Peter Nordstrom and was centered by a three tiered wedding cake baked by the brides mother and decorated by the groom's mother.

Rolf Jacobson was emcee. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Fred Sparrow, to which the groom ably responded.

For her going away costume the bride chose an aqua bouclo tex perce suit with white accessories & wore a corsage of pink roses.

KINETTE CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS FOR NEW YEAR

SEDGEWICK — The Kinette club held their monthly supper meeting with all but three members present.

During the past year the Kinette Club has been fairly active under president Eldred Tindall. They have catered to three Kinsmen Dances, to the Kinsmen fall term contest and to Sheila Armstrong's wedding.

A number of tables were made by the Kinettes with help from the Kinsmen, to be donated to the Town Hall for the use of any organization desiring them. The annual rummage sale was well supported this year & the Club thanks everyone who helped in any way. It was decided to give prizes of lawn ornaments for the nicest lawn and garden in town. Judging will take place during the month of July.

Mrs. Arlene Gascoyne

The young people of today are tomorrow's political leaders. On their shoulders falls responsibility for which they are, in most respects, unprepared. It is the aim of the Canadian Young Social Creditors to produce men and women armed with the knowledge necessary to compete in politics. It is my belief that only through Social Credit can some order be produced from today's governmental chaos. I am prepared to educate young people in this end. Together we can study and learn.

We are a united body and only if we have a common purpose can we remain so. I can predict a year of fun and fellowship should I be elected, with plans to expand the public knowledge of our activities. We need to have the whole constituency and province aware of us. I ask, Young Social Creditors, for your vote.

MORE "OUTERS" NEEDED?

It used to be that cattlemen looked down their noses at the "in-and-outers" in the cattle feeding business, but according to Harold Breimyer, U.S.D.A., the "in-and-outers" brought stability to feeding. In Breimyer's opinion, the cattle business probably needs nothing so much right now as it needs a few more "outers".

Because of the huge investment required by today's cattle feeding operations, most farmers try to keep their feedlots going at near capacity at all times regardless of cattle prices. The present over-expansion of feeding facilities tends to force each feeder to bid more vigorously for replacement cattle, than he would if he could sit out a season.

With cattle feeding becoming less of a sideline and more of a specialty enterprise there is a tremendous pressure to keep feeding operations going at full tilt even in periods of falling prices.

Clyde Clarke Heads Football League

At the annual meeting of the East Central High School Football League a new executive was formed. Mr. Clyde Clarke of Sedgewick was elected president. Mr. Trevor Chapman as secretary and Mr. Bob Rosscrush treasurer. There is a possibility of three new teams entering this year, as Wainwright, Concordia College & St. John's College will be next year's hopefuls.

The coming season looks like it is going to be the best, and we hope that the readers of these articles will support the Central High Rams.

Doreen Cotton Wed At Killam Baptist

KILLAM — A lovely spring wedding took place in the Killam Baptist Church on Saturday, April 25th, uniting Miss Doreen Cotton, twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Cotton, and Merlin Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reg Johnson, Wetaskiwin. The evening candlelight ceremony was performed by Rev. Hans Mattson of Ebenezer Baptist Church in Wetaskiwin, assisted by Rev. Grynoloski of Killam.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a semi-full length gown of French crystal over peau de soie, with a front panel of lace styled with lily-point inner-trimmed sleeves, and a train of French crystal and lace. She wore a bouffant tiered shoulder-length veil, which was held in place by a wedding band headpiece of matching fabric and lily of the valley. She carried a bouquet of four yellow orchids surrounded by lily of the valley on a white Bible.

Attendants of the bride were Mrs. Donna Reinhart of Stony Plain and twin sister of the bride, as matron of honor, and Mrs. Margaret Lewis of Killam, bride's sister. Their identical sheath gowns styled similar to the bridal gown, were of yellow crystal organza over peau de soie with a panel of white lace down the front, and a train of crystal organza. They wore lace gloves, and their matching fabric wedding band head-pieces with white and yellow daisies, held the veils in place. They carried bouquets of white and yellow daisies.

Lynn Reinhart acted as flower girl and was dressed in yellow peau de soie with overskirt of white lace, and a headpiece bow of lace over peau de soie. She carried a white umbrella basket of lily of the valley, white and yellow daisies, and yellow tea roses. Ring bearer, Michael Reinhart, wore a white suit.

Attending the groom were his brothers Allan and Conrad Johnson. Ushers were Wayne Cotton & Dennis Johnson. Soloist, Dr. Lawrence Verwoyer of Edmonton, sang Thanks Be To God and Wedding Prayer.

The mother of the bride chose an organza over lace sheath dress and suit ensemble with white accessories, and a corsage of yellow tea roses & white stephanotis and cymbidium orchids.

The mother of the groom wore a beige linen suit with beige accessories, and yellow tea roses and white stephanotis corsage.

The altar was adorned with candle shrees decorated with lily of the valley and two large bouquets of white and yellow daisies, roses and delphiniums. Candles with lily of the valley were placed in the windows & on the piano and organ. The guest pews were marked with lily of the valley. A congregational hymn The Lord's My Shepherd, was sung during the ceremony.

A reception for 200 guests followed in the Elks Hall, and was served by 11 young couples who were the friends of the bride and groom. The bridal table was centered with a 3-tier wedding cake, baked by the mother of the bride, and decorated with yellow roses and daisies.

Dr Lawrence Tarnavey acted as M. C The toast to the bride was proposed by Ralph Sorenson. Miss Esther Dreiger, of Edmonton was in charge of the guest book. The program consisted of a speech by Mr. J. A. Wiegelaar of Wetaskiwin and a duet by Doris and Earl Pontzen, a solo by Rev. Mattsson and trios by Doris York, Esther Dreiger & Howard Pearson.

Out of town guests were from Vancouver, Lethbride, Red Deer, Stony Plain, Rimbey, Wetaskiwin.

Telegrams were read from the Alberta members of God's Invasion Army, Miss Ann Zakimoto, of Vancouver, and the staff of Wetaskiwin Municipal Hospital.

For travelling the bride donned a turquoise wool suit, with white accessories and a corsage of yellow orchids from the bridal bouquet.

Grade Nines At Merna Graduate

MERNA — The gymnasium of the Merna School was suitably decorated for the graduation exercises of the grade nine students, on the evening of May 28th. Six silhouettes of the grads, with red letters "Grads of 64" covered one wall, and the stage was decorated with red and white streamers. The 1964 Graduands are, Eileen Armitage, Marion Pauhe, Shiela Cameron, Gloria Harris, Donna Boldt and Ken Glover. We are sorry Donna Boldt was unable to be present due to illness.

The program opened by singing O Canada, with Clifford Blanhagen at the piano. A toast to the Queen was proposed by M. C. Ken Oliver, followed by a prayer by Rev. Lewis of the United Church.

Eileen Armitage was presented with a picture by Mr. Hillman, for receiving first prize in an essay contest on her recent visit to the Provincial Legislative Buildings.

The M. C. then called on the principal Mr. Sparks, who congratulated the students, and gave a few suitable remarks. Everyone joined in a toast to the Graduands. Mrs. H. Armitage replied to the toast to the parents, given by Marion Peake. Toast to the bus drivers was given by Gloria Harris, and Mrs. Andy Anderson responded. Gloria Harris presented the toast to the teachers, and Mrs. Lauty replied. A musical selection by Daisy Anderson was enjoyed by all present.

Tables were cleared to prepare for the Grand March, played by Elaine Simpson, in which the Grads marched single file to take their places on the stage. Sheila Cameron traced the six students through the nine years at Merna, and related many humorous and serious incidents. Ken Bowness, grade 8, went into dreamland and saw the grads in 1974. Eileen Armitage was chosen to deliver the Valedictory, after which Mr. Sparks presented each grad with a scroll.

The guest speaker, Mr. Stein of Forestburg, gave a very interesting address to students and parents.

A trio "Farewell To You," by the grade six girls was followed by God Save The Queen. A delicious lunch was enjoyed.

A. P. Crop Report

Local — Light showers in the southern part of this area have maintained good moisture conditions and up to an inch of rain in the northern portion has resulted in improved moisture supplies. Wheat seeding is completed at some points and is well behind at the Rec Centre grounds.

Seeding of the coarse grains has been delayed by cool, damp weather but is getting under way again.

General — Precipitation during the week has consisted of scattered showers in the south, light rain in central Alberta, increasing to one inch in the Edmonton area and up to 2 inches in the northern part of the Peace River District. In this far northern area seeding has been delayed and only a small percentage has been completed. To the east of the province ,wheat seeding is near top completion and coarse grain seeding is well advanced. Strong winds in the southern part of the area have caused some drifting. Straw Mosaic in winter wheat, mentioned in an earlier report, has developed extensively, and many fields have been plowed under.

BAPTIST CHURCH

On Thursday night a group from Vancouver Bible Institute, consisting of Dr. Jonson, a teacher, and a mixed quartet, were in charge of the service. The testimonies and vocal numbers were greatly appreciated. Dr. Jonson's message challenged the young people to yield themselves to God, and the parents to surround them with a veil of prayer.

We extend our best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Grteene Davidson, Ruth Brookie whose wedding took place in the church on Saturday.

Rev. Grynashoki attended the service at the Drayton Valley Baptist Church on Sunday. As an executive member of the Alberta Conference, he was asked to attend for the purpose of this church joining the Baptist General Conference. In his absence, Ken Penner was the Sunday morning speaker and soloist. William Spady of Wainwright was the guest speaker for the Sunday evening service. A special number by his son Paul Spady was enjoyed.

Marketing Board Vote Postponed

A meeting of a Cabinet committee with the Joint A.F.A.-U.F.A. Hog Marketing committee was held in Edmonton on May 27th. It was generally agreed that a serious problem exists in the marketing of hogs, and that joint studies should be made of the procedures & powers of the Marketing Agricultural Products Act. It was therefore agreed mutually that the Hog Marketing Plan Plebiscite would be deferred.

The Alberta Hog Marketing committee met again later, and issued this statement: While the proposed plebiscite has been deferred, this does not mean that the marketing board idea has been dropped.

On the contrary, it is the intention of the Hog Marketing committee that a postponement will be used to give time to re-draft, and develop the marketing board plan in the light of producer criticism and possible changes in the Agricultural Products Marketing Act.

It is hoped that this re-draft will be a more workable, and more acceptable basis for hog producers to go ahead with setting up a marketing agency in Alberta which can do the kind of marketing job the industry needs.

Just when a plebiscite will take place depends on the speed with which the redraft, and the study of the procedures and powers of the Act can be completed. The Hog Marketing Committee will work closely with the Provincial Government in all phases of this study.

The various member organizations involved in the campaign for a Marketing Board in Alberta, particularly the FUA and the AFA, will reconsider the principle of marketing boards at their annual meetings; particularly in the light of the educational program which has been conducted in the province. By that time it is hoped that preliminary steps can have been taken to bring about the kind of central marketing agency which the Alberta hog industry so desperately needs.

DISASTER PLAN WAS 'REALISTIC'

KILLAM — The Disaster Plan Exercise at the Killam Hospital on Monday was, in the words of an R. M. O. official, "The best that has been put on so far". In the eyes of this press observer it was, in fact, so realistic that even the hospital staff got excited. The make-up division did such a realistic job on the "Casualties" that the patients themselves were ready to give up and submit to surgery immediately.

Further details, with pictures will appear in the next edition.

Recent advertisements in this paper have been attempting to seek out people to nominate worthy and deserving young Canadians for Junior Awards which are offered annually by Calgary Power Company. If you know of some deserving young citizen who has performed an act of mercy, bravery, or accomplished some other achievement of merit, why not decide to nominate him or her now. Just tell the story of the achievement and send it in, along with your own name, to the Editor of this paper.

As an example of the type of achievement which may win an award, we give you an account of one such instance:

On a warm summer day in 1962 Jack Pleckaitis of Jasper Place was enjoying a school outing with his friends at Cooking Lake, just east of Edmonton. After a fast and furious game of baseball, Jack and his school friends decided to cool off and take a dip in the Lake. Jack had just learned to swim a month or so before and was anything but sure of himself in the water. All of a sudden he heard a cry for help. Looking up he noticed that his schoolmate, Margaret Barron was in serious trouble. She was out of her depth in the water. Jack plunged into the water and pulled her to shore. Margaret had fallen into a hole that had been trenched out for boats to come in to dock. The warning signs had been blown down by a high wind. This heroic act won Jack a Junior Citizen of the Year Award.

There are many such deeds of merit, many contributions to community and to family made by young Albertans. For just such reasons as this, Calgary Power and the editors of Alberta's weekly newspapers felt that there was a great need to give recognition to worthy young Albertans who have performed acts of merit or courage. It is a way of counteracting the stories we read about the small minority of teenagers who have "gone off the rails". The Alberta Junior Citizen Award program is designed to draw deserved attention to the thousands of fine responsible young people of the province who are such a large part of our Alberta heritage.

This year these Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Awards have been extended to include groups, as well as individuals. Special awards will be made to organized groups (scouts, guides, church groups, 4-H, etc) as well as any group of young people between 6 and 16 who have performed some act of merit or courage together.

Through letters and phone calls to the weekly newspaper editors by persons who know of worthy young people they wish to nominate, Calgary Power has been able to carry out this program for 3 consecutive years.

Protection Of Wildlife!

A warning and a plea against handling any form of wildlife found apparently abandoned, has been issued to the public this week by the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Alberta Department of Lands and Forests. Officials emphasize that they will strictly enforce Section 7 of the Alberta Game Act that reads:

"Unless authorized by a license or permit issued pursuant to this Act or The Fur Farms Act or regulations thereunder no person shall pick up, handle, possess or transport any big game, game bird or fur bearing animal, or in any way disturb the young thereof; keep in captivity any big game, game bird or fur bearing animal".

Game officials said every spring season brings its rash of well intentioned scavengers who cart home from the woods, nestling birds, deer fawns, moose calves, bear cubs and lynx kittens. All of the passionate cooing, fondling, nursing and training in the world is not going to mitigate the frightful offence thus comitted against a terrorized wild creature. Many of these forays into the animals' family affairs are conducted by people who are sincerely concerned about wildlife.

Officers of the Fish and Wildlife Service are required to enforce Section No. 7 of the Game Act with the same impartiality that they enforce other statutes. They do not relish hauling into court misguided wildlife philanthropists, because public misunderstanding of nature's affairs weighs heavily in favor of the defendent. The truly conscientious officer is thereby represented as an unfeeling monster, deprived of common human sympathy. But, his duties include the enforcement of the laws designed with scientific precision, in the total interest of these important natural resources.

Alberta citizens are constantly admonished to drive carefully on highways and spare their roadside neighbors; they should do no less for their wildlife friend. "Walk carefully in the woods and neither disturb nor molest its inhabitants." The trust and curiosity that we imagine we see in the eyes of young wildlings is the innocence of children. Do not allow it to encourage heartless deprivation, wanton capture, and a grubby domestic destiny for creatures that are glorious only in freedom. Leave young wild animals and birds in the woods where they belong.

"In the spring," runs the poem, "the young man's fancy." So, often in his driving, cautions the Canadian Highway Safety Council, and fancy driving by any man young or old, is something to flee from. Get out of the way of the "fancy" driver; he's a death-dealing menace.

According to the Letter-Review, Saskatchewan's former socialist government gave $15,000 to the Farmers Union for the purpose of promoting their scheme of compulsory pool marketing of hogs. A committee opposing this asked for $8,000 to make possible a fight against the proposal. The application for help was turned down. This might be expected in these days of steady encroachment on the freedom of the farmer. The minister of co-operatives said that the application can be reconsidered, but hops deferred doesn't help the farmer who wants to raise and market his own hogs.

The U. S. Supreme Court has cleared the way for the U. S. railroads to eliminate 33,000 firemen's jobs on diesel locomotives. Firemen on diesel engines are just as useful as if they had buggy whips to spur the train along its steel rails.

In spite of the fact that many citizens in Canada believe that this country has achieved full independence, the opposite was demonstrated recently when some of the newspapers in Toronto were unable to come to an agreement with the typographical union because consent to do so was withheld by the headquarters of the so-called international union in Indiana, who are endeavoring to maintain control over computer operators in Canadian newspapers.

The Flag

Parliament is facing a long and acrimonious debate on the flag. It could drag on for weeks. It appears it will be bitter and emotional.

If members of Parliament dedicated to maintaining the Red Ensign, carry out their threats to mount a filibuster, then the House of Commons will see the discussion continuing well into July. The government can resort to closure to end such a filibuster, but undoubtedly would refrain from doing so after the experience of the last Liberal Government with closure on the pipeline filibuster.

The government has it within its power to extend the hours of sitting in the House by a majority vote. It could, if necessary, have the House sitting all night and day to wear down the opponents of a distinctive flag. Indications are that in the end the resolution for a distinctive flag will carry and the Liberal minority Government will not go down to defeat on this issue.

Prime Minister Pearson would like to see the distinctive flag design approved by Parliament in time to have the new flag flying from the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill by July 1st, Dominion Day. This may be possible, but to by no means assured.

The design proposed to Parliament by the Government consists of a white flat with three large maple leaves as the central motif. It has azure blue vertical bars at the fly & staff. This is the design that Prime Minister Pearson favored.

The flag motion before the House also proposed to retain the Union Jack to be flown in Canada as the symbol of Canadian membership in the Commonwealth of Nations and of Canada's allegiance to the Crown. The second motion, before the House will officially authorize O Canada as the national anthem. It also requires that God Save The Queen be recognized as the Royal anthem in Canada.

Prime Minister Pearson, by introducing a combined resolution, has aroused strong opposition from the French Canadians in the opposition. They argue that they cannot vote for the distinctive flag proposal without agreeing to have the Union Jack continue to be flown also as a symbol of Canadian membership in the Commonwealth and of Canada's allegiance to the Crown. This they do not like.

Opposition members from Quebec in the Conservative group are also prepared to take a strong stand against the "package" resolution. There may be attempts to amend it to delete the reference to the Union Jack. But Mr. Pearson wants it made clear that in accepting the distinctive flag for Canada we are not rejecting the Union Jack. There will be a hard fight on this point.

The same applies to the resolution recognizing O Canada as the official national anthem. French Canadians on the opposition side object to the same resolution recognizing "God Save The Queen" as the Royl Anthem in Canada.

The Government's flag design has been worked out by an informal government committee studying the various designs and determining, in the light of the evolution of Canada's armorial bearings, what would be a correct flag for this country. Experts on heraldry working with the committee have pointed out that Canada's official colours are red and white.

In 1868 the new provinces of Ontario and Quebec were assigned by royal warrant, armorial bearings that showed gold maple leaves on a green background in the case of Ontario. The province of Quebec's armorial bearings contained a shield with green maple leaves on a gold background.

Consequently 96 years ago the 3 maple leaves conjoined on a single stam were given official recognition and legal status as distinctly Canadian. They were granted heraldic recognition as symbolic of Canada. However it was not until November 1921 that Canada as a nation was assigned by royal proclamation armorial bearings which included a white shield with three red maple leaves. This design was approved by heraldic experts because it contained the official colors red and white.

It is an interesting footnote to history that when the armorial bearings were formally adopted by Canada, Prime Minister Borden having no regard for heraldry, expressed a dislike for the red maple leaves. He suggested the leaves should be green as depicting Canada as a youthful country rather than red which were a sign of maturity. At the insistence of the then Prime Minister the armorial bearings appeared with green maple leaves instead of the proper red leaves. But by 1956 this had been corrected.

Her majest / Queen Elizabeth incorporated the red leaves on a white background as part of her personal flag. This sovereign's flag has been formally adopted and is flown when Her Majesty visits Canada. This was registered officially in 1962.

Consequently there is ample historical evidence that the three red maple leaves on white background should provide the design for the official national flag of Canada. However, the informal committee predecessor of these designs for submission to the Liberal caucus and later to the House.

The first design consisted of a white field with the three red maple leaves. The second design had blue bars at the fly and mast, symbolic of Canada's motto "A Mari Usque Ad Mare" (from sea to sea). The third design was identical to the new postage stamp. It had three red maple leaves on a pale blue field.

The Liberal caucus and later the cabinet rejected the flag with the pale blue field. Debate concentrated on the white flag with three red maple leaves with and without the blue vertical bars. The Prime Minister preferred the blue bars on the flag as he argued it framed the maple leaves and gave strength to the flag.

Experts on heraldry contended the flag to be absolutely proper should have no blue bars. But they conceded that with the blue bars it carried what was formally adopted by Canada. Prime Minister Borden having no regard for heraldry, expressed a dislike for the red maple leaves. He suggested the leaves should be green as depicting Canada as a youthful country rather than red which were a sign of maturity. At the insistence of the then Prime Minister the armorial bearings appeared with green maple leaves instead of the proper red leaves. But by 1956 this had been corrected.

Her majest / Queen Elizabeth incorporated the red leaves on a white background as part of her personal flag. This sovereign's flag has been formally adopted and is flown when Her Majesty visits Canada. This was registered officially in 1962.

Consequently there is ample historical evidence that the three red maple leaves on white background should provide the design for the official national flag of Canada. However, the informal committee predecessor of these designs for submission to the Liberal caucus and later to the House.

30 YEARS AGO

(From the Press of June 7, 1934)

A joint meeting of the Sedgewick School Board, Teachers, and Committee of the WI. was held in Mr. Lenk's office to decide whether a School Festival should be held next spring. It was unanimously approved.

Tommy Shepard of Daysland had the misfortune to fall and break a bone in his leg just above the ankle. He was playing ball Tuesday evening and was removed to the hospital where Dr. Shirreffs attended him.

The three ster truck from the Lougheed Service Station went out of control Sat. evening owing to a faulty steering gear. The truck ran into a ditch with two feet of water near Obaton. It was hauling a load of oil from Camrose. The truck had to be unloaded and was towed back to Lougheed for repairs.

The Killam baseball team went to Camrose on Sunday and defeated the Camrose team 2 to 1.

20 YEARS AGO

(From the Press of June 4, 1944)

It was a big day for participants and spectators at the annual May 24 sports in Lougheed. Twenty-one entries were listed in ball tournaments providing real action and fun. Owing to cases of Scarlet Fever in town the Sedgewick Public School has been closed and all public gatherings are forbidden. Parents are warned to take every precaution.

Mr. S. G. Walker had 2 steers less than 15 months old, shipped by Fed. Co-op, which sold for 12 cents per pound and netted him $194.37. Let's all go farming.

The 36th annual convention of the Sedgewick Constituency of Alberta Liberal met in Memorial Hall, Strome, on May 26th with 43 members from various points.

10 YEARS AGO

(From the Press of June 8, 1954)

Marilyn Lukens of Hardisty competed in the Alberta Musical Festival in Edmonton on May 22. She was second in her class with a mark of 86, winning high acclaim from the adjudicator.

The big sport around Strome this spring is horseshoes. There are a couple of pegs next to the Co-op and every odd times is pitching the shoes.

Hardisty's first car bingo was some what spoiled by the weather and muddy roads, but a surprisingly large crowd attended. The car was won by Mrs. Ernie Rombough of Alliance.

B of M Predicts Increase Of One-Third In National Product By '70

MONTREAL, MAY 29 — A Canadian gross national product of at least 857 billion, roughly one-third higher than in 1963, and a population of 21.5 million by 1970 are estimated by the Bank of Montreal in its Business Review for May, just issued.

The B of M says, "It seems quite reasonable to suggest that the Canadian economy is capable of sustaining" an annual rate of growth of 4.1 per cent, the post-war trend. "Indeed, in the light of the many favorable factors which appear to be in the offing . . . the actual rate of growth achieved between now and 1970 may well exceed by a substantial margin the average rate experienced so far in the post-war period," the bank states.

Those factors are listed as "a higher rate of family formation, a resurgence of capital investment, continued strength of external demand for Canadian products and the cumulative effects of automation & technological change."

POPULATION CHANGES

The B of M's estimate of a population of 21.5 million by 1970, takes into account a number of changes in the composition of the population. While immigration has dropped to about 90,000 a year, from the peak of 282,000 in 1957, the birth rate will rise later in the decade. There will also be a slight decline in death rates.

Changes in the age distribution of the population may have a greater economic impact than the moderate rate of growth would imply, the bank says. The 15 to 24 age groups are expected to grow fastest, with significant gains for the growth in the size of the labor force, and the demand for accommodation and consumer goods.

There will be only a moderate increase in the 25 to 64 age groups, while the numbers in the 65 to 84 groups should increase much more rapidly. Thus a labor force of some 7.9 million can be expected by 1970, an increase of about 170,000 each year, compared with an average annual increase of only 120,000 since 1957.

G.N.P. HIGHER

A labor force of this size could be expected to produce a gross national product in 1970 well above the figure indicated by a simple projection of the post-war trend, the B of M says.

However, "the average number of hours worked per week may fall & in consequence the rise in output per employed person may tend to flatten out." Furthermore, in the light of recent experience, it may not be realistic to assume an average rate of unemployment much below that being experienced at present."

Nevertheless, the B of M says that even if average unemployment is higher than today's rates, realization of the other factors in the estimate would place the growth of total output above the post-war trend.

No Oil For Wheat!

Trade and Commerce Minister Sharp has denied that any negotiations are being carried on between Canada and the USSR under which this country would accept Russian oil for Canadian wheat. Such a proposal was put forward as a tentative suggestion by Soviet officials during informal discussions with Canadian businessmen. As far as the Canadian Government is concerned it is not official.

Down Memory's Lane

In a little town near the district in which lived the two families of whom I am writing, there lived a man who made his living by travelling through the country selling fuel oil. One day he decided the Calgary district would be a good place to ply his trade, so, after going there and sizing up the possibilities, he moved his family there and started out one spring morning to sell oil to some of the farmers around the city.

Just off the highway he noticed what he figured was a real prosperous looking farmstead. The neat little cottage, the red barns and implement shed and garage, surrounded by a grove of young trees, really had a well-to-do appearance. So Ben (the dealer) drove up to the gate. As he jumped out to open the gate, he noticed a man sitting on the ground in the shade of his tractor. The man had been quite sick, and, to Ron, really looked bad. However the man was evidently so sick he didn't notice Ron until he was quite close and spoke to him.

"What's the trouble, neighbor? Need some help?" asked Ron.

The man looked up startled, but before he could speak, Ron said, "Well, of all people. If it isn't Bert Jackson." How come you're here?"

After the shock of being discovered wore off a bit, Bert, getting into Ron's car, told the following story.

"I guess you know Ron, of the life I led back home with Stella," he began. "Everyone knew what a nagger Stella was, and I'm not blaming her altogether either. I probably provoked her sometimes too. But it got to the place where I'd rather sleep in the hayloft than to go in the house after the chores were done. Of course I never did, but the urge was there constantly. Finally I decided life was too short to live like that. I wasn't an old man, just 38, so I conceived the plan of making believe I was going to India, and pulled out."

After a pause Ron said, "Well no Bert. No one can blame you for leaving your nagging wife and family under those circumstances. But uh, did you break up another man's home in doing it?"

"Listen Ron," said Bert. "I've thought about it hundreds of times since, and felt sorry for Joe, but it or not. But a person often does things under extreme pressure that maybe if he had taken time to really weigh the all-round results, he would never do. But it's too late now to do anything about it," he finished

"No, it's not too late Bert," said Ron. "At least not too late to redeem yourself a little by helping poor old Joe out financially. Looks like you could too from the looks of the setup you have here. Joe still has practically nothing. And from what I've heard Joe's youngest Lad developed ear trouble that first winter after you and Lily pulled out, which resulted in the boy being Stone-deaf Joe had to take the little fellow out with him every day no matter what the weather was like, while he did chores, hauled in feed, etc. Then the boy's sore started to ache day after day until Joe finally took him to the doctor. But it was too late, and now the little guy can't hear a sound."

"I guess I'm to blame for that," said Bert. "However, come on into the house and meet Lily and our twin daughters, and have dinner with us. It is near noon now, and you need to eat somewhere." As an afterthought, Bert added, "Ron don't tell Lily about the boy, ok?"

As they drove up into the yard Ron noticed the neat yard, the freshly painted house and picket fence, the big red barn and modern henhouse, and thought, he sure has some old Bert, everything he touches seems to turn out good. It all added up to the fact that here lived a hard working man, a man whom fortune seemed to always favor.

Seeing Ron's look of admiration, Bert said, "Seems that even though I am doing a shameful thing in living with another man's wife, and raising another family, I am having bumper crops which has enabled me to build up a pretty nice place"

"Yeah," agreed Ron. "But right down in your heart Bert, are you truly happy?"

Bert hung his head as if he wanted to change the subject, and getting out of his car, he said, "Well, come on in supper, and have a bite to eat and see the girls."

Just then the door opened and there stood Lily in a clean house dress and frilly apron. Ron said to his wife afterward that he wouldn't have known Lily, she looked so happy and unlike when she lived with Joe. She was so clean and neat-looking. But when she recognized Ron, she would have gone back into the house but Bert said, "It's O. K. honey. He knows all about us now, is dinner ready?"

The men talked of crops, price of cattle, etc., setting in the cool, neat living room, while Lily finished preparing a real hearty farmer's dinner (not lunch, even though it was noon) as a farmer must have his three hearty meals every day.

Suddenly the door opened and in came two of the cutest wee girls, in play-suits, look dressed alike. Ron figured them to be about 2 1/2, or 3 years old. Bert called the girls over to the front room, and putting his arms around each of them, told them to say hello to Ron. When Ron arrived home that evening he told his wife that those two wee girls were the most polite and "biddable" wee children one could ever hope to meet in this day and age.

After a delicious dinner Ron said he'd better be going along. But Bert and Ron a good-sized order for oil, and, after Ron had thanked both Bert & Lily for a very interesting visit and good dinner, he drove away.

Report From Parliament Hill

I think probably the most important achievement of the government so far during the current session of Parliament is the success of Prime Minister Pearson in winning the support of all groupings for a national contributory pension scheme.

But maybe in the long-run the way in which he managed to do this will prove even more important, as the inauguration of a new openness in government activities.

It's probably true to say that the voting public has never been treated with more candid information about the inter-government discussions than it was during the Great Pension debate between the federal and provincial governments during the last few months.

As the Prime Minister said in announcing the successful conclusion of that debate in the House of Commons:

"We could of course, have done many of the work confidentially and secretely in the back room. (But) more open methods are better. They enable the public opinion to be better informed on the basis of specifics rather than generalities, and public opinion to be brought more fully to bear on the eventual result."

This government came to office just over a year ago with a three-point pension program. We thought that the basic old age pension paid to everyone at age 70 out of the revenues should be raised to $75 per month. This of course was done.

We also wanted to ensure that this pension could be available from age 65, on a graduated-payment basis, for those who need it before age 70. That is, anyone who wants to take the pension at 65 could do so, but it would be slightly reduced.

Thirdly, we believed that there should be available, besides the flat-rate pension, a contributory pension related to earnings and big enough to provide a reasonable minimum of security for all Canadians in their declining years. And we wanted to have this minimum provided as soon as possible.

Since pensions are a field of jurisdiction shared by federal and provincial governments under the constitution, we knew the only way to achieve a national standard of pensions was through agreement with the provinces. We decided that the best way to make progress was to provide a definite basis for discussion. We did that last July, and the public discussion went on until the Prime Minister announced final agreement in late April.

The Prime Minister has since told the Commons that the government hopes to proceed at this session of Parliament with the pension legislation.

First, though, we've got to get an amendment to the constitution so that we can include survivor benefits. This will mean that a man's pension can be paid to his widow for example.

It will take ten years for the contributory plan to reach its top level of payments. These will then amount to roughly a quarter of a person's average annual income, to a maximum income of $6000, up to time of his retirement.

This means that once the plan has been operating for ten years, a person earning $4000 a year will get a pension of $1000 a year at the age of 65, if he retires. Anybody making $6000 a year or more would get $1250, plus in both cases the flat-rate pension.

Because obviously the pay-out period would be longer, the flat-rate pension would be paid at a reduced rate to a person taking it before 70. It would be $81 a month at age 65, for example, and range upward to $75 a month if taken at age 70.

Contribution rates would be designed so that the average rate is 1 1/2 percent of earnings each, for employer and employee, up to the maximum earning level of $6000. This can be achieved by exempting the first $600 a year of income and collecting about 1.5 percent on earnings over that level, up to $6000.

For example, a person earning $4000 a year would pay a premium of $61.20 annually. His boss would match this. A self-employed person earning $6000 a year would pay an annual premium of $122.40.

For anyone earning $6000 a year or more, the premium would be $79. 20 a year, matched by his employer, or twice that for the self-employed.

Coverage would be compulsory for employees with salaries of over $600 a year and for self employed people with earnings over $1000 a year.

As Mr Pearson said in the Commons:

"I believe this is a real achievement which would not have been possible so soon, and might not have been possible at all, if we had not been prepared to bring public opinion to bear on concrete proposals, instead of sitting back talking privately to provinces about something that might be done in the future."

If any reader has any further questions about the pension plan and its proposed benefits, please feel free to write to me at the House of Commons in Ottawa. We'll see that you get the answers. After all, that is what we are here for, to serve the people.

IN OUR DREAMS

Do you indulge occasionally in the dream of coming into a lot of money? Most people do. It's something like taking dope; you're high, wide and dreamy while you're at it, but the let - down is jolting.

The bored housewife, for example, crunched over her ironing board, envisions herself in bikini suit on a deck chair on a yacht in the Mediterranean, sipping a long, cold drink. Tanned and handsome, Count Serge Popoff takes her hand and, devouring her with his eyes, leans forward to kiss it.

Just as she is trailing right up to the shoulder from the cool, firm impact of the count's lips on her mitt, she looks down and discovers that the cool, firm lips have suddenly become the cold, runny nose of her daughter, who is wiping it on the back of mummy's hand.

Maybe the factory hand busy all day putting square pegs in round holes, begins toying with what he'll be doing if his overpaitale tirkat comes through. In his minde's eye, he is lolling on his balcony in Acapulco's poshest hotel, overlooking the swimming-pool, while a beautiful Spanish job with a rose in her hair whispers gentle stuff in his ear.

It's a dangerous shock to his system when suddenly he realizes that the face so near his own is not the Spanish beauty, but the straw boss, and the tender murmurs have become a mouse-like hollow that wants to know "what the hell you're gawping at?"

Even the Canadian farmer, a solid fellow most of the time, has his mooni moments. Like when he starts dreaming that he had a 1,000 head of cattle, instead of twenty, and he sold them at forty cents a pound, instead of eighteen. Clear as crystal, he can see himself and Maw heading down the highway in the new Cadillac.

It does him no good at all to wake up and find that the Cadillac has been transformed into a tractor, and he's bending straight for the stone fence.

For years, I've had these dreams: riding in a rickshs in Rangoon, tossing silver dollars to the natives; dropping in on Princess Margaret and Tony for a cocktail; flying to Rio for carnival time. But lately, they have solidified into one recurrent dream which is more like an obsession. It comes almost nightly at this time of year.

In the dream, my wife says, "When are you going to get those storm windows off, hey, you say? Intention of cutting the lawn this year, what do you intend to do about that feed situation?"

I just tell her to shut up. This is how I know it's a dream. Then I reach out nonchalantly, push the ball-button beside my chair. A man appears and asks respectfully, "Yes, sir?"

I tell him. "John, get those storm windows off. And I don't mean tomorrow. The grass needs cutting, and do something about propping up the fence. Now, get cracking."

He says, "Right away, sir." I lean back, light a dollar cigar, and splash a little more soda into my brandy. That's the dream, in essence. There are variations on it, depending on someone. Sometimes I tell John to shovel the walk, and I splash a little more brandy into my soda, but it's the same drama.

You can have your yachts, your Acapulco balconies, and your Cadillacs. Just give me John.

NO LADIES ALLOWED!

Faces were red around Ottawa's posh Rideau Club the other day as two Liberal lady members of Parliament appeared in response to a formal invitation from External Affairs Minister Martin to attend an official luncheon for UN Secretary General U. Thant. Somebody in Mr. Martin's office had overlooked the rigid rule in the exclusive Club that women are not allowed in the second floor sanctum until after 4.30 p.m. There is a dining room for men and women on the main floor. The dining room and lounge on the second floor is reserved for men during the luncheon period. Club officials asked them please to leave the second floor and they did so smiling over Mr. Martin's rueful comment. Said he: "Here I am fighting for the status of women at the UN and this has to happen."

Frances Spiller Wed To Andy Blashyn

St. Joseph's Catholic Church, decorated with bouquets of gladiola, was the scene of the lovely double-ring wedding ceremony of Miss Frances Irene Spiller and Mr. Andy Joe Blashyn. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Spiller of Killam and the groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Blashyn of Calgary. The nuptial mass was celebrated on Saturday, May 16th, 1964 at 11:00 A.M. by Fr. M. E. McCarthy. Mrs. R. C Kisser played the wedding march and two of the sisters of the bride, Darise and Rita, sang at intervals throughout the ceremonies

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white applique organza with lily-point sleeves. A chapel-length veil held in place by a cluster of white roses, comprised her headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of sweetheart roses.

The bride was attended by her sister Joanne of Killam, and Miss Beryl Davidson of Calgary. They were identical butterup organza waltz-length gowns with matching headpiece and white accessories. Their bouquets consisted of yellow and white mums.

The groom's attendants were Mr. Jack Soppit and Mr. William Hawlett both of Calgary. Ushers were brothers of the bride.

The mother of the bride chose a two-piece blue sunfit complemented by white accessories and a corsage of pink roses and white baby mums. The mother of the groom chose a light chocolate brocade dress with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses and white mums.

Following a reception held in the parish hall with Mr. Edwin Krytich of Strome as M.C., a toast to the bride was given by Fr. McCarthy to which the groom responded. Guests from out of town were from, Edmonton, St. Albert, Calgary, Camrose, Red Deer and Saskatoon.

For travelling the bride wore a two-piece wool crepe suit in a soft blue shade with white accessories, and a matching corsage. After a honeymoon in San Francisco the happy couple will return to make their home in Calgary.

cer has made it clear that he and other Conservatives in the Province of Quebec could have no part of it. Mr. Diefenbaker in support of the Red Ensign against a distinctive Canadian flag.

Members of the New Democratic Party will practically all go along with the idea of a distinctive new flag. So will members of the Social Credit Party and the Creditistes on the opposition side of the House. Only two or three Liberals will vote against a distinctive flag.

But the question is, when will it come to a vote? Dedicated supporters of the Red Ensign who are realize that it is to be replaced by the proposed new flag, with the Union Jack also to be flown on special occasions, are prepared to dig in, wrap themselves in the "red duster" and go down with all verbal guns blazing. It should be quite a battle

Practice Exercise Proves Hospitals Ready

HELP ME! HELP ME!! — Mrs. Jimmie Grant puts on a realistic performance of "hysterics" as she is guided into Killam Hospital by Mr. Ponto and Mr. Bill Larson. A grim reminder that it can happen to you. — C. P. Photo.

DISASTER EXERCISES SUCCESSFUL
(An Editorial)

Ambulances, station wagons, trucks, backing up to the emergency entrance and emitting accident victims with gashed heads, bleeding arms and chests, and severe burns; stretcher bearers moving quickly, telephones ringing, Doctors being paged. This was the scene around two of our local hospitals last week.

Sound like an emergency? It was! Not a real one, thank goodness, just a practice exercise to test the hospitals and their staffs and make them prove they can handle an emergency if one ever occurs.

Volunteer accident victims were prepared in advance by a special group of "make-up artists'. These people would take a healthy, vigorous, volunteer and come up with a accident victim that looked so real you wondered if he wasn't past any assistance the hospital could give. Each day there were twenty of these volunteers 'made up' with bad burns, punctured ribs, gashed heads, and big purple bruises. Some were prompted to behave hysterically just as they might in the real situation.

We watched both exercises, the one at Killam General Hospital on Monday and the second on Wednesday at Providence Hospital in Daysland.

The practice emergency exercise was required by the Provincial Government to make the hospitals and their personnel prove they can handle a large number of accident victims if something like the Lamont School Bus — Train crash were to happen in this area.

To our inexperienced eye, both hospitals did an admirable job. There were, no doubt, a few points which the experts (who were sent from the city to judge) found that needed to be improved. But on the whole both hospitals proved that they are ready if anything should happen that causes a large number of injuries.

All residents of these two districts can be proud in knowing that their hospital is staffed and equipped to give immediate assistance should they, or anyone else every need it.

Disaster Plan Insures Success

A successful Disaster Exercise was carried out at the Killam Hospital Complex with the co-operation of the Emergency Measures group from the Dept. of Public Health and the local co-ordinators, Mr. George Pottifer and Mr. Brian Lee.

Community planning is an essential part of successful response to major disasters. A hospital cannot do its best job of saving lives unless the community has established a practical disaster plan for other agencies, such as police, civil defense, fire departments, communications, preferrably from trained personnel such as the Cadet Corps.

A hospital disaster plan is not complete until it has been integrated with an over-all community disaster plan.

The community participation was excellent; all outside communications, traffic control, supplementary personnel, stretcher bearers, ambulance and transportation service, identification of authorized personnel, policing, entrance gating was carried out by a voluntary community group from Killam, Sedgewick and Strome and surrounding areas.

Stark reality was brought home by the very real looking casualties and harassed relatives

Once inside hospital doors, the hospital plan was brought into play as the casualties were brought in to the sorting area. They were examined by the doctor, assigned to a particular area and immediately transferred for emergency treatment.

The identification procedures, by the admitting group, the sorting personnel, the communications by the Sedgewick Cadets, policing and external traffic control and the manner in which stretcher bearers handled the casualties were especially commended in the "critique" period following the exercise.

Note: Periodic Review of the exercise must be considered and carried out to ensure the rapid, efficient transportation of casualties and care in hospital should a real disaster fall on the community.

1 Killed, 3 Injured In Highway Smash-up

Three cars and a tractor were involved in a tragic highway smash-up at Sedgewick Saturday, resulting in the death of Sheila Marie Cameron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Cameron of Bellshill, and serious injuries to three others.

Injured were April Rastly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. "Mike" Rastly of Sedgewick; Hogue Eriksen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Godmen Eriksen of Sedgewick; and Joe Brewer of Lougheed.

Mr. Brewer is in Killam Hospital suffering broken ribs, broken nose and multiple bruises and cuts. Hogue suffered head injuries and bruises. April Rastly was removed to the University Hospital after treatment in Killam Hospital. She sustained two broken legs, broken ankle and teeth, plus severe bruises and cuts.

Both cars, driven by Roger Eriksen and Joe Brewer were demolished while the other two escaped serious damage, as did the drivers, as well as the tractor and driver.

R. C. M. P. are investigating, and an inquest will be held.

Stampede Success At Hardisty

HARDISTY — The finest parade in its history, kicked off the Annual Stampede last Friday, setting the tempo for another successful event. Led by the Army Band from Wainwright, the parade stretched out for a half mile, featuring colorful floats and cars, ponies and bicycles.

Crowds of people from over a large area flocked to the grounds to witness the exciting events of the Rodeo, enjoy the midway.

Competition was keen in the Rodeo events and performances were keen throughout the two days.

An added event this year was the recognition of the old-time bronc riders, who were special guests of the Association. Another popular feature was the music and entertainment of the Rocky Mountain Boys and Bunk Wells. The Chuckwagon races were thrilling to the large crowds as were the Chariot races, mounted square dancers and the bull fighters.

Calm Efficiency First Requirement

(By Delores Dalnas)

DAYSLAND — The Disaster Plan of the Providence Hospital, Dayasland, was exercised on June 3rd, 1964. Registration of the visitors who came as observers from several hospitals in the district, took place at 10 a.m. in the basement of Our Lady of the Prairies Church. This was followed by refreshments served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the hospital.

Mr. Douglas Wold, E. M. O. Co-ordinator of Dayaland, as chairman for the day, opened the Exercise by welcoming the EMO representatives who had come to assist, as well as the visitors. He acknowledged especially Col. McMedro of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps in Edmonton. He then called on Rev. A. M. McNeil to ask God's blessing n the work being undertaken in the Exercise. Rev. McNeil likened the a act of preparedness to the Mercy our Lord urged us to practice.

Mr. Wold then introduced and welcomed the group and outlined the need for a Community Disaster Plan. He then called on Rev. Dr. Duncan to thanked everyone for taking part

Mr. A. H. Mitchell, EMO Officer in charge of Northern Zone was introduced and spoke of the roll the community in any disaster, urging that interest be stimulated to have the community prepared.

Mr. W. P. Bullock, Director of the E. M. Welfare Branch spoke of the roll of his group, and urged that someone be sent to take the course of Welfare Chief at Edmonton. The services here are feeding, clothing, shelter, registration and persons' counselling.

Sister M. Desmond gave an outline of the Disaster Plan of the hospital and the organizations involved. Elks, Reg. Nurses and Ladies, Canadian Legion, W. A., The Internal & external traffic control and security measures which go into effect were then described, as well as the roll of various individuals in meeting a disaster with calm efficiency.

Dr. Duncan, EMO Director explained the ten steps that have been thought necessary in setting up a Municipal Disaster Plan, its purpose and its approval by EMO. Once the plan has been approved the hospital would receive supplies to be stored locally to help care for casualties.

At the noon recess a delicious meal was served to the visitors and the general public.

School Explosion

The notice of the disaster — an explosion at the high school involving 20 casualties, was received at 1:15 p.m. The doctors and nursing staff, as well as the auxiliary helpers, stretcher bearers, volunteer nurses, nursing aids and clerks took positions in readiness to receive "casualties" who began arriving in a few minutes. The casualty simulators of the EMO had done a fine job and impressed even the doctors with the realistic injuries provided. The Exercise went off very well, though the sorting area was found to be rather small for the number of people using it. However, there is little that can be done here with the facilities available.

After the Exercise was officially announcedas being over the observers were asked to return to the basement of the church to view the casualties. Mr. J. Tomeh and members produced and spoke of the roll the community in any disaster, urging that interest be stimulated to have the community prepared.

Down Memory's Lane

When Ken thought of the different atmosphere in Bert's present home, to the life he had had with Stella, he thought: Oh well, a person can't blame the poor guy after all. But it is too bad he had to brunt up his brother-in-law's home to find peace and happiness.
The years sped by all too quickly. Bert's two sons back home to whom he had left almost everything, even the new car, were young men now. But what a wreck they had made of everything. That old aggie "Easy come, easy go" proved all too true with them. For one thing they thought they needed help to harvest their crops, so hired young lads from town who knew next to nothing about farming. Sometimes right in the middle of harvest when each hour counted and when all the other farmers were working all day every day from sunup to dark trying to get the crops off before the good weather broke, the Jackass boys & their hired help would work a few hours, maybe, then decide to call it a day, turn their horses to pasture and drive into town for supplies, or some other entertainment. This sort of carrying-on could lead only to one thing—ruin.
Therefore it didn't take many years until the beautiful Jackass place, the show-piece of the whole country once, started to go to the dogs. The house needed paint, fences which had been the pride of Bert's heart were being neglected until they looked like a bag of bones. The boys sold those horses before they became too bad, as they needed cash. Their buildings began to depart, the barn and implement shed doors hanging on one hinge. Even the whole place took on a heart-breaking sight to its former years.
Then the older boy married, and decided to live with his mother and sister. But of course that didn't last very long. In a few months another form quite some miles from the old home place, completely ignoring his mother and sister. Shortly after the older brother married, then left, the younger brother also married. But they decided to live with her folks, but work the home place by himself. However after about two years of this arrangement, they too rented another farm and started up on their own.
Thus the home place was deserted except for Mrs Jackson and Alice, now a young woman of 18. But what could they do to keep things going, just two women?
So Mrs. Jackson procured a mid elegged bachelor to run the farm & to board with them. Bill, the bachelor, really rented the land but consented to "live in" or in other words stay right there all the time. But poor old Bill didn't last very long—just the one season—as he told the neighbors, "No man on earth could please that woman!"
In time she heard of another bach ror whom she talked into taking over the place No tow was to board with Stella But like Bill, no matter what he did, or how he did it Stella grumbled and complained.
One morning Stella and Jim (the new man) got into a more than usual argument over some of the outside work, and without a second's warning, whack, she threw her cup of ten into Jim's face. Luckily the tea was just lukewarm. Equally as lucky Jim ducked. Stella across the face Stella immediately phoned the police "Police—a your man today," asked the sergeant "Jackson, Mrs Bert Jackson," answered Stell. "Oh yes," answered the sergeant. "I recall now, you are that woman who can't get along with any of the men." "I'd get along alright if I could get the right one," snapped Stella.
However the judge, knowing of Stella's vile temper of old times, fined Jim the minimum of $2.50, as after all it is against the law in Canada for a man to strike a woman, regardless of the provocation.
"If I had known it would cost me only $2.50 I'd have given her another slap for good measure," said Jim afterward.
